OTTAWA
J. O. PATENAUDE
PRINTER TO THE KING'S MOST EXCELLENT MAJESTY

Minister of Labour.

Sir,—I have the honour to submit the Twenty-second Annual Report on Labour Organization in Canada, being for the calendar year 1932. The volume was prepared in the Labour Intelligence Branch of the Department, and, like previous reports on the same subject, contains much information concerning the labour bodies with which the Canadian organized workers are identified, as well as giving statistics of organized labour in the Dominion.

I have the honour to be, sir,
Your obedient servant,

H. H. WARD,
Deputy Minister of Labour.

LABOUR ORGANIZATION IN CANADA

INTRODUCTION

Classes of Labour Organizations in Canada—Principal Types—Membership—Division by Industrial Trade Groups—Unions Having Large Memberships in Canada—Unemployed Workers' Organizations—Development of Trade Unionism—Labour in Politics —Canadian Labour Defense League—Workers' Educational Association of Ontario.

The present report is the Twenty-second Annual Report on Labour Organization in Canada, in a series which began with the report for the year 1911. The aim in the publication of these reports has been to give statistical and other information as to labour unions existing in Canada, federations and associated bodies of various kinds and the names and addresses of officers, business agents, etc. In all cases the data were secured from the organizations concerned. Information is also given as to organizations of workers other than unions, the labour press, trade union benefits, registration of trade unions and union labels, labour in politics and the labour movement throughout the world.

The monthly issues of the Labour Gezette contain information as to conventions of the various labour organizations and as to other union activities.

Unavoidable circumstances have prevented the issue of the present volume beyond th date when it would otherwise have appeared. On this account the names and addresses the presidents and secretaries of local unions in 1932 have been omitted, but Table 3 Chapter XVIII contains a list of all labour bodies with the names of the localities in wh each central organization has branches and also gives the name and location of e independent local body.

Labour organization in Canada falls into two classes: (1) local branches of internatio unions having membership in the United States and Canada; (2) unions whose membersh is wholly in Canada. The first class include unions with headquarters in the United States, most of these being affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. The Canadian branches of nearly all of these unions are affiliated with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada which, however, has also in affiliation a number of purely Canadian central organizations as well as local unions directly chartered by the Congress. The second-class, made up of unions whose membership is wholly in Canada, are grouped according to affiliation under: the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada; the All-Canadian Congress of Labour; the National Catholic Unions affiliated with the Federation of Catholic Workers; the Workers' Unity League of Canada; and various independent central bodies and local units.

The principal types of organization are the craft unions, including workmen in a single craft or a number of related crafts or trades, for instance bricklayers and stonemasons; and the industrial unions, which have members in the various occupations in a particular industry, for instance in coal mining. Some of the first class include several crafts with helpers and labourers so that they are quasi-industrial unions. There is also a type of organization which organizes workers in all industries under one general union, centrally controlled, usually with sub-divisions by industries and localities. In a later section of this chapter the development of the various types of organization in Canada is briefly outlined.

UNION MEMBERSHIP IN 1932

The figures published in this, the Twenty-second Annual Report on Labour Organization in Canada, covering the calendar year 1932, indicated that the industrial depression, which had such a detrimental effect during 1931, continued to retard the steady advance in the growth of the organized labour movement which was maintained in previous years. For the second succeeding year, the membership of the unions in the Dominion showed a loss, the net decrease being 26,968. By exempting their unemployed members from paying per capita tax for certain periods, a number of organizations have retained a considerable portion of their membership which otherwise would have added greatly to the loss shown.

The international craft union group, which consists of the Canadian members of 78 organizations, 4 less than in 1931, according to returns received in the Department has 1,813 branches in the Dominion, a decrease of 71, with a combined membership of 149,129, a loss of 39,090. The One Big Union reported 47 local units in Canada, a gain of 1, with 23,340 members, a loss of 920. The Industrial Workers of the World reported 8 branches, a gain of 3, with a membership of 3,618, an increase of 152. The group of Canadian central organizations, which numbers 29, an increase of 4, has 701 branches, a gain of 22, with a combined membership of 66,993, an increase of 9,644. There are 47 independent units, 10 more than in 1931, with a combined membership of 15,496, a gain of 3,847. The National Catholic group consists of 109 unions, a loss of 12, the membership as given by the Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada being 25,000, a loss of 151. A computation of these figures indicates that there were in Canada at the close of 1932 a total of 2,725 trade union branches, a loss of 47, with a combined reported and estimated membership of 283,576, a decrease as above stated, of 26,968. According to the 1931 census, trade unionists represent 2·7 per cent of the population; adding 99,054, the number of members comprised in the non-trade union associations, the organized wage-earners in the Dominion at the close of 1932, represented 3·6 per cent of the population.

The number of branches and the reported and estimated membership of the various classes of labour organizations operating in Canada at the close of 1932, with the number of members of each group affiliated, are indicated in the following statement.

| Classes of Labour Organizations | Number of Main Organizations | Local Branches | Memberships |

(a) Has one local union in San Francisco, California, U.S.A., with 372 members.
(b) Other affiliated industrial unions include furniture workers, boot and shoe workers, fur dressers, food workers fishermen, relief camp workers, domestic servants, cleaners and dyers, membership figures for which are not available.
(c) Membership for 1931, figures not supplied for 1932.
(d) During 1933 affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.
(e) Affiliated directly with the American Federation of Labor but not with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada.

The first report of the Department of Labour on Labour Organization in Canada was for the year 1911. The table following shows, for each year, the number of trade union branches in Canada, together with their combined memberships:—

| — | Branches | Membership | — | Branches | Membership |
| 1911 | 1,741 | 133,132 | 1922 | 2,512 | 276,621 |
| 1912 | 1,883 | 160,120 | 1923 | 2,487 | 278,092 |
| 1913 | 2,017 | 175,799 | 1924 | 2,429 | 260,643 |
| 1915 | 1,883 | 143,343 | 1926 | 2,515 | 274,604 |
| 1916 | 1,842 | 160,407 | 1927 | 2,604 | 290,282 |
| 1917 | 1,974 | 204,630 | 1928 | 2,653 | 300,602 |
| 1918 | 2,274 | 248,887 | 1929 | 2,778 | 319,476 |
| 1919 | 2,847 | 378,047 | 1930 | 2,809 | 322,449 |
| 1921 | 2,668 | 313,320 | 1932 | 2,725 | 283,576 |

The chart appearing on page 10, based on the above membership figures, indicates at a glance the fluctuations which have occurred in the standing of organized labour in the Dominion for the past twenty-two years, the period covered by these annual reports.

The figures for the membership of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada are 5,135 greater than that claimed by that organization, the explanation being that the respective affiliated bodies in reporting to the Department included all members who were in good standing, while the Congress only report the number of members for whom per capita tax had been received. Besides the affiliated membership of central organizations the Trades and Labour Congress has 46 directly chartered local unions with a combined membership of 4,812, which figure is included in the total membership of 127,264. The figures for the All-Canadian Congress indicate an affiliated membership of central bodies of 46,283, which with the membership of 4,073 comprised in the 41 directly chartered local unions gives a total of 50,356 members. The re-affiliation of the One Big Union accounts for the large increase as compared with 1931.

UNION MEMBERSHIP BY INDUSTRIAL AND TRADE GROUPS

The accompanying table and chart show the division of union membership among the various industries and trade groups. The membership of each central body is included in the trade group in which most of its members are employed. For instance the membership of the various carpenters' unions are classified under building trades. The membership of each central body is given in Table 1 and 1A, in the section on statistics.

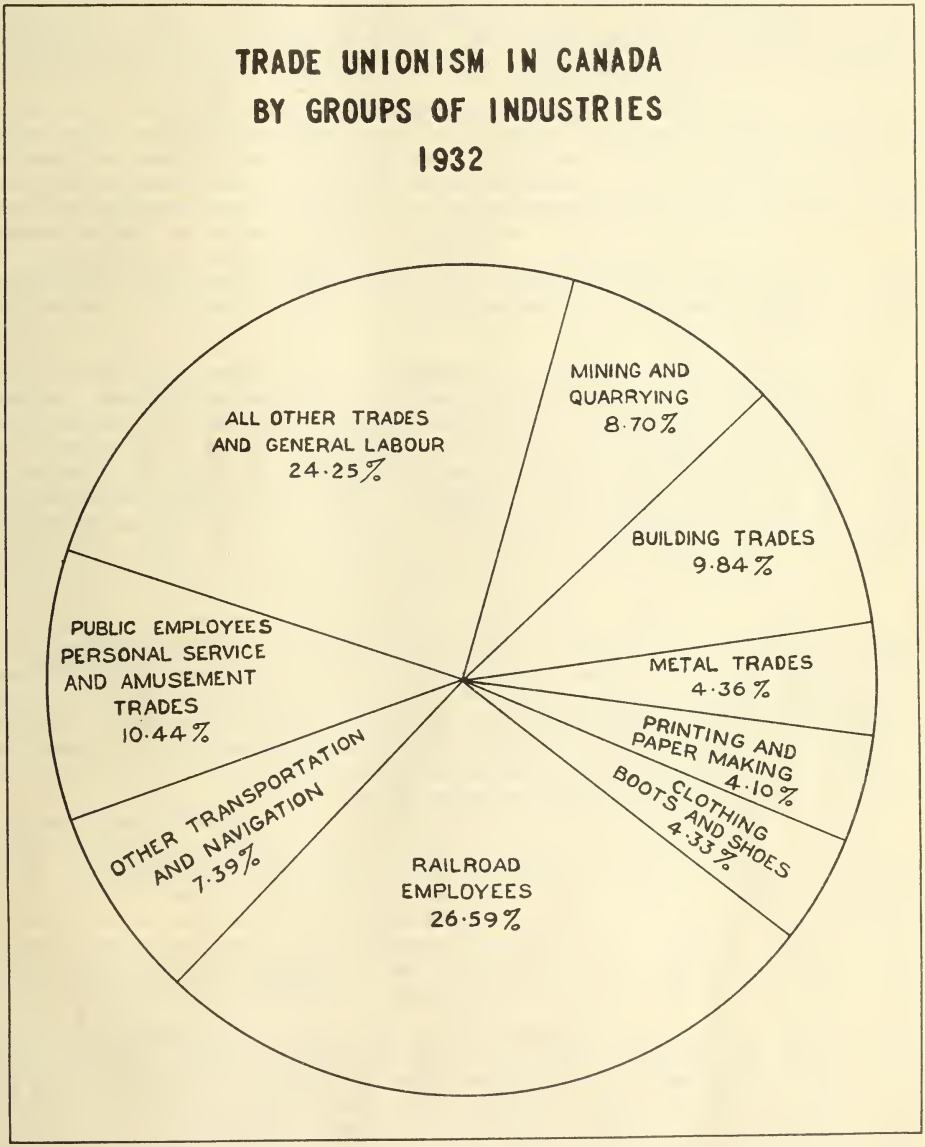

It will be observed in the accompanying table and chart that the railroad group contains the largest number of members, namely 75,402, representing 26·59 per cent of the total.

| Groups of Industries | Membership | Per centage |
| Mining and Quarrying | 24,672 | 8·70 |
| Building | 27,901 | 9·84 |
| Metal | 12,350 | 4·36 |
| Printing and Paper Making | 11,644 | 4·10 |
| Clothing, Boot and Shoes | 12,291 | 4·33 |
| Railroad Employees | 75,402 | 26·59 |
| Other Transportation and Navigation | 20,952 | 7·39 |
| Public Employees, Personal Service and Amusement | 29,604 | 10·44 |

TWENTY-TWO YEARS OF TRADE UNIONISM IN CANADA

Mining and Quarrying.—Organizations in these industries are chiefly among coal miners. The United Mine Workers of America, which has considerable membership in Alberta and Nova Scotia, Districts 18 and 26 respectively, as well as the Amalgamated Mine Workers of Nova Scotia, organized during 1932, include all classes of workers in coal mines, mechanics, engineers, etc., as well as miners. These unions, however, do not organize metal miners. The Mine Workers' Union of Canada with nearly all of its membership among coal miners in Alberta and one local in Nova Scotia has a small number of its members in other mining, having organized some copper miners as well as coal miners in British Columbia during 1932. A number of independent local coal miners' unions in Alberta and in British Columbia in the Crow's Nest Pass District as well as in Saskatchewan had a total membership of over four thousand.

Building Trades.—This group includes the various unions whose members are engaged chiefly in building and construction with some exceptions, such as carpenters in wood working establishments, electrical workers on electric railways, in railway shops and in electric light and power plants. In the larger cities these have Building Trades Councils. The carpenters, bricklayers and masons, electrical workers and plumbers together make up over eighty per cent of the total membership.

Metal Trades.—The members of the unions in this group work chiefly in metal working establishments and in railway shops but elevator constructors and bridge, structural and ornamental iron workers are included. The machinists' union had nearly half the membership in the group, the blacksmiths, boilermakers and moulders each having over one thousand members.

Printing and Paper Making Trades.—This group includes workmen in printing and publishing and in pulp and paper mills. The carpenters, electricians, etc., as well as the engineers and firemen in the pulp and paper mills belong, however, to the building, metal trades and engineering unions. The Typographical Union, made up mainly of typesetters, had nearly half the total membership but the printing pressmen, the paper makers and the pulp sulphite and paper mill workers had each about one thousand five hundred members.

Clothing, Boot and Shoe Trades.—The Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, an international union of employees in men's and boys' ready-made clothing factories, was the largest in this industry but the International Ladies' Garment Workers, composed of employees in cloak, suit and dressmaking establishments, and the Industrial Union of Needle Trades Workers had considerable membership. This last organization affiliated with the Workers' Unity League, organizes workers in fur shops as well as in clothing factories. The membership of all of these unions is chiefly in Montreal, Toronto and Winnipeg. The United Garment Workers with members in overall and work clothing factories, the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union and the International Fur Workers' Union had memberships of nearly one thousand each.

Railroad Employees.—This group of organizations of steam railway employees includes four of the independent international unions, namely the Locomotive Engineers, the Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, the Railway Conductors and Railroad Trainmen, the membership of each ranging from about five thousand to ten thousand. A number of the other unions with considerable membership are affiliated with the American Federation of Labor and the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada. The Maintenance of Way Employees consist of sectionmen and the mechanics in the bridge and building departments and have the second largest union membership in Canada, being over 15,000. The Railway Carmen which includes car repairers and car building trades such as carpenters, upholsterers, etc., has a membership of over ten thousand. This organization, along with certain locals of the machinists, boilermakers, blacksmiths, moulders, sheet metal workers and electrical workers unions which have members chiefly in railway shops, constitutes Division No. 4 of the Railway Employees Department of the American Federation of Labor (Federated Shop Crafts) and represents these classes of employees in negotiations with the railway companies. The Railroad Telegraphers and the Railway and Steamship Clerks also have considerable memberships. The latter includes clerks, freight handlers and station employees not only on steam railways but employed by steamship companies; most of its members, however, are employed on the Canadian Pacific Railway.

Among the wholly Canadian unions the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees is outstanding, having in fact the largest membership of any union in Canada. While membership is open to nearly all classes of railway employees, its organization is chiefly among clerks, freight handlers, station employees, shop labourers, dining and sleeping car employees on the Canadian National Railways and among employees of the Canadian National Express Company. It has also some members in car shops and among steamship clerks and freight handlers. This union as well as the Canadian Association of Railway Enginemen is affiliated with the All-Canadian Congress of Labour.

Other Transportation and Navigation Trades.—The Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employees, having one of the largest memberships in Canada, includes motormen and conductors and miscellaneous classes of electric railway employees as well as bus drivers. Electrical workers, machinists, etc., usually belong to the unions of their respective crafts but in some few instances by arrangement with these unions are in the street railway organization. The One Big Union has a considerable membership among the employees of the Winnipeg Street Railway and its suburban lines. For longshoremen there are several unions. The International Longshoremen's Association has in its organization the employees of this class in Halifax and St. John but in Montreal as well as in Vancouver, Victoria, etc., they belong to independent unions. The National Association of Marine Engineers, affiliated with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, has members throughout Canada. A seamen's union has members on the Pacific Coast. Two masters' and mates associations, but not classed as labour organizations, are referred to in the last chapter. The National Catholic Unions and a number of ship labourers' unions, independent, in Quebec, have several hundred members in these industries.

Public Employment, Personal Service and Amusement.—Those organizations of federal government employees which are classed as unions, include postal clerks, letter carriers, railway mail clerks and the Amalgamated Civil Servants of Canada, membership in which is open to all classes of federal government employees. The total membership of these is approximately nine thousand. The only union of provincial government employees is the Civil Service Association of Alberta with a membership of 850. Among civic employees the local unions chartered by the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada have a total membership of nearly four thousand. The International Association of Fire Fighters has a membership of over two thousand. There are also a number of unions chartered by the All-Canadian Congress of Labour and a number of independent unions. In personal service, the barbers' union and the hotel and restaurant employees each have over one thousand members. The musicians' union and the stage employees' organization, which includes moving picture operators, have several thousand members.

All Other Trades and General Labour.—The largest organizations in this group are the Lumber Workers' Industrial Union with 7,000 members, mostly in British Columbia and the northern part of Ontario, and the Industrial Workers of the World with 3,618, most of these also lumbermen in the same districts. The Commercial Telegraphers and the Firemen and Oilers organizations have over 1,500 and over 1,000 respectively, while the International Operating Engineers' Union has over 800, and the Brewery Workers' Union, including various classes of such employees, has 900. Three unions of fishermen on the Pacific Coast have each about five hundred members. An item of interest is the existence of the only remaining Canadian unit of the Knights of Labour, namely the Papineau Assembly in Quebec with a membership of 180. The membership of the National Catholic Unions in this group, including employees in various classes of employment, chiefly in factories, is 22,269.

UNIONS HAVING LARGE MEMBERSHIPS IN CANADA

Of the 78 international craft unions with branches or members in Canada, there are 10 with 5,000 or more members, 4 of which are composed of employees who are identified with railway operation. In the Canadian group are three bodies with over 5,000 members, one of which is also a railway organization. The names of the 13 organizations appear in the following statement, being arranged according to numerical strength, and among them they represent a total Canadian trade union membership of 118,182, comprised in 1,008 local branches; approximately 42 per cent of the total membership and about 37 per cent of the total trade union branches.

| Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees | 194 | 15,430 |

UNEMPLOYED WORKERS' ORGANIZATIONS

In addition to the various trade union and non-trade union bodies referred to in the present issue of Labour Organization in Canada, there are a number of unemployed workers organizations in existence throughout the Dominion but no information has been furnished by such organizations.

DEVELOPMENT OF TRADE UNIONISM

Before the middle of the nineteenth century a small number of independent trade associations had been formed in Canada, each usually consisting of the workingmen of a single craft in one locality. About that time, however, a movement developed for wider organizations of workingmen. As in Great Britain and in the United States, some of the central organizations which resulted were general in character including workmen of all occupations in various industries. There were also industrial unions, each formed to include all classes of labour in a particular industry. Many, on the other hand, were confined to workmen of a single craft, or a number of related crafts, having one or more local branches in each locality organized, and by the end of the century this type predominated. The Knights of Labour, an organization of the general type with local and trade assemblies, formed in the United States in 1869, operating also in Canada, had reached its greatest numerical strength in 1885 with a total membership of about one million, but declined thereafter and early in the twentieth century had a relatively small membership. An instance of the formation of a general union for a smaller area is the Provincial Workmen's Association formed among coal miners in Nova Scotia in 1879 which attempted to organize all classes of workmen in the province but was not successful, becoming a purely coal miners' union. In the meantime, most of the craft organizations (chiefly international, that is having local branches in Canada as well as in the United States) had become united through affiliation with the American Federation of Labor, formed in 1881 to promote the common interests of the unions in legislation, etc., and to charter local trades and labour councils, state federations, etc., for similar purposes. As stated elsewhere in this report, the Federation has in affiliation a number of unions, each of which comprises all the classes of labour in a single industry, for instance the coal miners' union, the United Mine Workers of America. The Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, originating in 1873, similarly functions in promoting the common interests of the various organizations in Canada represented in it, chartering also local trades and labour councils and provincial organizations.

The Canadian Federation of Labour was formed under the name National Trades and Labour Congress in 1902 when the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada decided in future to deny representation to the local assemblies of the Knights of Labour and other unions conflicting in jurisdiction with the international unions. The unions connected with the Federation, with certain others later organized, merged in the All-Canadian Congress of Labour in 1927.

The Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada, formed in 1921, following conferences of National Catholic Unions in 1918 and succeeding years, included a number of national unions expelled from the Trades and Labour Congress in 1902 and similar unions organized later.

Separate chapters in this report are devoted to the above mentioned organizations and to several separate organizations formed in later years, the Industrial Workers of the World, the One Big Union, the Amalgamated Mine Workers of Nova Scotia and the self-designated "revolutionary" unions affiliated with the Workers' Unity League.

TRADE UNIONS ACT, 1872

Until 1872 the organization and activities of trade unions encountered difficulties as being in restraint of trade under English law still in force in some of the Canadian provinces. In that year the Trade Unions Act was passed by the Parliament of Canada as a result of a strike of printers in Toronto and other cities to secure a nine-hour working day, a number of union members having been arrested on a charge of conspiracy in restraint of trade. The statute declared the purposes of a trade union not to be unlawful so as to render any person liable to prosecution merely on the ground that they were in restraint of trade. The Act also permitted the registration of unions in the office of the Secretary of State, such unions thereby securing legal status in certain respects. The Criminal Law Amendment Act enacted during the same session contained provisions as to picketing, intimidation, etc. The present law on these subjects is found in the Criminal Code, Sections 496-502, Chapter 36. The provision in the Trade Unions Act as to criminal conspiracy is also now included in the Criminal Code. The provinces of Quebec, Manitoba and British Columbia also have legislation regarding trade unions. Elsewhere in this report there is a list of unions registered under the Trade Unions Act, Chapter 202, R.S. 1927, Revised Statutes.

LABOUR IN POLITICS

At the annual convention of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada which was held in the city of Hamilton in September, 1887, a resolution was unanimously adopted which declared "that in the opinion of this Congress the working classes of Canada will never be properly represented in parliament, or receive justice in the legislation of the country, until they are represented by men of their own class, and members of this Congress pledge themselves to use their utmost endeavours, wherever practicable, to bring out candidates for the local and Dominion elections in the constituencies in which they reside." Following the adoption of this resolution, there were occasions when candidates were nominated for various offices under the auspices of organized labour, the political activities usually being conducted by the local trades and labour councils. This procedure in some cases causing dissatisfaction among the members, the Trades and Labour Congress at its annual convention at Ottawa in 1900 adopted a proposal for independent political action. This did not meet with the approval of some, with the result that continual agitation was kept up with the view of having the Congress become the head of a labour political party. In 1906 the Trades and Labour Congress approved of a policy of provincial autonomy in the establishment of labour political parties, but even this did not have the result of establishing the desired political organization. The 1917 convention of the Congress suggested that the organized workers of Canada should follow the British plan and organize a labour party on a basis which would permit united action on the part of trade unionists, socialists, fabians, co-operators and farmers. This suggestion was adopted and in 1921 the Canadian Labour Party was established. Some success was attained in co-ordinating the various labour political parties during the next few years but in 1927, the secretary of the party since its inception resigned, since which time the main party has ceased to function. The Alberta and Quebec sections of the party are, however, active at the present time. Independent labour parties are functioning also in Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, British Columbia and Nova Scotia.

The Canadian Unionist, official organ of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour, in its issue for October, 1931, announced the formation of a National Labour Party. In a manifesto the aim of the party was declared to be "to organize the workers politically for the purpose of establishing, by constitutional means, an equitable economic and social order".

On August 1, 1932, the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation was brought into existence at a meeting in Calgary, Alta., of delegates said to represent labour, farmer and socialist groups in five provinces—Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia. Among the purposes of the new body is the establishment in the Dominion of a co-operative commonwealth in which production, distribution and exchange would be regulated to supply human needs and not for profit, and the taking over by the state of the public utilities and major industries, including mining, pulp and paper, etc.

There is to be a Dominion council as well as a council for each province. The member organizations in the various provinces will select the provincial council and will also be represented on the Dominion council by one delegate from each body. An affiliation fee of $25 will be required from each member organization and financial support will be sought through voluntary subscription.

The chief provisional officers of the Federation are: President, J. S. Woodsworth, M.P., Winnipeg, Man.; Secretary, Norman F. Priestley, Edmonton, Alta.

LABOUR MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT AND PROVINCIAL LEGISLATURES

Federal Parliament:—James S. Woodsworth (Party Leader), Winnipeg, North Centre (Manitoba); Humphrey Mitchell, Hamilton East (Ontario); Abraham A. Heaps, Winnipeg North (Manitoba); Angus MacInnis, Vancouver South (British Columbia).

OTHER ORGANIZATIONS ENDORSING LABOUR CANDIDATES

In addition to the activities of the above-mentioned political parties, the election of labour candidates to municipal councils, school boards, etc., is promoted by these and other organizations, the candidature of such labour representatives being in many instances endorsed by trades and labour councils and similar non-political labour bodies.

In previous reports on Labour Organization in Canada reference has been made to the Communist Party of Canada, the political organization of the Communist movement. Following court decisions declaring the Communist Party an unlawful organization in 1931, under Section 98 of the Criminal Code, candidates advocating similar radical social and poltical policies have been nominated under the name of "United Front."

CANADIAN LABOUR DEFENSE LEAGUE

The Canadian Labour Defense League was formed in 1925, its objects as stated being to provide legal defence for all workers arrested and prosecuted for any form of working class activity and to provide support for the families of prisoners, to stand for freedom of speech, assembly and organization for the working class, etc.

The League has been active in the promotion of an agitation for the repeal of Section 98 of the Criminal Code and has had representatives interview the Prime Minister and members of the cabinet in this connection. The general secretary of the League is A. E. Smith, Room 102, 331 Bay St., Toronto 2, Ont.

THE WORKERS' EDUCATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF ONTARIO

This organization, which has branches in various cities in the province, is an association of workingmen and others established to provide higher non-technical education such as that available to students at the universities. Its officers include workingmen and university professors and it receives financial aid and other support from labour organizations and universities.

The movement originated in the Workers' Educational Association of Great Britain, established in 1903, and spread to various countries throughout the world. The first organization was established in Canada at Toronto, in 1918. Classes are formed and lectures are given in the centres where branches are established on social and economic problems, literature, etc. There are similar associations in other provinces.

The Department has been requested to make it clear that this organization should not be confused, owing to the similarity of the name, with the Workers' Educational Association of Canada, listed in the Report on Labour Organization in Canada for 1931 among those reported as being subsidiary or auxiliary to the Communist movement.

An organization known as the Labour Educational Association of Ontario is referred to in Chapter X, Federations of Trade Unions.

I. INTERNATIONAL LABOUR ORGANIZATIONS IN CANADA

American Federation of Labor—Head of the Labour Movement in North America—Pays Tax to Trades and Labour Congress of Canada—Objects and Principles—Sources of Revenue—Departments of the Federation—International Craft Organizations—Number operating in Canada.

As a large number of organized workers in Canada belong to international organizations which are affiliated with the American Federation of Labor it is considered appropriate that in a report dealing with labour organizations in the Dominion some reference should be made to the central body with which they are identified. The American Federation of Labor is the recognized head of the internationally organized labour movement of North America, and in addition to issuing charters of affiliation to central organizing bodies, issues certificates of membership to certain classes of wage-earners over whom no existing organization claims jurisdiction. As soon as the membership of such bodies has increased sufficient to warrant such a course, a central organization may be established, the members of the craft concerned being directly transferred, and the new main organization so instituted becomes an affiliate of the Federation.

A staff of organizers is maintained by the Federation to assist in the formation of new unions, either as branches of affiliated central organizations or as units under its own control. The plan of organization of the Federation, which is a voluntary grouping of self-governing organizations, all having complete autonomy over the craftsmen covered by their respective charters, is founded on a scale which its affiliates consider to be adequate to meet the present requirements of the organized workers. Although the Federation is an exponent of organization on trade lines, it does not hinder the amalgamation of those unions composed of closely allied crafts, such action being given approval when the organizations involved voluntarily desire to amalgamate. Resolutions have been introduced at certain conventions asking the Federation to give its support to a system of industrial unionism, whereby the workers in a particular industry would be grouped in one organization, but the proposals have always been defeated. The constitution of the Federation provides for the establishment of departments through which organizations of kindred trades are brought together to deal with matters pertaining to their respective industries, charters being issued also to state federations and local trades and labour councils. During its existence of 51 years the American Federation of Labor has been most active in promoting legislation intended for the betterment of the working conditions of that part of its affiliated membership located in the United States, constituting of course the great majority, and has on many occasions rendered both moral and financial assistance to affiliated organizations in their efforts to secure improved working conditions. The Executive Council of the Federation in its report to the 1931 convention on the question of unemployment insurance, in which they reported against such legislation in the United States, closed their recommendations with the following statement: "The Executive Council understands and recognizes the fact that on all matters of social justice legislation, the Canadian membership of organized labour who are affiliated with the American Federation of Labor are free to act in accordance with their own judgment and their own decisions. While the economic proposals of the American Federation of Labor as a remedy or remedies for the unemployment situation are as applicable to industry in Canada as in the United States, the Council fully recognizes the right of the Canadian membership of the American Federation of Labor to originate and support, through the Canadian Trades and Labour Congress, such social justice legislation as in their judgment may be for the best interests of the working men and women in the Dominion of Canada." The Federation and its various departments endeavour to adjust differences which arise between the affiliated organizations on the question of trade jurisdiction, and in most instances their authority in such matters is recognized.

The American Federation of Labor exchanges fraternal delegates with the British Trades Union Congress and the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada (referred to in the following chapter), acknowledges the last-named as the head of international trade unionism in the Dominion, so far as legislative matters are concerned, paying a per capita tax to the Congress on the membership of its chartered federal and trade unions (those bodies over which no international craft organization claims jurisdiction) located in Canada.

The authority of the American Federation of Labor to deal with trade matters as they affect international organizations on the North American continent is fully conceded by the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, which body accepts the decisions rendered by the Federation. The Congress has assisted in such judgments being respected by refusing to accept per capita tax or to seat at the annual conventions delegates from organizations which had refused to obey the instructions of the Federation. On the other hand, the Congress has on occasions continued to permit the affiliation of the Canadian membership of international organizations notwithstanding that they have been suspended by the American Federation.

All of the more important international labour organizations, including the railroad brotherhoods whose members are employed in engine and train service, have local branches in Canada. Exclusive of these brotherhoods, the unions operating in Canada are for the most part in affiliation with the American Federation of Labor. Most of the central bodies are what are known as craft unions, although some of them, such as the miners, brewery workers and street railway employees, are of an industrial character, embracing in their memberships nearly if not all of the workmen employed in the respective industries. The most numerously represented of the international organizations maintain in the Dominion resident vice-presidents or other officials for the purpose of looking after the interests of their Canadian membership and of reporting to their respective headquarters on trade conditions and the operations of their local branch unions in Canada, besides having accounts with Canadian banks through which their financial transactions in the Dominion are conducted. These officials are in close touch with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, which body renders assistance when required in promoting the cause of the various international labour bodies operating in the Dominion. Some of the international bodies have in Canada dues collecting agencies, the monies so collected being deposited in a bank in the locality where the agency is operating and by whom disbursements are made to the Canadian membership.

AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR

The American Federation of Labor was founded in Pittsburgh, Pa., on November 15, 1881, its original name being the Organized Trades and Labour Unions of the United States and Canada. At the annual meeting held in Columbus, Ohio, in 1886, the present name was chosen.

The organization, as its name implies, is a federated body, and includes in its membership most of the important international unions. Besides granting charters to national and international organizations and trade departments, charters are also issued to state federations, city councils, and such local trade and federal unions as do not fall within the jurisdiction of any existing international bodies.

The aims and objects of the American Federation of Labor are stated in the constitution as follows:—

1. The object of this federation shall be the encouragement and formation of local trade and labour unions, and closer federation of such societies through the organization of central trade and labour unions in every city, and the further combinations of such bodies into state, territorial or provincial organizations to secure legislation in the interest of the working masses.
2. The establishment of national and international trade unions, based upon a strict recognition of the autonomy of each trade, and the promotion and advancement of such bodies.
3. The establishment of departments composed of national or international unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, of the same industry, and which departments shall be governed in conformity with the laws of the American Federation of Labor.
4. An American federation of all national and international trade unions to aid and assist each other; to aid and encourage the sale of union-label goods, and to secure legislation in the interest of the working people, and influence public opinion by peaceful and legal methods in favour of organized labour.
5. To aid and encourage the labour press of America.

PRINCIPLES OF THE FEDERATION

1. The abolition of all forms of involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime.
2. Free schools, free text books and compulsory education.
3. Unrelenting protest against the issuance and abuse of injunction process in labour disputes.
4. A work day of not more than eight hours in the twenty-four hour day.
5. A strict recognition of not over eight hours per day on all federal, state or municipal work, and not less than the prevailing per diem wage rate of the class of employment in the vicinity where the work is performed.

6. Release from employment one day in seven.
7. The abolition of the contract system of public work.
8. The municipal ownership of public utilities.
9. The abolition of the sweat-shop system.
10. Sanitary inspection of factory, workshop, mine and home.
11. Liability of employers for injury to body or loss of life.
12. The nationalization of telegraph and telephone.
13. The passage of anti-child labour laws in states where they do not exist and rigid defence of them where they have been enacted into law.
14. Woman suffrage co-equal with man suffrage.
15. Suitable and plentiful playgrounds, for children in all cities.
16. The initiative and referendum and the imperative mandate and right of recall.
17. Continued agitation for the public bath system in all cities.
18. Qualification in permits to build of all cities and towns that there shall be bathrooms and bathroom attachments in all houses or compartments used for habitation.
19. We favour a system of finance whereby money shall be issued exclusively by the Government, with such regulations and restrictions as will protect it from manipulation by the banking interests for their own private gain.

The American Federation of Labor has a staff of regular organizers on salary, one of whom is resident in Canada. There are also many volunteer organizers.

Under the constitution only one central organization of a particular trade or calling is granted a charter of affiliation, no recognition being given to dual national or international unions, i.e., bodies covering the same calling, unless the written consent is given of the existing affiliated unions whose jurisdiction is involved. Charters are also issued to local trade and federal labour unions, bodies over which no existing recognized international organization claims control, as well as to state federations of labour and city central bodies (otherwise known as trades and labour councils).

The revenue of the Federation is derived from a per capita tax upon the fully paid-up membership of all affiliated bodies, and on a varying scale, as follows: (a) from international or national trade unions, one cent per month; (b) from local trade unions and federal labour unions chartered direct by the federation, 35 cents per month (12½ cents of which must be set aside to be used only in case of strike or lockout involving such local or federal unions); (c) from city central and state bodies, $10 per year, payable quarterly. Levies of one cent per member per week may be made on all affiliated unions for a period not exceeding ten weeks in any one year to assist in the support of an affiliated national or international union engaged in a protracted strike or lockout. Local trade unions and federal labour unions, chartered direct, are also required to forward to the Federation 25 per cent of the total initiation fee received by the local union, which in no case shall be less than $1.

In the development of its organization the American Federation has established departments covering four leading groups of industries, viz., building trades, metal trades, railroad employees, and union label trades. Each department comprises organizations affiliated with the Federation, and has power to manage and finance its own business. These departments are charged with watching the interests of the industries represented and may initiate or assist movements the aim of which is to promote the welfare of the workers. Local councils of these departments are in operation in various cities, and the union branches of the respective trades are thus brought together for joint action, their conduct of course to be in conformity with the general policy of the American Federation of Labor. Each department is entitled to send a delegate to the annual convention of the Federation. The department embracing mining trades organizations, which was formed on January 8, 1912, passed out of existence on July 25, 1922.

The Building Trades Department of the Federation, according to the latest report received, has in affiliation seventeen international unions with a membership of 462,764, and also 7 state and 373 local building trades councils, 13 of which are reported as being located in the Dominion but only from the following 9 Canadian cities were reports received: Edmonton, Hamilton, Montreal, Ottawa, Quebec, St. Catharines, Toronto, Vancouver, and Winnipeg.

The Metal Trades Department has in affiliation 15 international unions, the affiliated membership of which according to the latest report was about 430,000, as well as 66 local, state and district metal trades councils.

The Railway Employees' Department has nine international organizations, made up mostly of railway shop employees, in affiliation, with an approximate membership of 313,068. According to the latest report, there are also 100 railroad system federations or departments under charter, six of which cover employees on the following Canadian railways: Canadian National Railways, comprising Atlantic, Central and Western Regions; Canadian Pacific, comprising Atlantic and Western Regions; Dominion Atlantic; Northern Alberta; Temiskaming and Northern Ontario; Toronto, Hamilton and Buffalo. Division 4, embracing the shop mechanics employed on all Canadian lines, also operates under charter from the Railway Employees' Department.

The Union Label Trades Department has 43 international unions affiliated, with a total membership of 496,283. In addition there are 121 local label leagues under charter, of which six are located in Canadian cities, viz., Hamilton, Kitchener, Montreal, Three Rivers, Toronto and Vancouver.

At each convention, in addition to others, a committee on adjustment is appointed for the purpose of investigating and endeavouring to bring about settlements of jurisdictional disputes between unions which have not been adjusted through other agencies, and in most instances amicable adjustments are reached.

Particulars as to membership together with the names of the chief officers of the American Federation are recorded in Chapter XVI—Organization of Workers throughout the World.

INTERNATIONAL CRAFT ORGANIZATIONS

Besides the American Federation of Labor and its 106 directly affiliated organizations, there are a number of other international labour organizations operating in North America. The more important of these are the railroad brotherhoods, which embrace workers employed in engine and train service, and which comprise one of the strongest labour groups on the continent.

Three new names appear in the list, viz., American Federation of Silk Workers, formed on March 13, 1932; Sheep Shearers Union of North America (date of organization not reported), and the American Federation of Government Employees, formed August 15, 1932. With the addition of these three bodies, there are 123 organizations whose names appear in Chapter XVIII, and which include those of unions chartered by the American Federation of Labor, as well as those of other central labour bodies concerning which information was received in the Department.

Apart from the unions mentioned in this chapter there are about 30 other labour organizations operating on the North American continent, but as they did not send in returns, and because they are not considered to be important factors in the labour movement of the continent, their activities being confined to a comparatively small area, their names are not included in this report. With a few exceptions the organizations given recognition in Chapter XVIII are what are commonly known as craft unions, 106 of which are in direct affiliation with the American Federation of Labor. The American Federation of Full-Fashioned Hosiery Workers, the American Federation of Silk Workers, and the International Pocketbook Workers' Union, which though not directly chartered by the American Federation of Labor, are indirectly affiliated by reason of holding charters from organizations which are in direct affiliation, and are therefore designated as affiliates of the Federation, making 109 bodies so identified.

Of the 123 organizations whose names appear in the list 77 have extended their jurisdiction into Canada by establishing one or more branches or having members resident in the Dominion; the American Federation of Labor having also granted charters to a number of local unions in the Dominion, there being no central body covering the work people so organized, makes 78 international craft unions with Canadian affiliation, four less than the number recorded in 1931.

Of these, 70 are affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, while 7 not so identified have Canadian branches. The Industrial Workers of the World, which is a central organizing industrial union, having no connection with the labour movement as represented by the American Federation of Labor, and which has during recent years re-established branches in Canada, is discussed in a separate chapter of this volume.

Fifty-nine of the affiliates of the American Federation of Labor, as well as the Federation itself, have given recognition to the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada as the head of the internationally organized labour movement of the Dominion by affiliating the whole of their Canadian membership with that body. The Brotherhood of Railroad Signalmen maintains its affiliation with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, although being suspended from the A.F. of L. in 1928 over a question of jurisdiction, which makes 61 international organizations identified with the Canadian body.

II. TRADES AND LABOUR CONGRESS OF CANADA

Had Inception in 1873—Objects and Principles of the Congress—Decrease in Membership—Numerical and Financial Standing for Twenty Years—Officers of the Congress.

The Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, which was originally formed in 1873, is the oldest and most representative body of internationally organized workers in the Dominion. Historical accounts of the Congress have appeared in earlier issues of this report.

OBJECTS OF THE CONGRESS

(a) To encourage and form such organizations of workers as conform to its rules and regulations;

(b) To establish city or district central councils based upon the strict recognition of the autonomy of each affiliated organization and the promotion and advancement of such bodies;

(c) To establish and maintain a congress with suitable headquarters at Ottawa and subsidiary Executive Committees or Federations of Labour in each of the provinces of Canada for the purpose of assisting each other;

(d) To aid and encourage the sale of union labelled goods;

(e) To influence public opinion by peaceful and legal methods in favour of organized labour and to secure legislation in the interests of the working people;

(f) To further the spirit of international trade unionism;

(g) Generally for such purposes as may best advance the interests of working people.

PLATFORM OF PRINCIPLES

The platform of principles, as revised by the executive council following the 1931 convention, is as follows:—

1. Free education and compulsory school attendance.
2. Maximum legal working day of eight hours and establishment of five-day week.
3. Holidays with pay.
4. Insertion and enforcement of fair wage regulations (based on established union conditions) in all government work direct and indirect.
5. Public ownership and democratic management of all public utilities.
6. Government control and fullest development of all natural resources.
7. Establishment of a Tariff Board on which labour will be fully represented.
8. Revenue by direct taxation.
9. Abolition of non-elective legislative bodies.
10. Exclusion of all races that cannot be properly assimilated into the national life of Canada.
11. The demand for, and use of, the union label.
12. Prevention of employment of children under sixteen years of age.
13. Equal pay for equal work for men and women.
14. Voluntary arbitration in labour disputes.
15. Proportional representation with group constituencies.
16. The encouragement of the establishment of Consumers' Co-operative Societies.
17. Unemployment insurance.
18. Old age pensions, state insurance for sickness and disability.
19. Uniformity of labour laws throughout the Dominion.
20. Disarmament.

REPRESENTATION AND MEMBERSHIP

The basis of representation of affiliated bodies at annual or other conventions is: From local branch unions in Canada of international and national organizations and trade unions directly chartered by the Congress: One delegate for the first 100 members or less, and one for each additional 100 members or the majority fraction thereof; international and national organizations which have affiliated their entire membership in the Dominion are entitled to one additional delegate, who must be elected from their Canadian membership. Trades and labour councils and provincial federations of labour are entitled to three delegates each. Article III of the constitution of the Trades and Labour Congress governing membership and charters is as follows:—

Sec. 1.—The membership of the Trades and Labour Congress shall consist of such trades and labour bodies as are hereinafter defined and conform to its rules and regulations.

Sec. 2.—Any international union holding a charter from the American Federation of Labor shall be entitled to affiliate its entire Canadian membership; and any local unit in Canada of an international union, chartered by the American Federation of Labor, which is not so affiliated, shall be entitled to direct membership in this Congress.

Sec. 3.—Charters or certificates of affiliation, bearing the signature of the president and secretary-treasurer of the Congress and its seal, may be granted by the executive council of the Congress to any body of workers in Canada who are not eligible for membership in a recognized international or national union.

Sec. 4.—The Congress shall form and charter Trades and Labour Councils and Provincial Federations of Labour, composed of such organizations as are entitled to membership in the Congress.

Sec. 5.—No international or national union other than those already enumerated in sections 2, 3, and 4 shall be admitted to membership except by two-thirds vote of the annual convention of this Congress, but in no case shall any organization be admitted to membership whose jurisdiction conflicts with that of an international or national union already affiliated to this Congress.

Sec. 6.—The fee for a charter and supplies for Provincial Federations of Labour, Trades and Labour Councils and such labour unions as may be formed and chartered direct by this Congress shall be $10, and each organization so chartered shall be supplied with an official seal.

Sec. 7.—The executive council shall have power, apart from any other power enumerated in this constitution, by a majority vote of its members, given either at a meeting of the council, or otherwise, to suspend from membership any affiliated or chartered body which in the opinion of the executive has violated either the letter or spirit of the constitution, or which has, or the officers of which have, (a) encouraged or advocated secession from international unions or assisted in forming independent or dual organizations; (b) refused to join or affiliate with an international union of its trade or calling when so ordered by the executive. Such suspension shall debar any organization from all rights and benefits of membership in this Congress until the next annual convention, when the suspension may be made permanent and the charter revoked or affiliation cancelled by majority of the delegates present on a roll call vote. Any organization may also be suspended from membership or its charter revoked or its membership cancelled upon a motion introduced at any regular convention and adopted by majority of the delegates present on a roll call vote.

The revenue of the Congress, besides the fee charged for charters supplied to such bodies as are entitled to them, is derived from a tax of 18 cents per member per year from international and national organizations and from unions chartered direct by the Congress, 36 cents per member from trades and labour councils, and a lump payment of $10 per annum from provincial federations of labour. The Congress owns the building in Ottawa in which the head office is located, and which is valued at $40,000, the management being vested in a board of trustees composed of the executive council.

ATTENDANCE AT THE 1932 CONVENTION

At the 48th annual convention of the Trades and Labour Congress held in Hamilton, Ont., September 12-17, 1932, there were credentials received for 338 delegates, 46 of whom represented 45 international organizations which have affiliated the whole of their Canadian membership with the Congress, 1 represented a provincial federation of labour, 35 represented 16 trades and labour councils, 254 represented 152 local branch unions, and the two fraternal delegates, representing respectively the British Trades Union Congress and the American Federation of Labor.

The report of the secretary-treasurer named the 60 international organizations which had paid per capita tax on the whole of their Canadian memberships, as well as the two national bodies, federations and trades and labour councils, and showed that the total membership for which per capita tax had been paid up to the close of the fiscal year was 122,129, a decrease of 19,008, comprised in 1,608 local branch unions, a loss of 27. In submitting this statement secretary-treasurer Draper emphasized that the membership reported was, as in past years, based on the actual per capita tax received, which practice did not give a true picture of the real strength of the Congress. In normal years approximately 25 per cent should be added for those in arrears and on whom no tax was paid, but in these abnormal times of unemployment, when exceptional measures were being taken to enable unemployed members to maintain their membership, it was certain that the number on which per capita tax was not remitted to the Congress was much larger than usual. Therefore, in actual fact the decrease in the number still holding membership in affiliated unions was much less than the number shown in the report. The international and national organizations in affiliation with the Congress are indicated thus () in the tables in a subsequent chapter giving the membership of the respective unions.

The total receipts for the fiscal year, including the balance on hand, amounted to $39,260.64; expenditure, $23,128.86, leaving a balance of $16,131.78. The secretary-treasurer also submitted a report of the trustees of the Congress headquarters, the figures for which were included in the above totals, and which showed receipts of $1,620 and expenses for maintenance, etc., of $1,341.15.

| Year | Membership | Total receipts | Expenditure | Year | Membership | Total receipts | Expenditure |

OFFICERS OF THE TRADES CONGRESS

The list of officers, the first five mentioned constituting the executive council, and provincial executive committees for the year 1932-33 is as follows:—

President.—Tom Moore (member of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners), 172 McLaren St., Ottawa, Ont.

Vice-Presidents.—Percy R. Bengough (member of International Association of Machinists), 529 Beatty St., Vancouver, B.C.; R. J. Tallon (member of the International Association of Machinists and president of Division No. 4 of the Railway Employees' Department of the A. F. of L.), 213 Coronation Building, Montreal, Que.; James Simpson (member of the International Typographical Union), Labour Temple, Toronto, Ont.

Secretary-Treasurer.—P. M. Draper (member of the International Typographical Union), 172 McLaren St., Ottawa, Ont.

Provincial Executive Committees.—Nova Scotia: D. W. Morrison (chairman), Box 730, Glace Bay; W. A. MacDonald, 62 Albert St., Halifax; A. M. Sullivan, 165 Upper Water St., Halifax; S. J. Hatcher, 9 Yukon St., Halifax. Quebec: G. R. Brunet (chairman), 2472 Sherbrooke St. E., Montreal; L. A. Beaudry, 1828 Desery St., Montreal; Omer Fleury, 272 des Fosses St., Quebec; Phil. Corriveau, 1043 St. Philippe St., Montreal. Ontario: Jos. Tomkins (chairman), 56 Bond St., Toronto; Rod Plant, 172 McLaren St., Ottawa; E. W. A. O'Dell, 20 Rutherford Ave., Hamilton; T. Jackson, 9 Mountnoel Ave., Toronto. Manitoba: H. Kempster (chairman), Labour Temple, James St., Winnipeg; Robert Hewitt, 302 Brock St., Winnipeg; J. B. Graham, 516 Carlow Ave., Winnipeg; G. P. Schollie, 758 Spruce St., Winnipeg. Saskatchewan: W. E. Stephenson (chairman), 1057 Grafton Ave., Moose Jaw; H. Perry, 808 College Ave., Regina; A. M. Eddy, 312-26th St. W., Saskatoon; H. D. Davis, 11-25th St. E., Prince Albert. British Columbia: Colin McDonald (chairman), 529 Beatty St., Vancouver; S. D. MacDonald, P.O. Box 286, Prince Rupert; James Wilson, 1054 Balmoral Rd., Victoria; William Watt, 531 Beatty St., Vancouver.

The provinces of New Brunswick and Alberta having organized provincial federations of labour, which are chartered by the Congress, no provincial executive committees are appointed. The only province in which there is no adjunct of the Congress is Prince Edward Island.

Fraternal Delegates to the American Federation of Labor.—W. V. Turnbull, vice-president of Brotherhood of Maintenance-of-Way Employees, 7302 Sherbrooke St. W., Montreal, Que.

Fraternal Delegate to the British Trades Union Congress.—Humphrey S. Mitchell, M.P., secretary, Hamilton and District Trades and Labour Council, 297 Houghton Ave. S., Hamilton, Ont.

III. ALL-CANADIAN CONGRESS OF LABOUR

Instituted in 1927 to Promote the interests of National and Independent Unions—Adopts the Principle of Industrial Unionism—Purposes of the Congress—No Convention Held in 1932—Membership—Officers of the Congress.

At a meeting held at Montreal in March, 1927 by representatives of certain organizations the All-Canadian Congress of Labour was instituted.

Following several conferences between representatives of the Canadian Federation of Labour and some of the other national unions, a preliminary meeting of representatives of such bodies was held in Toronto on November 22-23, 1926, at which gathering it was arranged to hold a convention in Montreal on March 16, 1927. Committees were appointed to call the convention and to draft a constitution. On February 4, 1927, an invitation was extended to all national and independent unions in Canada to send delegates to the proposed meeting, the call being signed by C. J. Whitley, secretary of the Canadian Federation of Labour, and M. M. Maclean, secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees. The convention, which opened in Montreal on March 16, was attended by 107 delegates representing the following eight organizations: Canadian Federation of Labour, Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees, One Big Union, Mine Workers' Union of Canada, Electrical Communication Workers of Canada, Canadian Electrical Trades Union, Amalgamated Carpenters of Canada, and the Canadian Federation of Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers. (The last named organization passed out of existence in 1929, and the Mine Workers' Union of Canada withdrew from affiliation in 1930). The organization meeting in Montreal was presided over by two chairmen—D. Giroux (of the Canadian Federation of Labour), and A. R. Mosher (of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees).

The conference adopted a resolution establishing the All-Canadian Congress of Labour, which is embodied in the preamble to the constitution as follows:—

Whereas, we the representatives of national and independent unions in Canada, meeting in convention in the city of Montreal, Quebec, on the 16th to the 19th of March, 1927, are convinced that

(a) the Canadian labour movement must be freed from the reactionary influence of United States-controlled unions;

(b) Canadian workers require a new organization through which they may collectively promote their general welfare and raise their economic and social standard;

(c) while the workers, under the present system cannot obtain the full value of their labour, it is nevertheless necessary to strive at all times to procure higher real wages and better conditions of labour;

(d) it is necessary to promote among the workers a thorough understanding of working-class economics;

Therefore, be it resolved, that a central body composed of the national and independent unions of Canada be here established to give expression to these aims and objects.

The Canadian Federation of Labour, having decided to merge its identity with the new congress, a committee was appointed to wind up its affairs, and in due course passed out of existence.

PURPOSES OF THE CONGRESS

The purposes of the All-Canadian Congress, as set forth in Article II of the constitution, are as follows:—

Article II.—Purposes.—The congress shall promote the interests of its affiliated organizations and strive to improve the economic and social conditions of the workers by:

(a) That organization of the workers in autonomous bodies for economic action, i.e., organization in the industrial field.

(b) Assisting the workers, through education, to realize the necessity of working-class political action.

(c) Furthering such legislation as shall be of immediate benefit to the workers, and which tends to increase their social and political power.

The head office of the congress is in Ottawa, where in 1930 the organization opened new offices in the building of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees.

MEMBERSHIP AND REPRESENTATION

The membership is derived from (a) affiliated national unions and (b) chartered independent local unions. Charters are also issued to central councils composed of delegates from national or independent unions identified with the congress, but such bodies have no representation at conventions of the congress, neither are they required to pay per capita tax. The representation at annual or special conventions is as follows: (a) Affiliated national unions, two delegates representing the general executive board and one delegate from each local unit, (b) independent local unions, one delegate each.

The revenue of the congress is derived as follows: (a) From affiliated national unions, two cents per member per month, (b) Local unions directly chartered by the congress, 15 cents per member per month, and 50 cents of each initiation fee.

At the second convention, held in 1928, the Congress accepted industrial unionism as its basic organizational principle. The sixth annual convention of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour, which was to have convened in Ottawa on November 7, 1932 was postponed by the executive board. The notification to the affiliated unions and chartered local unions, under date of October 14, read as follows:—

A year ago, on account of the prevailing unemployment and distress, and in compliance with a general request from the affiliated national unions, the Executive Board of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour postponed the fifth convention of the Congress until 1932. For the same reason the Board now feels itself compelled to announce a further postponement.

Last year it had been represented to the Board that the attendance at the convention, if held at the regular time, would show a marked decline in comparison with previous years, on account of the inability of many local units to meet the expense of sending delegates. An inquiry addressed to all the national unions confirmed this view: the unions were unanimously of the opinion that the postponement was desirable in the interests of the movement, and in several quarters strong objection was expressed to the holding of a convention at a time when every union was straining its resources to assist the unemployed and under-employed members.

In the circumstances, the Executive Board had to choose between a postponement and holding a convention at which the local units remote from the convention city would not be represented. Though reluctant to interrupt the sequence of the annual conventions, the Board was yet more reluctant to call a convention which would not be representative of the workers in the greater part of the country, and the fifth convention was therefore postponed. This year the Board finds itself faced with the same conditions. The anticipated improvement in employment has not occurred; instead, there has been a further decline. A truly representative convention could not be expected.

The Board is fully aware of the loss that is involved in the postponement of a convention. It knows that regular meetings attract public attention to the movement and stimulate the interest of the workers in organization. But it feels bound to give heed to the many pleas which have been received to refrain from impeding the work which is being carried on by the national unions, by imposing on them the obligation to expend upon the support of convention delegates funds which are urgently needed for organizing and other matters of immediate concern. The Board therefore hopes that the national and local unions will continue their organizing activities with all the more vigour and effect as the result of the postponement of the convention. What they have accomplished in the last year has proved what can be done, for the enrolment of new members by Canadian unions, combined with the transfer of members from foreign-controlled bodies, has been equal to the best records of less stressful times.

The Board also hopes that every union will continue to aid its unemployed and under-employed members and to co-operate with all efficient agencies for the relief and prevention of unemployment.

MEMBERS OF THE CONGRESS

At the close of 1932 the secretary reported the following central organizations in affiliation with the Congress: Amalgamated Building Workers of Canada; Amalgamated Carpenters of Canada; Bridge, Structural, Ornamental, Reinforced Iron Workers, Piledrivers and Riggers' Union; Canadian Association of Railway Enginemen, Conductors, Trainmen, Yardmen, Telegraphers and Dispatchers; Canadian Association of Stationary Engineers; Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees; Canadian Electrical Trades Union; Canadian Printers' Union; Electrical Communication Workers of Canada; National Union of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of Canada; Vancouver and District Waterfront Workers, and the One Big Union. The latter organization which withdrew in 1930 reaffiliated with the Congress before the end of the year. In addition to the above mentioned twelve organizations, one more than was recorded in 1931, there were 41 directly chartered unions, an increase of 10, with a combined membership of 4,073, an increase of 972. The total reported membership of the Congress at the close of 1932 was 50,356, an increase of 22,034, as compared with the year 1931. The Congress also had fourteen national councils under charters, the cities in which they were located appearing in Chapter XIII.

OFFICERS OF THE CONGRESS

President—A. R. Mosher (president of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees), Box 395, Ottawa, Ont.

Vice-Presidents—Z. David (of the Canadian Association of Railway Enginemen), 365 Cartier Park, Montreal, Que.; Johnston McKinley (of the Amalgamated Carpenters of Canada), 607-50th St. E., Vancouver, B.C.

Secretary-Treasurer—W. T. Burford (of the Electrical Communication Workers of Canada), 230 Laurier Ave. W., Ottawa, Ont.

Other Members of the Executive Board—G. W. McCollum (of the Canadian Electrical Trades Union), 109 Sherwood Ave., Toronto, Ont.; T. McGregor (of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees), 264 Martin Ave., Winnipeg, Man.; Harry Burgess (of the Vancouver and District Waterfront Workers), 4423 Belmont St., Vancouver, B.C.

IV. ONE BIG UNION

Formed in 1919 by Those Who Favoured a System of Industrial Unionism—Preamble to the Constitution—Numerical Standing of the Organization—Executive Board Members

The One Big Union, generally referred to as the O.B.U., had its origin at a meeting which took place at Calgary, in March, 1919. In 1918 the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada (referred to in a previous chapter) held its annual convention in the city of Quebec, which was attended by a number of delegates from the four western provinces. At this meeting proposals were presented by certain of these representatives and when such proposals did not receive the favourable consideration it was thought they deserved, it was decided to hold a delegate conference previous to the next meeting of the Trades Congress for the purpose of giving the western membership of the Congress an opportunity of formulating a policy which they might consider would be progressive, and one which it was believed would receive the support of the eastern delegates. The proposal for the western conference was later taken in hand by the British Columbia Federation of Labour, a body then under charter from the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, but which has since lapsed. The conference, which met in March, 1919, was attended by 237 delegates from western labour bodies and two from Ontario, and although it had been previously stated that the meeting was not intended as a secessionist movement, the second resolution adopted favoured the immediate reorganization of the workers along industrial lines. It was further resolved that the conference recommend that the existing branches of international organizations should sever their connection with such bodies. It was also decided that a referendum on the question be submitted to the entire Canadian trade union membership, and also that a proposed plan of the new organization, which on the report of the policy committee, became known as the One Big Union, be presented at the same time. A meeting of the advocates of the O.B.U. was held in Calgary on June 11, 1919, when the constitution tentatively agreed to in March, with certain amendments, was ratified, the preamble to which, setting forth the desire "to organize the wage-earners according to class and class needs," is as follows:—

> Modern industrial society is divided into two classes, those who possess and not produce, and those who produce and not possess. Alongside this main division all other classifications fade into insignificance. Between these two classes a continual struggle takes place. As with buyers and sellers of any commodity, there exists a struggle on the one hand of the buyer to buy as cheaply as possible, and on the other, of the seller to sell for as much as possible, so with the buyers and sellers of labour power. In the struggle over the purchase and sale of labour power the buyers are always masters—the sellers always workers. From this fact arises the inevitable class struggle.
> As industry develops and ownership becomes concentrated more and more into fewer hands; as the control of the economic forces of society become more and more the sole property of imperialistic finance, it becomes apparent that the workers, in order to sell their labour power with any degree of success, must extend their forms of organization in accordance with changing industrial methods. Compelled to organize for self-defence, they are further compelled to educate themselves in preparation for the social change which economic developments will produce whether they seek it or not.
> The One Big Union, therefore, seeks to organize the wage-earners according to class and class needs and calls upon all workers to organize irrespective of nationality, sex, or craft into a workers' organization, so that they may be enabled to more successfully carry on the everyday fight over wages, hours of work, etc., and prepare ourselves for the day when production for profit shall be replaced by production for use.

Directly following the formation of the O.B.U. (fuller details concerning which were given in this report for the years 1919 and 1920) the organization added considerably to its membership. Many members of some craft unions, principally those connected with railway shop work, identified themselves with the new industrial union. At the close of the year 1919 the reported membership was 41,150, comprised in 101 local units. The Trades and Labour Congress of Canada opposed the O.B.U., as did also the various international labour craft bodies, whose long established form of organization was being challenged. At the close of 1925, according to information received from the general secretary, the Canadian membership stood at 17,256 comprised in 53 local units.

LATER MEMBERSHIP FIGURES

At the close of 1931, according to the report of the secretary-treasurer, the O.B.U. had 46 local units in Canada and a rank and file unit in the United States, with a combined membership of 24,607. For 1932 the general secretary reported 47 local units in Canada, an increase of one, and a rank and file unit in the United States with a membership of 372, the Canadian membership being given at 23,340, a decrease of 895.

The report also contains the names of two central labour councils, located respectively in Fort William, Ont., and Winnipeg, Man.

General Executive Board of the One Big Union: Chairman, S. Sykes; Secretary, R. B. Russell; A. Meikle; William Arnberg; A. Broatch, and T. Roberts. Headquarters, 54 Adelaide St., Winnipeg, Man.

V. AMALGAMATED MINE WORKERS OF NOVA SCOTIA

Organized Provisionally June 19, 1932—Provincial Workmen's Association First Miners' Organization in Nova Scotia—United Mine Workers of America Extend Jurisdiction into Nova Scotia—Original Amalgamated Mine Workers Established in 1917—Advent of One Big Union and Mine Workers' Union of Canada in Nova Scotia—First Convention of Amalgamated Mine Workers of Nova Scotia—Adoption of Constitution—Membership and Chief Officers.

This organization was formed provisionally on June 19, 1932, by coal miners who had seceded from the United Mine Workers of America, the first annual convention being held and the constitution adopted at Glace Bay, N.S., from September 19 to 24. The name of the organization had been that of an earlier union formed in 1917 to unite rival organizations of coal miners, and which continued until 1919 when it became District 26 of the United Mine Workers of America.

The coal miners in Nova Scotia had first become organized under the Provincial Workmen's Association on August 29, 1879, but in December, 1908, the United Mine Workers of America extended the organization into Nova Scotia, the result being conflicts between the two unions and extensive strikes to secure recognition of the new organization from the mining companies. These being unsuccessful, the locals of the union gradually ceased to function and in 1915 the charter was withdrawn, but in 1916 an independent organization under the name of the United Mine Workers of Nova Scotia was formed. In 1917 the Amalgamated Mine Workers of Nova Scotia was established to unite the Provincial Workmen's Association and the rival organization. This was done on the recommendation of a Royal Commission and the new organization entered into agreements with the principal mine operators, renewing the agreements with the Provincial Workmen's Association with amendments providing for wage increases.

In February, 1919, the Amalgamated Miners of Nova Scotia and the coal miners who were members of the Federation of Labour, a separate organization in Pictou County since 1917, decided to join the United Mine Workers of America, the previous charter for District 26, covering Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, being reissued, and the operators agreed to recognize the union and renew the existing agreements with amendments providing for the eight-hour day. In 1923, the district charter was suspended by the International President of the United Mine Workers of America on the ground that the officers had violated the agreement with the operators by calling the miners out on strike in protest against the calling out of the militia during a strike of steel workers. The district officers were expelled from the union and provisional officers, appointed by the international president, ordered the men back to work and administered the district until 1924 when the charter was restored. A movement to form a new union of coal miners in Nova Scotia soon appeared. The One Big Union organized local units in various localities in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick but most of these continued for a short time only. The Mine Workers Union of Canada (later affiliated with the Workers' Unity League of Canada), which had locals in Alberta entered the field and established a local in Westville in May, 1928, which was subsequently recognized by the operating company there. The adherents of the Communist Party were particularly active in advocating a more "militant" miners' organization in Nova Scotia and in the early part of 1932 the Mine Workers' Union of Canada entered upon an aggresive campaign to secure the adherence of coal miners in Nova Scotia to their organization. The movement for another coal miners' union in Nova Scotia had become intensified during the negotiations between the United Mine Workers of America, District 26, and the Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation Limited regarding a reduction in wages on the expiration of the existing agreement on January 31, 1932. The Commission recommended a reduction of ten per cent subject to certain limitations and the permanent closing down of certain mines employing about two thousand miners. The miners voted against agreeing to these proposals which, however, were put into effect by the mining companies. After a special convention and further negotiations, the union members voted in favour of accepting the reduction and an agreement was signed. Three locals in the Glace Bay sub-district were debarred from voting, under the constitution of the union, being in arrears for dues. At a subsequent sub-district convention four locals voted in favour of a provincial organization and the new union was formed and provincial officers elected.

FIRST CONVENTION OF NEW UNION

Following the formation of the Amalgamated Mine Workers the executive officers, backed by the local unions at No. 1 B, Reserve, Dominion No. 11 and Phalen mines, which were the basis of the organization, undertook to organize the miners into the new union. Votes were taken in some of the United Mine Workers' local unions on the question of linking up with the Amalgamated Mine Workers, and in the instances made public the majority favoured the new union, although in one case there was a dispute as to the result of the vote, both sides claiming a majority. At the first convention held in Glace Bay on September 19-24, 1932, there were delegates present from sixteen local unions and among the fraternal delegates was one from the Workers' Unity League.

A constitution was adopted by the delegates, the preamble to which is as follows:—

Modern society is divided into two classes: those who produce and do not possess and those who possess and do not produce. Alongside of this main division all other classifications fade into insignificance. Between these two classes a continual struggle always exists.

The capitalist class now owns and controls the means of production and raw material together with the finished product, and is using the same solely in the interest of their own class, and therefore must be diametrically opposed to the interest of the non-owning working or producing class. We therefore, call upon all workers engaged in the production of all industries, employed or unemployed, regardless of race, colour, creed, or occupation, to organize into industrial affiliated organizations for the purpose of protecting their interests against the encroachments of the capitalist exploiting class, having the abolition of the wage system as their ultimate goal, by taking over the raw material, the machinery of production, and the means of distribution and convert same to render service to all humanity, instead of the present economic system of production for profits only, for the non-producing owning class and the exploitation of the producing non-owning class.

We firmly believe that the capitalistic system can no more function efficiently, and that we can expect only intensified exploitation and unemployment with all the misery and privations that follow in its wake until a new system is ushered in which will economically emancipate the workers from wage slavery which robs them at the point of production.

The following are the objects of the Amalgamated Mine Workers as set forth in the constitution:—

(1) To organize all workers regardless of occupation according to class needs, to work ceaselessly in the interest of their class; (2) Non-contributory unemployment insurance, full maintenance during periods of enforced idleness, sickness or accidents. Improvement of living standards, wages, working hours, and enact legislation for the benefit and protection of all workers generally; (3) To educate the workers as to their class position in society and show them the way out from capitalist exploitation to their economic emancipation; (4) To assist all workers during labour disputes or lockouts by financial contributions and our economic strength when necessary; (5) To insist upon all workers having committees of themselves to inspect mines and workshops.

Article III of the constitution reads as follows:—

(1) The supreme power of the organization lies in the referendum vote of the rank and file membership; (2) The district shall pay all expenses incurred in the conducting of all district elections; (3) That no lawyer be ever consulted or engaged in connection with any agreement, settlement of grievances or internal work of the union. Consultation with a lawyer to be only in purely criminal or legal cases. In all union work such as agreements, settlement of grievances or internal work of the union we will rely always on the advice, guidance, and counsel of members of our own organization; (4) This organization shall always remain a purely workers' organization and shall as far as possible be kept from all political influences, or anything which tends to disrupt the ranks of our organization. The business of the organization shall be confined to looking after the individual business of its members; (5) That May 1st (May day) and June 11th (Davis day) be recognized as constitutional holidays by this organization.

The jurisdiction of the union consists of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, and is divided into sub-districts as follows: No. 1, Glace Bay; No. 2, Sydney Mines; No. 3, New Waterford; No. 4, Pictou and Antigonish counties; No. 5, Cumberland county and New Brunswick; No. 6, Inverness and other localities which may be added by the executive board. Other sections of the constitution detail the duties of officers, sub-district councils, district conventions, etc.

The membership of the Amalgamated Mine Workers of Nova Scotia at the close of 1932 was 7,801, comprised in 21 local unions. The chief officers of the organization are: President, John A. McDonald, Box 9, Glace Bay; Secretary, Robert R. Stewart, Box 9, Glace Bay.

VI. INDUSTRIAL WORKERS OF THE WORLD

Formed in 1905 in Opposition to the Existing Craft Unions—Advocate Abolition of the Wage System—Preamble to the Constitution—The I. W. W. in Canada—First Canadian I. W. W. Conference—Membership—Chief Officers.

The Industrial Workers of the World (generally referred to as the I. W. W.) is an organization which stands in direct opposition to the trade union movement as represented by the American Federation of Labor, (referred to in an earlier chapter) and the great majority of the labour unions operating in Canada and the United States. The organization was established in 1905, and has for its objective the abolition of the present wage system. It is an advocate of what it terms revolutionary industrial unionism. Among the founders of the movement were Eugene V. Debs, William D. Haywood and Daniel De Leon, leader of the Socialist Labour Party, all of whom are now deceased. The original members besides metal miners consisted chiefly of unskilled and migratory workers, the membership at the close of the first year being reported at 400,000.

PRINCIPLES OF THE I.W.W.

The principles of the I.W.W., as set forth in the preamble to the constitution which was adopted in 1908, are as follows:—

The working class and the employing class have nothing in common. There can be no peace so long as hunger and want are found among the millions of working people, and the few who make up the employing class have all the good things of life.

Between these two classes a struggle must go on until the workers of the world organize as a class, take possession of the earth and the machinery of production, and abolish the wage system.

We find that the centering of the management of industries into fewer and fewer hands makes the trade unions unable to cope with the ever-growing power of the employing class. The trade unions foster a state of affairs which allows one set of workers to be pitted against another set of workers in the same industry, thereby helping defeat one another in wage wars. Moreover, the trade unions aid the employing class to mislead the workers into the belief that the working class have interests in common with their employers.

These conditions can be changed and the interest of the working class upheld only by an organization formed in such a way that all its members in any one industry, or in all industries, if necessary, cease work whenever a strike or lockout is on in any department thereof, thus making an injury to one an injury to all.

Instead of the conservative motto: "A fair day's wage for a fair day's work," we must inscribe on our banner the revolutionary watchword, "Abolition of the wage system."

It is the historic mission of the working class to do away with capitalism. The army of production must be organized, not only for the everyday struggle with capitalists, but also to carry on production when capitalism shall have been overthrown. By organizing industrially we are forming the structure of the new society within the shell of the old.

The early history of the organization was recorded in previous issues of this report.

THE I.W.W. IN CANADA

One of the original affiliates of the I.W.W. was the Western Federation of Miners (previously mentioned), and which had a number of branches in Canada. Other branches of the I.W.W. comprising workers other than miners were also established in certain localities in Western Canada. In 1910 the miners' organization left the I.W.W. and was granted affiliation in the American Federation of Labor. The local branches outside the Western Federation continued to operate, but gradually they passed out of existence, the last remaining Canadian branch disappearing in 1915. Although adherents of the I.W.W. were known to be located in various parts of the Dominion, no move appears to have been made to re-establish branches until 1922, when the Vancouver branch of the Lumber Workers' Industrial Union, No. 120, a chartered body of the I.W.W., was formed. The establishment of this branch of the I.W.W. was brought about through the Lumber Workers' Industrial Union of Canada, an independent body, becoming an affiliate of the Red International of Labour Unions. To this proceeding certain members objected; some of them subsequently became identified with the I.W.W., and these were responsible for the formation of the Vancouver branch.

FIRST CANADIAN I.W.W. CONFERENCE

By the action taken early in 1932, through a referendum vote, a Canadian administration for the I.W.W. membership in the Dominion, was established, the powers conferred being as follows:—

(a) The officials of the Canadian administration of the I.W.W. shall be a secretary treasurer, who shall be officially designated "Canadian secretary-treasurer," and an executive board which shall be officially designated "Canadian Executive Board." The duties and powers of the above-named officials shall bear the same relation to the Canadian membership as the present general officials of the I.W.W. under the present constitution, with such exceptions as may be hereafter designated or adopted by general conventions of the I.W.W., or emergency rulings of the general administration of the I.W.W.

(b) The Canadian administration shall have the power to determine all initiation fees, dues and assessments under its jurisdiction.

(c) The Canadian administration shall be empowered to publish literature and establish a press. All literature and press policies shall be sanctioned by the general administration of the I.W.W.

The Canadian administration is under the supervision of the general administration, whose head office is in Chicago, and from whom the Canadian administration shall purchase all supplies, due books and due stamps and shall pay 2 cents per due stamp and 15 cents for cash due book, plus duty and shipping charges, but the general administration may at its discretion authorize the Canadian section to manufacture such supplies as are needed.

The first conference of the Canadian administration of the I.W.W. met in Port Arthur, the Canadian headquarters, on September 12, 1932, with seventeen delegates and members in attendance. With the object of bringing back into the organization unemployed members and of retaining the present out-of-work members it was decided to reduce the initiation fee to 20 cents and the monthly dues to 5 cents, and those who are employed to pay the initiation fee of $1 and monthly dues of 25 cents. For the purpose of raising funds to conduct organization work a 25 cent stamp was decided upon which may be sold to all persons whether or not they are members of the I.W.W.

The conference adopted a resolution urging the release of what were termed "class war prisoners."

A message was sent to the newly-formed Amalgamated Mine Workers of Nova Scotia, which extended congratulations in "your victorious fight against the autocratic and treacherous rule of the United Mine Workers of America officialdom." Proceeding the message said: "We see in the formation of the Amalgamated Miners' Union of Nova Scotia a forward step in the direction of the ultimate aim of labour: The welding together of the bonds of solidarity within the ranks of Canadian workers for the final abolition of the wages system and the creation of a new distributive system wherein the toiler is guaranteed the full product of his labour. May the ranks of labour be still further solidified with this end in view by the amalgamation of all workers into a real one big union, of which the Industrial Workers of the World is the original exponent."

The conference urged all workers to rally to the standard of the I.W.W. for the six-hour day and five-day week with no reduction in pay, and for the final abolition of the wage system.

The date of the first annual convention of the Canadian administration was set for May 7, 1933, at Port Arthur, Ont.

The general executive board of the Canadian administration consists of five members as follows: J. D. Golden, Ivar Lehdon and Luis Battaglia, 60 Cordova St. W., Vancouver, B.C.; Jalmar Salmi and Nick Viita, 314 Bay St., Port Arthur, Ont. Sec.-Treas., H. J. Lindholm, whose address is also 314 Bay St., Port Arthur, Ont.

NUMERICAL STRENGTH OF THE I.W.W.

Following its formation in 1905 the I.W.W. claimed a membership of 400,000, but the actual number of paid-up members was considerably below this figure. In 1906 the membership was reported at 60,000, but in 1913 it had declined to approximately 14,000. During the next four years the membership showed a large increase being given at about 90,000 in the latter part of 1917. From a membership of approximately 12,000 in 1921, the numerical strength of the organization fluctuated considerably, the number of members in 1929 being reported at 26,325 of whom 3,975 were located in Canada; for 1930 the membership was 23,993, of whom 3,741 were in Canada. In 1931 the Canadian membership was reported at 3,466 with a total membership of 21,596. The head office failed to supply the membership for 1932, the figures for 1931 being repeated. The number of members in Canada was reported at 3,618 a gain of 152, comprised in 8 local branches, 3 more than in 1931.

The convention of the I.W.W. held in Chicago, Ill., in November, 1931, decided to consolidate the two official English language papers—Industrial Solidarity and the Industrial Worker, the latter being the official western organ, with office in Seattle, Wash. Under the new arrangement the Industrial Worker becomes the only official English language paper, with office in Chicago, Industrial Solidarity discontinuing publication. The I.W.W. also has official papers in Finnish, Hungarian, Italian, Czechoslovakian and Spanish languages.

The general secretary is Joseph Wagner, 2422 North Halsted St., Chicago, Ill.

VII. NATIONAL CATHOLIC UNIONS

Inception of Catholic Unions in Quebec—Pope Pius XI Amplifies Encyclical of Pope Leo XIII—Federation of Catholic Workers—Principles and Aims—Attendance at 1932 Convention—Canada Only British Country Having Catholic Unions—International Federation of Christian Trade Unions—Membership of Catholic Unions in Canada—Names of Chief Officers.

Apart from the labour bodies discussed in previous chapters, there is the group known as National Catholic syndicates, whose plan of organization is based on the principle of craft unionism, and whose operations are confined almost entirely to the Province of Quebec. The National Catholic Unions accept for their guidance the declarations of Pope Leo XIII, contained in an encyclical, Rerum Novarum, on "The Conditions of the Working Classes," dated May 15, 1891, and which declares "These workingmen's associations should be organized and governed as to furnish the best and most suitable means for attempting what it aimed at, that is to say, for helping each member to better his condition to the utmost in body, soul and property." Yet that it is clear "that they must pay special and chief attention to the duties of religion and morality, and that social betterment should have this chiefly in view" for "the foundation of social laws being thus laid in religion, it is not hard to establish the relations of members one to another, in order that they may live together in concord and achieve prosperity." The provisions of this encyclical were subsequently proclaimed by Pope Pius X as fundamental rules for workingmen's associations, and further amplified by Pope Pius XI in his encyclical Quadragesimo Anno, dated May 23, 1931.

FEDERATION OF CATHOLIC WORKERS

As the Catholic syndicate movement grew there developed an agitation for a central body, in which the work of the various unions could be co-ordinated. Accordingly a meeting of representatives from national unions was held in the city of Quebec in September, 1918, there being 27 unions represented. A report submitted to the meeting stated that there were in existence 41 national Catholic unions (bodies to which none but adherents of the Roman Catholic faith are admitted) and seventeen other national unions, which were termed neutral, membership being open to workers of all denominations. These latter unions, it is understood, are not now in existence, their disappearance possibly being accounted for in part by the fact that, though national Catholic unions are designed ostensibly for adherents of the Roman Catholic faith, provision is made for the admittance of non-Catholic as associate members who may vote, but are not eligible for office. When non-Catholic membership of a union reaches fifty they may form a non-Catholic section of the national Catholic body and elect their own officers.

Following the meeting of delegates in 1918 other conventions of representatives of the national Catholic unions were held regularly each year, and in 1921, at the meeting held in Hull, with 220 delegates in attendance, a central organization was established under the name of Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada, and a set of rules adopted. (These rules were published in this report for 1921.) The preparation of the principles of the Federation was referred to the religious authorities, and as incorporated in the constitution define the Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada as an interprofessional labour organization, uniting together the various labour groups in Canada which have the double character of being national and Catholic. The full text of these principles and of the aims and objects appeared in the last annual Report on Labour Organization in Canada.

On August 12, 1930, the federation was registered under the Professional Syndicates Act of the Province of Quebec.

The Federation of Catholic Workers has met regularly each year since its formation in 1921, that for 1932 being opened in Sherbrooke on August 7, and which was attended by 103 delegates, representing 68 bodies, including central councils, federations, study circles and local syndicates. The financial statement showed receipts for the fiscal year of $8,967.50 and expenses $8,724.25, leaving a balance of $243.25.

The proposal of the 1930 convention for affiliation with the International Federation of Christian Trade Unions (a body later referred to), which was submitted to the executive board, has not been determined.

A CHAPLAIN FOR EACH CATHOLIC BODY

The constitution of the Federation of Catholic Workers provides for the appointment of a general chaplain, selected by the religious authorities. The section governing the powers of the chaplain reads as follows:—

The general chaplain is by right a member of all congresses of the federation and of the federal bureau. He may attend the meeting of all the committees formed by the federation or send a representative. He exercises, in deliberations, the same rights as those exercised by delegates or members belonging to the congress whereat such discussions take place, and is subject, like them, to the usual rules of procedure.

The chaplain does not vote. The general chaplain may attend the meetings and take part in the proceedings of any organization affiliated with the federation.

The chaplain depends solely, in the exercise of his functions, on the religious authorities by which he was appointed.

The general chaplain has the right to give his personal opinion on any question, like all delegates; but his proper function is to represent the church among the Catholic syndicated workmen. It is for him to state and recall, whenever it is needed, the Catholic principles and doctrine, and he only fills his mission when he asks the congress and the committees to make their resolutions and conduct conform to the Catholic principles and doctrine.

The general chaplain may demand that a resolution which, in his judgment, would affect Catholic morals or the teachings of the church, be submitted to the religious authorities and approved by them before being put in force.

The general chaplain of the federation has charge of the superior interests of the souls, of society and of religion. He is entitled, on the part of the delegates, to all the consideration and respect which are due to the religious authorities which he represents.

Each delegate body and local national Catholic syndicate also has a chaplain, appointed by the religious authorities, whose powers are similar to those of the general chaplain for the Federation of Catholic Workers.

FEDERATIONS AND SECRETARIATS

The national Catholic unions of closely allied and particular trades have, like the non-secretarian trade unions, established federations (delegate bodies referred to in a later chapter of this report). In the city of Quebec in 1920 there was formed the secretariat of Catholic syndicates, which is designed to have charge of the various matters affecting the activities and development of the local organizations. In the secretariat in Quebec city are located the headquarters of the Federation of Catholic Workers and of the Catholic Federation of Pulp and Paper Factory Employees, as well as the offices of a number of business agents. There are also secretariats in Montreal, Three Rivers, Chicoutimi, Sherbrooke, St. Hyacinthe, and the diocese of Ottawa, that in the first-named place being the headquarters of the federations of the building and printing trades. The Montreal secretariat publishes an official organ for the national Catholic unions in its jurisdiction, the title of the publication being La Vie Syndicale. The Catholic union movement, as previously stated, has city central councils, bodies similar to trades and labour councils, a chapter concerning which appears in this report.

CANADA ONLY BRITISH COUNTRY HAVING CATHOLIC UNIONS

According to information available, Canada is the only British country in which there are trade unions or syndicates designed chiefly for adherents of the Roman Catholic church, and all such syndicates are located in the Province of Quebec. In Great Britain there was at one time an organization known as the Catholic Federation which was composed of Roman Catholics generally for particular Catholic purposes, and included in its membership adherents of the faith who were trade unionists. Besides this body there was also in England the National Conference of Catholic Trade Unionists which was composed exclusively of Catholic members of trade unions, but in both cases these trade unionists were supposed to confine their activities to defending Roman Catholic interests inside the existing non-sectarian trade unions. According to information received in the department in 1930, both of the above-mentioned organizations have made several attempts to function, but the Roman Catholics in Great Britain would not sever their connection with the regular trade unions and no religious difficulty is experienced. As a result, it was reported, the two English organizations gradually died out.

INTERNATIONAL FEDERATION OF CHRISTIAN TRADE UNIONS

The first Catholic trade unions (or Christian unions as they are called in Europe) were established in Germany by Bishop Katteler, assisted by the clergy, over sixty years ago. Since that time the Christian trade union movement has spread to other European countries, there now being central federated bodies of such unions in Austria, Belgium, Czechoslovakia, France, Germany, Hungary, Jugoslavia, Luxemburg, Netherlands, Spain and Switzerland. These several organizations, which according to the latest reports had a membership of over a million and a half, are brought together in the International Federation of Christian Trade Unions, which was established at The Hague in June, 1920. There are also fifteen Christian trade internationals operating in Europe, and which embrace the following classes of workers: General employees, building workers, factory and transport workers, printing workers, wood workers, clothing workers, agricultural workers, metal workers, mining workers, postal, telegraph and telephone workers, railway workers, tobacco workers, textile workers, food workers, and public employees.

Article II of the statutes of the International Federation of Christian Trade Unions sets forth that—"The confederation adopts as a basis Christian principles. It therefore affirms that economic and social life implies the collaboration of all children of the same people. It therefore repudiates violence and class strife on the part of the employers as well as on that of the workers. The confederation reckons the present economical and social order is on essential points in contradiction with the Christian spirit. It endeavours to thoroughly modify society in accordance with these principles by following a process of evolution organic and legal. The confederation has above all for its objects the defence of the interests of the workers and employees from a viewpoint of the economic, social and public order conditions through general collaboration."

The objects of the confederation are set forth in the bylaws as follows:—

(a) Defend the workers' interests on the basis of the principles set forth in Article II, in the economic field, and specially in the field of international organizations of labour, wages, working conditions and labour legislation;

(b) Favour the interests of the organizations of affiliated confederations;

(c) Carry on propaganda in favour of the Christian syndicalist movement in the various countries where it does not yet exist, and promote the affiliation of organizations on a Christian basis which are not yet affiliated;

(d) Encourage mutual financial support between the affiliated confederations.

Besides the syndicates of Catholic workpeople affiliated with the Christian Federation of Trade Unions there are also identified with it unions composed of Protestants. The German Christian Syndicates are in great part composed of Protestant workers jointly with Catholic workers. In the Netherlands and in Switzerland there are both federations of Catholic workers and of Protestant workers, each of which is in affiliation with the International Federation.

The president of the International Federation of Christian Trade Unions is Bernard Otte, Kaiserallee 25, Berlin, Wilmersdorf, Germany, and the secretary, P. J. S. Serrarens, Drift 12, Utrecht, Holland.

NUMERICAL STRENGTH OF CATHOLIC SYNDICATES IN CANADA

The year 1919 is the earliest date for which information is available as to the membership of the national Catholic unions in Canada. In that year the standing was reported at 31,000; in 1920 the membership was reported at 40,000; in 1921 at 45,000; in 1922 at 38,335; in 1923 at 30,000; in 1924, 1925, 1926 and 1927 at 25,000; in 1928 the membership was reported by the Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada to be 26,000; in 1929 and 1930 at 25,000, in 1931, at 25,151, and for 1932 the number of members in National Catholic unions in the Dominion was given at 25,000, comprised in 102 local syndicates and 7 study circles, the latter of which according to an amendment to the constitution of the Federation of Catholic Workers passed at the 1926 convention, are also entitled to representation in the federation, provided the delegate is also a member in good standing of an affiliated national Catholic union. In addition to the local bodies the Catholic trade unionists have five trade federations, eight central councils and seven local federations, bodies similar in character to those operating under the auspices of the non-sectarian unions, and which are discussed in separate chapters of this report. The above mentioned delegate bodies are directly chartered by the Federation of Catholic Workers. Nearly all of the local bodies are also identified with the federation either by direct affiliation or through their connection with the trade federations or central councils. Reports received direct from 61 of the local syndicates give a combined membership of 6,755.

During the year 1932, 12 national Catholic unions, and a building trades council in St. Hyacinthe were organized, while 24 unions, and a central council in Lachine were dissolved.

The location of the various National Catholic Unions will be found in Table 3 (Trade Union Branches by Cities and Towns), page 98.

The chief officers of the Federation are: President, Osias Filion, 1231 De Montigny St. E., Montreal, Que. Sec., Rene Bernard, 1231 De Montigny St. E., Montreal, Que.

VIII. WORKERS' UNITY LEAGUE OF CANADA

Organized in 1930—Function—Composition—Plan of Organization—Fraternal Relations—Affiliates—Secretary of National Executive Board.

The Workers' Unity League of Canada, the function of which is to organize industrial labour unions, was organized in 1930. It was stated in the 1931 issue of the Report on Labour Organization in Canada that the Workers' Unity League of Canada was the Canadian section of the Red International of Labour Unions with headquarters in Moscow. During 1932 this affiliation is stated by the officials of the League to have terminated. According to the amended constitution adopted at the second convention, the League is constituted as shown in the following extracts taken from the constitution:—

(1) National industrial unions.
(2) National rank and file movements.
(3) Local industrial unions in industries where there are no national industrial unions, national militant rank and file movements or militant rank and file groups.
(4) Members at large.

PLAN OF ORGANIZATION

(a) Industrial union plan, on the principle of "one factory, one industry, one union," departmentalized for the important sections of the industry.
(b) The factory, mine, shop, mill, camp, dock or ship organization as the basic unit of the union.
(c) The principle of democratic centralism, expressed in:
  (1) Democratic election and right of recall of all executive organs of the union.
  (2) Inner union democracy based upon the maximum initiative and activity of the entire membership.
  (3) An authoritative executive board shall lead the work in the union.
(d) The majority of the union executive board and other leading organs should consist of workers employed in the industry.
(e) In industries where youth are employed the unions are to organize youth sections in the local organizations.
(f) Special departments are to be established in the leading organs to conduct work among the youth and women workers.
(g) Initiation fees within the possibilities of the lowest paid workers, and to be framed upon a sliding scale.
(h) Universal free transfer of members from one union to another if the member is in good standing.
(i) Building up of strike funds in each national union.
(j) Officers' salaries not to exceed the average wage in the industry.
(k) Active support of Workers Unity.

FRATERNAL RELATIONS

The Workers' Unity League of Canada shall strive to strengthen and improve its existing fraternal relationships with the Red International of Labour Unions, the Minority Movement of Great Britain and the Trade Union Unity League of the U.S.A. (without entering into any organic relations or connections with any of these organizations) and will seek to achieve fraternal co-operation with these organizations in the various trade union campaigns in the course of the struggles.

The Workers' Unity League of Canada had three central bodies in affiliation in 1932, viz., the Industrial Union of Needle Trades Workers of Canada, the Lumber Workers' Industrial Union of Canada and the Mine Workers' Union of Canada.

The Industrial Union of Needle Trades Workers of Canada was officially established at a conference of needle trades workers held in Toronto, August 4-5, 1928, as an independent organization, having for its object the organizing of all workers in all branches of the needle industry in Canada, the manufacturing of men's and women's clothing and furs. In 1930 the union was re-organized on a shop delegate basis and became an affiliate of the Workers' Unity League.

The Mine Workers' Union of Canada came into existence in 1925 being composed of local organizations of miners who had seceded from the United Mine Workers of America in Alberta. The union became an affiliate of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour following the establishment of the latter in 1927. On May 11, 1931, by a referendum vote the union decided to become affiliated with the Workers' Unity League of Canada thus terminating its connection with the All-Canadian Congress of Labour.

The Lumber Workers' Industrial Union of Canada shortly after coming into existence as the British Columbia Loggers' Union joined the One Big Union in 1919 but the western section of the organization with headquarters in Vancouver withdrew and became an Independent union. The Ontario section in 1924 also withdrew and joined the Industrial Workers of the World, but later a majority of these workers decided to withdraw from the latter organization and form a Canadian union, to be known as the Lumber Workers' Union of Canada. When the All-Canadian Congress of Labour was formed it became an affiliate At the convention held in 1930 the union decided to affiliate with the Workers' Unity League of Canada.

In addition to the above mentioned central bodies the League has a number of directly chartered branches, including furniture workers, boot and shoe workers, fur dressers, food workers, fishermen, relief camp workers, domestic servants, and cleaners and dyers. The reported membership of the three central bodies is 12,500 but no information was received as to the membership of the directly chartered branches.

The secretary of the National Executive Board is Thomas C. Sims, with headquarters located at 68A Adelaide St. E., Toronto, Ont.

IX. OTHER CANADIAN CENTRAL LABOUR BODIES

Group of Trade Union Organizations Operating Exclusively in the Dominion—Three New Bodies Formed during the Year, while one Ceased to Function—Change made in Name of Lumber and Agricultural Workers' Industrial Union of Canada—Five Associations of Government Employees—Ten Organizations Unaffiliated.

In addition to the organizations which are discussed in preceding chapters there is another important group composed of Canadian Labour bodies whose jurisdiction is confined exclusively to the Dominion.

There are three organizations whose names appear in this chapter for the first time, viz., Amalgamated Mine Workers of Nova Scotia; Canadian Association of Seamen and the Native Brotherhood of British Columbia.

The Amalgamated Mine Workers of Nova Scotia (discussed in Chapter V) was formed June 19, 1932. Previous to the formation of the organization, sub-district No. 1 (Cape Breton) called a convention, at which it was decided to take a vote in the local unions on the question of organization. The sub-district had an estimated membership of about seven thousand comprised in seven local unions, and of these it is stated four locals voted in favour of a new organization for the miners of Nova Scotia. At the meeting of June 19, in addition to electing provisional officers, it was decided that the head office be located in Glace Bay, that the dues be fifty cents per month and that the local branches collect the fees from their own members.

The Canadian Association of Seamen was formed at Vancouver on April 24, 1931, by seamen employed in the deck, catering and engine room departments of ships under Canadian registry. The objects of the Association are: (1) To promote generally the interests of seamen employed on ships of Canadian registry; (2) To promote and maintain amicable relations between members and their employers and to assist in arranging and maintaining mutually advantageous terms and conditions of employment; (3) To provide sick and other benefits for its members and their families; (4) To promote educational and recreational advantages and facilities for members, and (5) To co-operate with other societies having objects of a similar nature. No applicant for membership will be considered unless he can show proof of Canadian citizenship, or proof of legality in Canada, and proof of previous sea service. It is the expressed intention of the Association to extend their jurisdiction by opening a branch in Eastern Canada, where already there are members in affiliation. The secretary reports that the organization is making application for affiliation with the All-Canadian Congress of Labour.

The Native Brotherhood of British Columbia, which is composed of Indian fishermen, came into existence at a conference held in Port Simpson, B.C., on December 15-18, 1931. The organization was formed for the betterment of the conditions of the Indians socially, mentally and physically, and is designed to be legislative, executive and judicial, and may establish branches in all native villages. Conventions are to be held annually and delegates shall be appointed from each branch. The officers of the brotherhood consist of president, vice-president, general secretary, general treasurer, general recording secretary and an executive committee consisting of two from each village branch of the brotherhood. The membership fee for 1932 was 50 cents.

Information concerning the inception and the objects of the other Canadian central labour bodies has appeared in previous issues of this report.

The Federated Seafarers' Union of Canada has ceased to function and is dropped from the list.

During the year the Lumber and Agricultural Workers' Industrial Union of Canada dropped the word agricultural from the title, it being stated that no headway had been made in organizing agricultural workers.

With these changes the number of Canadian central organizations stands at 27—two more than the number recorded in 1931. Four of the organizations mentioned in this group are composed of employees in the service of the Dominion Government and one comprises Provincial Government employees, the latter and one of the first-named being affiliates of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada (referred to in an earlier chapter), and thus are indirectly identified with the international trade union movement as represented by the Congress. Of the four remaining organizations the National Association of Marine Engineers and the Provincial Federation of Ontario Fire Fighters are not in conflict with any international body. Besides the five associations of Government employees above mentioned there are a large number of other bodies of civil servants, but as no claim is made that they should be classed as trade unions, their names are not mentioned in this group. They are, however, given a place in a subsequent chapter entitled "Non-Trade Union Associations." Eleven of the organizations in this chapter are affiliated with the All-Canadian Congress of Labour, three are connected with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, three are identified with the Workers' Unity League (referred to in the previous chapter), and the remaining seven are not identified with any organization. A complete list of the organizations referred to in this chapter will be found in Table 3.

X. FEDERATIONS OF TRADE UNIONS

Functions, Jurisdiction and Composition of Important Delegate Bodies, Including Provincial Federations of Labour, Building and Printing Trades Councils, Federations of Railway Shop Mechanics, and Municipal Employees—Division by Groups—List of Federations, with Names and Addresses of Presidents and Secretaries.

With the object of co-ordinating the activities of closely allied trades, the plan of labour organization as developed on the North American continent provides for the establishment of federated bodies. A number of these federations have been formed in Canada, the larger number comprising railway shop mechanics.

The affiliated branch unions, which are represented at the meeting of the respective federations by elected delegates, are required to pay a per capita tax for the upkeep of the federated organization with which they are identified. While the jurisdiction of most of these delegate bodies is confined to a particular locality, some of them include the shop mechanics on a railway system, others cover all organized workers in a whole province, and in three instances they are formed on a Dominion-wide basis, the latter being Division No. 4, Railway Employees' Department, A.F. of L., Canadian National System Federation No. 11 and C.P.R. System Federation No. 125, all of which embrace railway shop employees. While some of the federations meet annually, those of a local character meet more frequently.

Working under charter from the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, there are two provincial federations of labour, with jurisdiction covering their respective provinces. Membership in provincial federations include (1) trades and labour councils; (2) international and national local branch unions and (3) federal labour unions, bodies usually representing trades over which no existing central organizing union claims jurisdiction. Annual meetings are held at which legislative and other matters of concern to wage earners are considered. The legislative demands which have been adopted at the conventions are presented to the respective Provincial Governments by the executive officers who may be accompanied by representatives of affiliated local unions.

All of the building trades councils, except that in Niagara Falls and the National Building Trades League of Toronto, are affiliates of the Building Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor, and as such have full autonomy over all matters affecting all organized workmen in their respective localities engaged in the building industry, when in conformity with the laws and decisions of the Building Trades Department. No local council is permitted to enter into any agreement with an association of employers unless such agreement has been submitted to and approved by the majority of the membership in a referendum vote. The National Building Trades League of Toronto was formed in February, 1932, and is composed of three delegates from each of the local national unions in the building trades. In addition to discussing trade matters the object of the league is to encourage co-operation amongst the various workers in the building trades with a view to later welding them into one organization.

Local allied printing trades councils are provided for in the agreement made between the five printing trades organizations (International Brotherhood of Bookbinders, International Printing Pressmen's Union, International Stereotypers and Electrotypers' Union, International Photo-Engravers' Union and the International Typographical Union) under date of March 7, 1911, and under which there was established the International Allied Printing Trades Association. Local councils may adopt rules for their governance provided they are in accord with the general laws of the Printing Trades Association, and are designed in part to be the agents through which the allied printing trades union label may be issued to printing firms conforming to the necessary conditions. The Ottawa and District Printing Trades Federation was formed in April, 1930, and includes the membership of the local branches of the International Typographical Union, International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union, International Brotherhood of Bookbinders, International Photo-Engravers' Union, and International Stereotypers and Electrotypers' Union. The purpose of the federation is to (1) promote and preserve an effective co-operation between the affiliated unions, (2) engage in an intensive organization compaign on behalf of the associated unions, and (3) undertake the promotion of the general welfare of the membership of the associated unions and to work to secure recognition of the member unions and the establishment of unionized conditions in Ottawa and district. The federation, which is supported by a nominal per capita tax, is the official medium for giving expression to the aims and desires of the affiliated unions, but no action is to be taken on any question until the matter has been ratified by the affiliates. The federation permits the associated unions to maintain their local autonomy as set forth in the constitutions of their respective central organizations and has no control over the matter of wage negotiations. The Montreal Federation of Printing and Kindred Trades, which embraces the local branches of the same unions as are included in the Ottawa body, with the addition of that of the Amalgamated Lithographers of America, was established in November, 1928, one of its objects being "to bring about a closer understanding between the employing printers of Montreal and the printing trades unions in order to work together in an effort to bring back to Montreal and to Canada as much as possible of the printing that is being done in foreign countries."

The Toronto Joint Board of Printing Trades Councils, which was formed two or three years ago, commenced to actively function in February, 1932. The membership is made up of three delegates from each of the seven international printing trades unions including printers, pressmen, photo-engravers, bookbinders, lithographers, stereotypers and mailers. The purpose of the board is to bind the printing trades workers more closely together and to help fellow unions in the same trade to settle their difficulties.

The most important delegate body in the railway employees' group is Division No. 4, which came into existence on February 27, 1918, and which is working under charter from the Railway Employees' Department of the American Federation of Labor. The purposes of the division are (1) To promote harmony and enhance the welfare of all railroad employees; (2) to aid in organizing all such workers and to consider and decide jurisdictional disputes; (3) to discourage piece work and to confer jointly in regard to schedules and to approve same before presentation to the railway officials; (4) to encourage railroad organizations to affiliate with the American Federation of Labor; (5) to further the interests of employees by means of legislation and to take such action as may be agreed upon to protect the interests of all concerned. The division also seeks (a) to bring all railway employees within the organization, (b) to shorten the hours of labour to eight per day; (c) to establish a minimum wage scale for all employees in all branches of railway service; (d) to bring about a national agreement on all railroads in Canada, which may if necessary be divided into sections, and (e) to prevent strikes and lockouts. Division No. 4 is the largest of the federations, having jurisdiction over the organized shop workers on all Canadian railway lines, including machinists, boilermakers, blacksmiths, carmen, electrical workers, sheet metal workers, etc. These workers are in the first place members of their respective local unions, and are brought together in a system federation covering the particular railway line on which they are employed. Delegates from the system federations and crafts make up the representation at the convention of the division, which meets biennially, although special sessions may be called. Included in the system federations affiliated with the department are those composed of the organized mechanics employed on the following railway lines: Canadian Pacific; Canadian National (including the Atlantic, Central and Western regions); Dominion Atlantic; Northern Alberta; Temiskaming & Northern Ontario and the Toronto, Hamilton & Buffalo. The employees of the Esquimalt & Nanaimo and the Kettle Valley Railways are under the jurisdiction of the Canadian Pacific System Federation. The functions of Division No. 4 include the making of wage schedules and the consideration of other matters pertaining to the working conditions of the various classes of employees represented. The executive board is composed of the general chairman, vice-chairman and the secretary-treasurer, with two representatives from each affiliated craft organization. It is the business of the system federations, of which there are six in Canada, to see that the wage schedules on their respective lines are properly administered and to handle all grievances, reporting to and receiving instructions from Division No. 4. Besides the system federations the department has received information concerning six local federated bodies of railway shop mechanics in the Dominion to which representatives are elected by the local branch unions affiliated, and their functions are somewhat similar to other delegate bodies of railway shop crafts.

The composition of the federations of employees of public authorities is in some instances more diversified than that of the others mentioned, their memberships including not only ordinary civic employees, but street railway and telephone employees, where such services are publicly owned. Besides the three local organizations, meeting at frequent intervals to deal with local conditions concerning the various trades making up the respective federations, there is one provincial body of such workers, viz., the British Columbia Federation of Civic and Municipal Employees, which is registered under the Societies' Act of the province, and is authorized to issue charters to local branch associations.

The Labour Educational Association of Western Ontario was formed in Woodstock in 1903 as a voluntary unaffiliated body. In 1907 the word "Western" was dropped from the name, the annual meeting of the organization having been attended by a number of delegates from eastern cities. The representatives at the annual conventions of the association include those from such recognized labour bodies in Ontario as contribute a prescribed annual fee, $1 being the minimum and $5 the maximum, according to membership. The functions of the Labour Educational Association having developed somewhat along lines similar to a provincial federation, the name of the organization is given a place in this section. Its object is to advance the principles of the labour movement and aid the work of organization through the dissemination of information, the holding of public meetings and lectures, the distribution of educational literature, etc. For some years it published the Industrial Banner.

The two delegate bodies in this chapter to be formed in 1932 were the National Building Trades League of Toronto, and the Toronto Joint Board of Printing Trades Council.

There are in the Dominion 51 non-sectarian trade union federations, two more than recorded in 1931. (The names of the federations of the national Catholic unions are given in the list appearing in Chapter XVIII, Table 4). The federations appearing in the appended list are divided into the following groups: Provincial federations, 2; building trades councils, 13; printing trades councils, 15; railway employees federations, 16, including the three regions of the C.N.R.; federations of employees of public authorities, 4; miscellaneous, 1. The list of federations, which with one exception are made up exclusively of local branch unions of international organizations, with names and addresses of the presidents and secretaries, is as follows:—

XI. DISTRICT COUNCILS

Outline of the Objects, Jurisdiction and Functions of Delegate Bodies Representing Particular Trade Union Branches—Number of District Councils in the Dominion—Division by Trades—Names of Councils, with Names and Addresses of Presidents and Secretaries.

Another class of delegate bodies operating in the Dominion are those known as "district councils" or "conference boards" composed of delegates from local branch unions of particular trades. The chief function of these bodies is to consider trade and other matters deemed to be of like interest to the affiliated membership, and which it is believed can be dealt with in a conference of representatives having the opinions of their respective constituents more satisfactorily than by individual branches. The jurisdiction of the councils varies, being in some instances confined to a locality where two or more local branches of the same craft exist; in other instances including all local branches of a given trade within a stated area, and occasionally extending to a whole province or even to cover the same class of workers throughout the Dominion. To meet the expenses of these district bodies a per capita tax is levied on the branches in affiliation, each unit being entitled to a certain number of delegates. Where the councils are purely local, meetings are held at frequent intervals, but in the case of provincial and Dominion-wide bodies the meetings are held annually. Some of the more important functions of the district councils which have been established in the Dominion are here briefly indicated.

The one Canadian conference board of the Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers' International Union is chartered by the central organization, with power to make its own constitution and by-laws and to collect a per capita tax from the local branches which constitute it to meet the necessary operating expenses. Objects of this board include endeavours to establish and maintain a uniform work-day and rate of wages in the territory under its jurisdiction, which covers the province of Ontario; the regulation of apprentice laws; the procuring of favourable legislation for the craft; and the securing of information for its members regarding conditions of employment throughout the country.

Under the scheme of organization of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners provision is made for the establishment of district and provincial councils, the first-named being of a local character, meeting at short intervals, and the provincial bodies annually. These delegate organizations have power to frame working and trade rules in their respective localities; they must also provide for and hold trial of all violations of trade rules, and can enforce penalties, subject to an appeal to the general president of the brotherhood.

The Amalgamated Carpenters of Canada, the branches of which were formerly identified with the Amalgamated Society of Carpenters and Joiners, a British organization now known as the Amalgamated Society of Woodworkers, has management committees in Toronto and Vancouver with similar functions to the district councils of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters. The Toronto management committee was originally established following the failure of the "plan of solidification," effected in 1913, between the Amalgamated Society of Carpenters and Joiners and the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, the latter body having expelled the Toronto branches of the Amalgamated Society because they refused to obey a ruling of its president. The details of this incident appeared in earlier issues of this report. The Vancouver committee was formd at a later date.

The Ontario Council of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, which was formed in November, 1930, is designed to bring together semi-annually the men engaged in the electrical trade in the various cities for the purpose of discussing ways and means of improving conditions in the province. The aim is also to improve the standard and efficiency of the members of the council with a view to the consumer and public deriving the maximum benefit from the use of electrical energy.

Montreal District Council, No. 5, of the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers is chartered by the central organization, and comprises the local branches of the brotherhood operating in the city of Montreal. The objects of the council are the creation of harmony and unity between the local unions of the craft, the establishing of a minimum wage in the district, and the enforcement of a code of working rules governing hours, wages, etc. Council No. 5 has legislative and executive power on all matters relating to the common interest of the local unions in the district, including the ordering of strikes, subject to the sanction of the general executive board of the brotherhood. The revenue of the council is derived by a per capita tax on the local unions under its jurisdiction.

The Ontario Provincial Association of Journeymen Plumbers and Steamfitters was formerly known as the Ontario Pipe Trades Council, but in December, 1926, the present name was chosen and a charter for the organization was issued by the head office of the United Association of Plumbers, Gas Fitters, Steam Fitters and Steam Fitters' Helpers. This provincial association, whose membership is made up of plumbers employed in the building trade, seeks to improve organization among the craft and to secure better working conditions in the trade. In matters involving members or local branches in the province the association has power to make decisions. Special efforts are made to keep the members of the Ontario branches employed by prompt advice to each other of changes in local conditions and also by the transference of members from one city to the other for special large jobs. The Western Provincial Association of the Journeymen Plumbers, which was formed in April, 1929, and whose jurisdiction covers the four western provinces, meets annually, and has as its object the protection, education and advancement of the members, all actions of the association to be governed by the laws of the parent body.

The Provincial Conference of the Journeymen Stone Cutters' Association as chartered by the central body is designed to establish the minimum rate of pay and the maximum number of hours for all local branches in the district. This has full power to make laws to govern itself and to levy such assessments upon its members for financial support as it may deem necessary, so long as such laws do not conflict with the constitution and by-laws of the parent body.

District Council No. 30 of the International Brotherhood of Boilermakers and Iron Shipbuilders is chartered by the international body, the jurisdiction covering all Canadian lodges of the craft having members working on railroads which have their greatest mileage in Canada. The district council is represented in the international executive by an international vice-president, and has power to levy assessments on members in the jurisdiction in case of emergency. The council has its own by-laws and may call strikes, provided the approval of the international executive council has been secured, but may arbitrate and close strikes on its own volition.

The District Council of Montreal and Vicinity, of the International Association of Bridge, Structural, and Ornamental Iron Workers, was organized in June, 1929. The council acts as administrative board for all locals under its jurisdiction. There is no local constitution, but the council is governed by the general constitution of the International Association of Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Iron Workers.

The Ontario Provincial Council of the International Association of Machinists was established with the object of standardizing conditions in the machinist industry throughout the province. The expenses of the council are met by a per capita assessment on the affiliated local branches. Regular meetings are held annually at which wage schedules are prepared and other matters considered. District Lodge No. 2 of the International Association of Machinists has jurisdiction over all units embracing members of the organization employed on Canadian railways, subject, of course, to the general laws of the Grand Lodge. The proportion and methods of representation and the collection of revenue are determined by the members comprising the district. The lodge may levy assessments within its jurisdiction, provided the same have been approved by the affiliated members. The district is divided into seven sections in accord with the territory of the respective general managers of the main trunk roads as follows: No. 1, comprising the western lines of the C.P.R.; No. 2, the eastern lines of the C.P.R.; No. 3, the western region of the C.N.R.; No. 4, the central region of the C.N.R.; No. 5, the Atlantic region of the C.N.R.; No. 6, the T., H. & B. Railroad; No. 7, the T. & N. O. Railroad. The district is officered by a president and a secretary-treasurer, who, with the seven section chairmen, comprise the district executive board. District Lodges Nos. 24, 46 and 82 are local bodies, composed of the lodges in the cities of Hamilton, Toronto and Montreal, respectively, and the surrounding districts. These district lodges deal with matters affecting the interests of the members of the association in the localities mentioned.

The Conference Board of Ontario of the International Moulders' Union is chartered by the central organization. The board makes its own laws, subject to the approval of the general president, and elects the business agent for the territory under its jurisdiction. The revenue is derived by a per capita tax on each local union affiliated with the Conference Board, the money being received through the international headquarters.

The Montreal and Toronto District Councils of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers have power to transact business pertaining to the welfare of the various local branches comprising their memberships, such as organizing label agitations and to prevent branches from striking without the consent of the council; also to endeavour to adjust all local differences before they are referred to headquarters. These councils, which are entitled to one delegate each to represent them at the general conventions, have authority, to investigate the financial standing of affiliated local branches, reports of same to be forwarded to the general executive board.

The International Fur Workers' Union has joint boards operating in Toronto and Montreal, these bodies having power to adopt their own by-laws, provided there is no objection by its affiliates, and may assess the members of such affiliates to meet the expenses of the joint boards.

The primary object of the joint boards of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, of which there are two, located respectively at Montreal and Toronto, is to call, conduct, and settle strikes and lockouts affecting the local branches under their jurisdiction. The decision of such boards in all disputes is binding upon the local unions.

The Headgear Workers' Central Bureau of Canada, which is made up of the Canadian branches of the Cloth Hat, Cap and Millinery Workers' International Union, supervises all activities of such branches, appoints organizers, and is in general responsible to the chief organization for all matters concerning the branches in the Dominion.

The joint council of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union has its own rules to govern its proceedings, and one of the stated objects of this body is that of promoting improvements in the conditions of employment of union shoe workers. It also carries on work to extend the recognition and use of all union labels, particularly the boot and shoe workers' union stamp, and in general to co-operate with the general officers in carrying out the contracts and policies of the organization.

The conference boards of the International Typographical Union have their own by-laws. Among other matters which engage attention at the annual meetings are those having to do with the sanitary conditions of printing offices and the securing of legislation in the interests of the printing industry, as also to secure unanimity among the various branches on matters affecting the trade. The revenue is derived from a per capita tax on the affiliations, paid direct to the conference boards. The Northwestern Typographical Conference has jurisdiction over Oregon, Washington, Idaho and the province of British Columbia. The other conference board is composed entirely of Canadian branches of the International Typographical Union.

The district councils of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees, which meet monthly are designed to promote the welfare of the brotherhood and to bring about a larger measure of co-operation between the local lodges in the respective districts, each lodge being entitled to representation.

There are three district councils composed of branches of the International Longshoremen's Association, only one of which, however, is composed entirely of Canadian units, viz., that at Saint John, N.B. This council may make rulings and decisions affecting local branches or members, but such are subject to the approval of the district branch, final decision being in the hands of the executive council of the international association. The Atlantic Coast District Council has jurisdiction over the entire north Atlantic coast, including Canadian ports, in the territory named, and its constitution stipulates that one of the vice-presidents must be located in Canada. There is also a similar district body for the Pacific Coast, whose law requires that one of the vice-presidents be located in British Columbia. Among the functions of these councils is the investigation of the conduct of local branches and members under their jurisdiction. They also have power to inflict penalties and fines against local unions for violation of the rules of the association.

There are two district unions of the United Mine Workers in Canada, viz., District 26 with jurisdiction over the coal fields of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, and District 18 covering the coal mining areas in Alberta and Southeastern British Columbia, the affairs of the latter, however, being administered by provisional officers, the charter having been temporarily withdrawn. (Particulars of the suspension of the charter of District 18 were published in this report for 1925.) District unions of the United Mine Workers have power to adopt rules for their own governance, provided they do not conflict with the laws of the international union or joint agreements. The districts also have control over the locals affiliated, and have power to collect a per capita tax and to levy assessments on their own members, such assessments not to exceed $1 per month. The district unions are not permitted to engage in a strike involving all or a major portion of the members without the sanction of an international convention or the international executive board, but the unions may order local strikes within their own territory on their own responsibility; provided, however, that where such strikes are to be financed by the international union they must be sanctioned by the international executive board.

The Journeymen Barbers' Federation of Canada, composed of local branches of the Journeymen Barbers' International Union, was established at a meeting of the Journeymen Barbers' Federation of Ontario which was held in Hamilton in November, 1925. The Dominion body is designed to protect the members in legisative matters only, the economic side to be looked after by the local branches under the supervision of the international organization. The Journeymen Barbers' Federation of Ontario is an organization composed of local branches of the Journeymen Barbers' International Union in the province. The objects of the association are: (1) the education of the barbers by means of an exchange of ideas at annual conventions; (2) the advocacy of higher wages and shorter hours; (3) the universal closing of all barber shops on the Lord's Day; (4) provincial licence and examination as to qualifications of all barbers; also more adequate sanitary regulations for barber shops, and rigid enforcement of the law pertaining thereto.

There are two districts of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and Moving Picture Machine Operators, No. 11 with jurisdiction over the maritime provinces, Quebec and Ontario, and No. 12 for the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. These districts have power to enact laws for their own governance, so long as they do not conflict with the international constitution, after they have been approved by the affiliated units. Among the purposes of these district bodies is a standardization of working conditions and rates of pay and the securing of legislation for the better protection of those engaged in the theatrical trades.

The Inter-Provincial Association of Fire Fighters, covering the provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan, was organized on August 3, 1925. The objects of the association are: (1) To organize all permanent fire fighters in the provinces mentioned; (2) to foster the encouragement of a higher degree of skill and efficiency on the part of fire fighters; (3) the cultivation of friendship among the members; (4) proper remuneration for duty performed; (5) a pension law that will provide ample funds for those dependent upon pension; (6) to have legislation enacted where necessary to make the fire fighters' position more efficient and humane, and (7) the establishment of sick and death benefit funds. The British Columbia Association of the same class, which was organized on September 15, 1924, has similar objects to the Alberta-Saskatchewan body.

The Ontario Executive Board of the International Union of Operating Engineers was organized in Hamilton, Ont., in 1924, and is a legislative and advisory body whose actions are subject to the constitution of the parent organization. The board meets annually on the second Monday in January, but may be convened for special sessions.

There are two district councils of the International Brotherhood of Firemen and Oilers, both of which were formed in 1930. No. 7 has jurisdiction over the Canadian Pacific Railway lines east of Port Arthur and No. 8 over the same lines west from Fort William. The objects of these district councils are to centralize the work in the respective localities. The chairman of the district bodies handle any grievances which cannot be settled at the local point by meeting with the higher officials at the main centre and endeavour to effect an adjustment.

Three delegate bodies were added during the year—one in the building trades group, viz: Ontario Provincial Council of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, the District Council of Montreal and Vicinity, International Association of Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Iron Workers in the metal trades group and District No. 12, International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and Moving Picture Machine Operators in the Personal Service and Amusement trades group. Four bodies were dropped from the list, viz: Western Provincial Association, United Association of Plumbers, Gas and Steamfitters, and the Quebec Provincial Conference, Journeymen Stonecutters' Association, in the building trades group; Joint Council No. 17 Boot and Shoe Workers' Union and the Ontario Provincial Conference Journeymen Tailors' Union, in the Clothing, Boot and Shoe Workers group.

In the list below is recorded the names of 52 delegate bodies, one less than shown in 1931, divided by trades as follows: carpenters, 10; clothing workers, including ladies' garment workers, cap makers and fur workers, 7; railway employees and machinists, 5 each; longshoremen, 3; printers, mine workers, barbers, stage employees, fire fighters and firemen and oilers, 2 each; bricklayers, electrical workers, painters, plumbers, stonecutters, boilermakers, bridge and iron workers, moulders, boot and shoe workers and operating engineers, one each. The list of district councils which follows is arranged in trade groups, and gives the names and addresses of the presidents and secretaries where supplied.

BUILDING TRADES

XII. RAILROAD BROTHERHOOD COMMITTEES

Bodies Composed of Delegates from Local Lodges of Railway Employees' Organizations—Included in Their Functions are the Adjustment of Grievances of Members—List of the Railways on Which They Have Been Formed—Chief Officers of the Various Committees and Legislative Boards.

In addition to the delegate bodies which have been discussed in the preceding chapters, there is another important group, the formation of which is provided for in the structure of the several railroad employees' organizations, included in which are those bodies whose members are engaged in engine and train service. The delegate bodies of the railroad workers include committees which are known as "adjustment," "grievance," "protective," "legislative," etc., the objects of which were discussed in some detail in a previous issue of this report. It may, however, be stated that the functions of the first three named committees include the consideration of matters affecting the conditions of employment of their members. Through the efforts of these bodies many adjustments of local complaints have been effected, and on occasions they have made satisfactory settlements of disputes involving the whole membership on a given railway system. Four of the railroad brotherhoods have established bodies known as legislative boards, which are designed to protect the interests of railway men in laws which may be proposed in connection with railroad operation and also in respect to decisions made by the Board of Railway Commissioners. Besides the separate provincial legislative boards of the brotherhoods there are joint legislative committees which have similar functions as regards their respective provinces, and which may co-operate with other organizations outside the running trades in securing uniformity of laws concerning labour. The four organizations whose members are engaged in engine and train service maintain legislative representatives in Ottawa, the other railroad employees' organizations sending representatives to Ottawa to look after the welfare of their members when such a proceeding is considered necessary.

The list of delegate bodies for each railway employees' organization is given separately, the names of the railroads over which the respective committees have jurisdiction being arranged in alphabetical order. In each case the name and address of the chairman and secretary (where obtainable) are given:—

XIII. TRADES AND LABOUR COUNCILS

City Delegate Organizations Designed to be the Medium of Expression of Organized Workers on Public Affairs—How Constituted and Financed—Number Operating in Canada—Trades Councils Under Dual Charters—Division by Provinces—Names and Addresses of Presidents and Secretaries.

Apart from the federations and district councils whose names appear and are discussed in previous chapters the scheme of labour organizations provides for still another form of delegate body known under the name of trades and labour council. Similar bodies chartered by the All-Canadian Congress of Labour, are termed "labour councils," and those identified with the national Catholic unions are called central councils. Trades and labour councils are designed chiefly to be the local medium of expression of opinion of organized labour on public affairs, and as such have often been given considerable prominence. These councils are usually formed in localities where a number of local branch unions are operating, delegates from the local units in a given city or district making up the representation. Trades and labour councils, referred to in this chapter are voluntary bodies, it not being compulsory for all local unions to affiliate, and it is therefore very seldom that all the unions in the locality join the council. As a result of efforts on the part of certain councils, many of the international organizations have urged the importance of their subordinate branches identifying themselves with the trades councils in their respective districts, while other international bodies are insisting on this being done. The local lodges of the railroad brotherhoods do not take much interest in trades and labour councils, affiliating in only very few instances. Trades councils have no power to issue charters to local branch unions which affiliate, but each branch is required to pay a per capita tax for the purpose of meeting the general expense. In certain localities in the past trades councils representative of the international trade union movement have endorsed the demands of certain affiliated bodies for improved working conditions, and not only have they given their moral support, but have been the agency through which appeals for funds to support strikes have been made, the amounts so collected being used mainly to augment the strike benefits allowed by the central organizations with which the local unions involved are connected. Some trades and labour councils, however, undertook to go further, usurping the functions of international organizations in issuing strike orders. To check this proceeding the American Federation of Labor, which has 728 councils under charter, some of which are located in Canada, in 1919 amended its constitution inhibiting trades councils which hold charters from the federation to order any local branch union affiliated to go on strike or to take a vote on the question of a strike until the proper authorities have agreed to such action. The Trades and Labour Congress of Canada at its 1920 convention took action to deal summarily with councils which violated the constitution of the congress or encouraged secession movements in the ranks of organized labour. The central councils operating under the auspices of the national Catholic unions are included in Chapter XVIII—Table 6.

Fourteen of the councils in this chapter, operating respectively in Halifax, Moncton, Saint John, Montreal, Quebec, Hamilton, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Saskatoon, Calgary, Edmonton, Prince Rupert and Vancouver, are connected with the All-Canadian Congress of Labour. The remaining 38 councils are chartered by the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, seventeen of which also hold charters from the American Federation of Labor. Those under dual charters are located as follows: Belleville, Edmonton, Hamilton, Kingston, Kitchener, London, Montreal, Ottawa, Quebec, St. Catharines, Saint John, St. Thomas, Sudbury, Toronto, Vancouver, Windsor, and Winnipeg.

Twenty-four of the councils are located in Ontario cities, the remaining twenty-eight being divided between the other provinces as follows: Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia, 5 each; New Brunswick and Quebec, 4 each; Manitoba, 3; and Nova Scotia, 2.

The total number of trades councils included in this chapter is 52, the same number as recorded in 1931. The fourteen labour councils chartered by the All-Canadian Congress of Labour are designated by the letters A.C.C.L. The list following gives the location of the trades and labour councils in the Dominion, arranged in the provincial groups (those operating under dual charters being marked with an asterisk), with the names and addresses of the presidents and secretaries.

XIV. TRADE UNION LOCAL UNITS

The Foundation of the Trade Union Movement—Main Source of Revenue—Number of Local Branch Unions in Each Group Operating in Canada—Numerical Standing of the Nine Provinces—Cities Having Not Less Than Twenty Local Branch Unions.

The foundation of the trade union movement and the chief source from which is derived in the form of per capita tax the revenue for most of its activities is found in the local units. The local branches also constitute the central organizations and the delegate bodies which have been discussed in preceding chapters. The information received in the department indicated that at the close of the year 1932 there were 1,813 branch unions connected with 78 international craft organizations; the One Big Union and the Industrial Workers of the World, two international industrial unions, which have Canadian affiliations, make 80 international organizations operating in the Dominion, the first named with 47 units and the I.W.W. with 8 branches, a grand total of 1,868 branches identified with international bodies. The Canadian central organizations had 701 local branches and the independent units numbered 47. In addition there were 109 National Catholic syndicates. These figures indicate, as previously mentioned, that there were in Canada at the close of the year 2,725 local branch unions of all classes of organizations operating in the Dominion, a loss of 47 for the year, with a total membership of 283,576.

The province of Ontario, as usual, stands in first place as to the number of local branches of international organizations, having 757 of the total 1,868; Quebec stands second with 277; British Columbia third with 186; and Alberta fourth with 182. The remaining five provinces rank as follows: Saskatchewan, 140; Manitoba, 138; Nova Scotia, 99; New Brunswick, 85, and Prince Edward Island, 4. Ontario also ranks first in the number of local branches of Canadian organizations, there being 261 in the province out of the above mentioned total of 701; Quebec is in second place with 85; Alberta ranks third with 81; British Columbia fourth with 75. The other five provinces stand as follows: Saskatchewan, 59; Nova Scotia, 57; Manitoba, 41; New Brunswick, 35; and Prince Edward Island, 7.

The four independent units of civic employees in Winnipeg are united in the Civic Employees' Federation, each unit having its own constitution and by-laws, the federation, to which each unit sends three delegates and pays a per capita tax, being the executive of the consenting units. Eleven independent units came into existence during 1932, viz: (1) Bakery and Confectionery Workers' Union, Montreal, Que.; (2) Montreal Dress Cutters' Union; (3) Montreal Grocery Clerks' Union; (4) Grain Workers Industrial Union, Port Arthur, Ont.; (5) Workmen's Protective Association, Sturgeon Falls, Ont.; (6) Granite Cutters' Union, Toronto, Ont.; (7) Mine Workers' Association, Bienfait, Sask.; (8) Coleman Miners' Association, Coleman, Alta.; (9) Civic Employees' Union, Edmonton, Alta.; (10) Mine Workers' Federal Local Union, Lethbridge, Alta.; (11) Luscar Miners' Local Union, Luscar, Alta. The Musicians' Protective Union, Brandon, Man., ceased to function and was dropped from the list. These changes make the number of independent units 47, an increase of 10, divided by provinces as follows: Quebec, 13, a gain of 3; British Columbia, 12, no change; Alberta, 8, an increase of 4; Manitoba, 5, a loss of 1; Ontario, 4, a gain of 3; Saskatchewan, 2, a gain of 1; Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island, 1 each, no change.

Another independent local union, the United Clothing Workers of Canada, was formed in Montreal, Que., during the year, of which M. Hartt, 62 Rachel St. East was reported as secretary. Owing to the fact that definite particulars concerning the standing of the union were not obtainable, it is not taken into account in the list of independent units. At one time during the year the membership was reported at 5,000, but it has been ascertained from reliable sources that a large number had left the union by the end of the year.

The numerical standing of the nine provinces of the Dominion as to local branches of all classes of labour organizations, including the national Catholic, was as follows: Ontario, 1,022, a loss of 24; Quebec, 484, a loss of 17; British Columbia, 273, a loss of 3; Alberta, 271, a loss of 6; Saskatchewan, 201, a loss of 11; Manitoba, 184, a loss of 3; Nova Scotia, 157, a gain of 20; New Brunswick, 121, a loss of 3, and Prince Edward Island, 12, no change.

There were 29 cities in the Dominion having not less than 20 local branch unions of all classes, being the same number as in 1931, the cities dropped being Kitchener and Sault Ste.

Marie, and replaced by Kingston and Three Rivers. Montreal as usual occupies first place with 197 (30 of which are national Catholic syndicates); Toronto ranks second with 151; Winnipeg stands third with 112, Vancouver being fourth with 105. The remaining 25 cities stand as follows: Calgary, 73; Edmonton, 70; Quebec, 66 (25 national Catholic syndicates); Ottawa, 61; Hamilton, 57; London, 53; St. John, Victoria and Regina, 43 each; Halifax, 39; Saskatoon, 37; Windsor, 32; Sherbrooke, 31 (14 national Catholic syndicates); Moncton and Moose Jaw, 29 each; Lethbridge, Port Arthur and Fort William, 28 each; St. Thomas, 26; Brandon, 24; North Bay, 23; Stratford, 22; Three Rivers, 21 (9 national Catholic syndicates); Brantford, 20, and Kingston, 20.

The location of all reported local unions is given in Table 3 (Trade Union Branches by Cities and Towns) page 88.

XV. BUSINESS AGENTS

Important Trade Union Position—Synopsis of the Function of These Officials—Method of Maintaining—List of Localities and Trades Having Business Agents, with Their Names and Addresses.

With the growth of trade unionism, and the consequent difficulty in the affairs of the unions receiving proper attention from the regular officers, there developed the office of business agent, a very important trade union position and one which the best organized trades maintain. Matters formerly entrusted to committees, and frequently entailing considerable loss of time on the part of the members, are now, as a rule, referred to the business agent.

The present duties of the business agent, who was at the inception of the position often referred to as the "walking delegate," require him, when permissible, to visit the various jobs on which members of his craft are employed to ascertain if all are in good standing with the organization, and to endeavour to secure applications for membership if there are non-members working. The agent is required to see that the fair wage clauses on government and municipal contracts (when there are such provisions) are observed, and where supposed violations are detected he is empowered to take the necessary steps to bring them to the attention of the proper authorities. Complaints concerning conditions of employment are referred by the employees to the business agent, it being his duty to adjust difficulties, provided the union considers them of sufficent importance to warrant such action being taken. An important feature of the business agent's duties is that of receiving applications for labour from employers and furnishing the men required so far as may be possible. Business agents are usually elected annually by the local branches concerned, their salaries being paid from local funds, either from the regular dues or by a weekly or monthly assessment, but in a few instances different methods prevail. In some localities, where a single union is not strong enough to maintain a business agent, two or more local unions of kindred trades sometimes combine to support such an official.

Published herewith are the names of 215 business agents, considerably larger than the number recorded in 1931 owing to the fact that secretaries acting as business agents are also included in this list. The arrangement of the list printed below shows the localities, proceeding from east to west, in which business agents are at present maintained, together with the names of the trades, the business agents, and their addresses.

XVI. ORGANIZATIONS OF WORKERS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD

Trade Union Standing in Seventy Countries—International Federation of Trade Unions, with Membership and Names and Addresses of Executive Officers—International Trade Federations—Other International Organizations—Membership of Groups Comprising British Trades Union Congress—Membership of the American Federation of Labor, together with Chief Officers.

Below will be found figures showing the trade union standing in seventy countries. In some instances the figures for 1932 were not available and in such cases those published in the 1931 volume are repeated. The total number of organized workers of all classes in the countries whose names appear in the accompanying table was 48,847,898, the figures for Canada and the United States being given as at the close of the year 1932. As has been previously explained, in Great Britain, Canada and other British countries, as well as in the United States, there is a more clearly defined limitation as to the scope of trade union organization than prevails in some of the European countries, where there are organized bodies which operate along political rather than industrial lines, and the membership of which is not confined strictly to wage earners. With this exception the figures for the various countries are given as follows:

| Algeria | 11,500 | Ireland | 103,636 |

INTERNATIONAL FEDERATION OF TRADE UNIONS

The International Federation of Trade Unions was originally established in 1901 at the International Secretariat, Berlin, Germany. With the outbreak of the World War in 1914 the International Federation ceased to function, the convention for 1915, which was to have been held in San Francisco, being cancelled. The American Federation, believing that it was incompatible with the then United States policy of neutrality to send per capita tax to Berlin, at that time the seat of the international body, discontinued paying its contributions. Subsequently the national trades union centres of Great Britain, United States and France made efforts to have the office of the International Federation transferred to a neutral country, but without success. Following the close of the war there was convened in Amsterdam, Holland, in July, 1919, a representative international meeting at which delegates were present from eleven countries, including the United States. As a result of this conference the affairs of the old international were wound up and a new federation formed under the title selected in 1913, the headquarters being located in Amsterdam. The American Federation of Labor, though represented at the re-organization meeting, has not continued in affiliation, claiming that the rate of per capita tax is too high, and also objecting to the issuance by the executive officers of declarations of policy with which the American Federation did not agree. On July 1, 1931, in accordance with the decision of the 1930 convention held in Stockholm, Sweden, the head office of the Federation was transferred back to Berlin, Germany, but later moved to Paris, France.

The Trades and Labour Congress of Canada is in affiliation with the International Federation, having been admitted to membership in June, 1920. In 1928, Mr. Tom Moore and Mr. P. M. Draper, president and secretary-treasurer respectively of the congress, were placed on the general council of the Federation, the former as representative and the last named as substitute; both were re-elected in 1930. The next convention of the Federation will take place in 1933. The promotion of the interests of the organized labour movement, both nationally and internationally, together with the furtherance of such trade union objectives as may be from time to time decided upon, constitute the chief functions of the International Federation of Trade Unions. In support of its policies and program the federation publishes a monthly journal and maintains a press service in which the activities of organized labour throughout the world are recorded.

OBJECTS OF THE INTERNATIONAL FEDERATION

The objects of the International Federation of Trade Unions, as revised at the meeting in June, 1924, are as follows:—

(a) To bring about the unity of the international working-class by developing closer relations between the trade unions in all countries.

(b) The development of International Trade Secretariats accepting the International Federation of Trade Union's platform.

(c) To promote the interests and activities of the trade union movement, nationally and internationally.

(d) To carry on any activities of common interest to the trade unions.

(e) To promote the development of international social legislation.

(f) To promote workers' education.

(g) To avert war and combat reaction.

The methods by which the Federation seeks to achieve its objects are:—

(a) Close co-operation with the affiliated national centres and the International Trade Secretariats.

(b) Co-operation with other organizations, in so far as such co-operation appears useful in the interests of the trade union movement.

(c) Giving support to trade union activities in the affiliated countries, when requested by the national centres concerned.

(d) Giving support to trade union activities in countries not yet affiliated.

(e) Mediation in any cases of dispute within the trade union movement.

(f) The compilation of statistics.

(g) The collection and compilation of information concerning the trade union movement and social legislation.

(h) The issue of a periodical and other publications of interest to the trade union movement.

(i) The protection of the workers' interests in immigration and emigration.

SPECIAL TRADE UNION CONFERENCE

In addition to the regular meetings of the I.F.T.U. executive held during the year 1932, a special international trade union conference was arranged for April 16-17 in Geneva, which was attended by 82 delegates from 29 countries, including 22 of the affiliated national countries, among them being Canada, which was represented by Mr. Tom Moore, president of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada. The object of calling the conference was to strengthen the hands of the International Federation of Trade Unions in its defence of labour interests and to lay stress on the firm determination of all trade union organizations to continue in joint action for the pursuance of joint aims. The secretariat of the conference was instructed to issue in its name an appeal to all the workers of the world, calling them to greater unity of effort and to more vigorous work for the realization of the demands which find their expression in the program of the I.F.T.U., which organization as a result of the discussion of the conference issued a manifesto authorizing a program for future action. This document included demands for planned production of raw materials and distribution of goods; democratic control of credit systems, banks and stock exchanges; regulation of the monetary system by the creation of an international currency unit, and measures aiming to secure democratic control of monopolies. The executive of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada in reporting to the 1932 convention of that body on the work of the I.F.T.U. stated:—

"Throughout the year the I.F.T.U. has played an active part in formulating international working class policies on reparations, war debts, disarmament and unemployment relief measures, all of which have been strongly urged for consideration at the Economic Conference (Lausanne), the Disarmament Conference (Geneva), the annual sessions of the International Labour Organization and before the League of Nations and its committees.

"In addition the officers of the I.F.T.U. have collected and tabulated information for the benefit of workers' representatives attending the annual sessions of the I.L.O. and have provided useful secretarial services between sessions and for the workers' group of the governing body of the I.L.O.

"Development of trade unions in the newer industrial countries of the East and South America has been constantly encouraged and assisted and an active campaign carried on to build up greater trade union solidarity throughout the world."

MEMBERSHIP OF THE INTERNATIONAL FEDERATION

The International Federation of Trade Unions in 1904, the earliest year for which figures are available, comprised the national centres (chief labour organization) of fourteen countries, with a combined membership of 2,372,975. In 1912 the affiliations increased to nineteen and the membership was 7,394,461. No further information as to numerical standing was published until the Amsterdam congress in July, 1919, when the affiliates numbered fourteen and the membership was given at 17,633,000; in 1921 there were 24 countries affiliated with a combined membership of 23,907,059; in 1922 there was the same number of affiliates, with an approximate membership of 22,000,000; from 1923 onward, although the affiliations indicated an increase, the membership showed a decline, the number of members in 1931 being 13,781,381, comprised in 27 national centres. The information for 1932 indicated 29 national centres identified with the federation, these being the chief labour organization in Africa, Argentine, Austria, Belgium, Bulgaria, Canada, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Dutch East Indies, Esthonia, Finland, France, Germany, Great Britain, Greece Holland, Hungary, Italy, Latvia, Lithuania, Luxemburg, Memel, Palestine, Poland, Roumania, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland and Yugo-Slavia, but the combined membership was not obtainable. In addition to the affiliation of the chief labour organization of the countries just enumerated there were also 29 international trade secretariats (or federations) affiliated with the federation.

The members of the executive of the federation were: President, W. M. Citrine, Transport House, Smith Square, London, S.W.1; vice-presidents: J. Jacobson, Denmark; L. Jouhaux, France; Th. Leipart, Germany; C. Mertens, Belgium, and R. Tayerle, Czechoslovakia; general secretary, Walter Schevenels; assistant secretary, C. Stolz, their address being 9 d'Orsay Avenue, Paris, VII, France.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE FEDERATIONS

Among the organizations affiliated with the International Federation of Trade Unions are international trade federations of unions each of which comprises the members of a particular craft or class of labour. Twenty-eight out of the twenty-nine in existence are so affiliated. All of these federations have their headquarters in Europe, and include in their affiliations the trade unions of many countries, the combined membership in some instances reaching over the million mark. According to the latest information, nine of these international trade federations have in affiliation labour organizations which have local branches in Canada, their names and those of the affiliates with Canadian branches being: (1) International Federation of Radiotelegraphists, affiliate Electrical Communication Workers of Canada; (2) International Clothing Workers' Federation, affiliates International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, Journeymen Tailors' Union, International Fur Workers' Union and the Cloth Hat, Cap and Millinery Workers' International Union; (3) International Miners' Federation, affiliate United Mine Workers of America; (4) International Transport Workers' Federation, affiliate the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees; (5) International Union of Federations of Workers in the Food and Drink Trades, affiliate Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union; (6) International Union of Woodworkers, affiliate the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America; (7) International Secretariat of Painters and Kindred Trades, affiliate Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America; (8) International Metal Workers' Federation, affiliate International Association of Machinists; (9) Postal International, affiliates Federated Association of Letter Carriers of Canada and the National Federation of Post Office Clerks of the United States. There is one international federation which has in affiliation an organization operating in the United States, but which has no branches in Canada, viz. the Universal Alliance of Diamond Workers, affiliate Diamond Workers' Protective Union of America. All of the above-mentioned affiliates of the respective international trade federations, except the Electrical Communication Workers of Canada, the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees, and the Federated Association of Letter Carriers, are identified with the American Federation of Labor. The names of the remaining nineteen international trade secretariats are as follows: International Federation of Building Workers, International Federation of Bookbinders and Kindred Trades, International Typographical Secretariat, International Federation of General Factory Workers, International Union of Hairdressers, International Federation of Glassworkers, International Union of Hotel, Restaurant and Bar Workers, International Landworkers' Federation, International Federation of Lithographers and Kindred Trades, International Federation of Workers in Public Services, International Federation of Commercial, Clerical and Technical Employees, International Secretariat of Stone Workers, International Secretariat of Tobacco Workers, International Federation of Textile Workers' Association, International Federation of Pottery Workers, International Federation of Teachers, International Federation of Boot and Shoe Operatives and Leather Workers, and the International Federation of Hatters.

OTHER INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS

There are certain international organizations of socialist and labour parties in various countries throughout the world having for their objects the improvement of social and labour conditions through political action. The present organizations developed out of the movement which originated in the organization of the International Workingmen's Association known as the First International, founded in 1864, which was dissolved in 1876.

The Labour and Socialist International works in close co-operation with the International Federation of Trade Unions, there being joint committees on various subjects. This organization was formed in 1923, uniting the organization known as the Second International formed in 1889, and the International Working Union of Socialist Parties, known as the Vienna Union or the Two-and-a-Half International from 1921 to 1923. The latter had been formed of parties which seceded from the Second International in 1919, and joined with the Communists for a time.

The Third or Communist International was formed at Moscow in March, 1919, and has as branches Communist parties in various countries. The Communist Party of Canada is referred to in the introduction. The parent organization has in association with it a number of international bodies, each having national organizations throughout the world, for the promotion of its policies. Its organization and development have been described in previous reports in this series. The Red International of Labour Unions formed in July, 1921, in Moscow, is a body for promoting organization among wage earners through national bodies in each country. The Workers' Unity League of Canada was founded in 1929 as the Canadian Section of this organization. As stated in the chapter in this report on that body, its affiliation with the Red International was severed subsequently. The International Red Aid, another Communist organization for furnishing legal defence to persons charged with criminal activities in the promotion of Communist policies has branches in various countries. The Canadian Labour Defence League referred to in the introductory chapter of this report performs this function in Canada.

The International Federation of Christian Trade Unions is referred to in the chapter on National Catholic Unions.

MEMBERSHIP OF GROUPS COMPRISING BRITISH TRADES UNION CONGRESS

The paid-up membership of the British Trades Union Congress, as given in the reports submitted to the 64th annual meeting held in Newcastle-on-Tyne, England, from September 5 to 9, 1932, and at which Mr. A. J. Crawford, organizer of the Sheet Metal Workers' International Alliance, Toronto, Ont., was present as fraternal delegate from the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, was 3,613,273, a decrease of 106,128 as compared with the membership in 1931, when the figures were 3,719,401. The membership of the Congress is divided among seventeen trade groups, each of which has representation on the general council according to its numerical standing, as follows: Mining and quarrying, 630,346; railways, 418,363; transport (other than railways), 473,238; shipbuilding, 65,974; engineering, founding and vehicle building, 319,868; iron and steel and minor metal trades, 99,229; building, woodworking and furnishing, 322,733; printing and paper, 151,586; cotton, 265,324; textile (other than cotton), 126,630; clothing, 71,061; leather and boots and shoes, 93,473; glass, pottery, chemicals, food, etc., 222,112; agriculture, 30,000; public employees, 28,732; non-manual workers, 52,765; general workers, 241,839. The glass, pottery, chemical, food, etc., group shows an increase of 3,134, and the printing and paper of 688. The agricultural group remains unchanged with 30,000 members; all of the other groups show a decrease, the heaviest loss being recorded by the general workers, whose membership declined by 17,392, followed by the cotton group which decreased by 16,685.

The chief officers of the Congress are: Chairman, Andrew Conley; Vice-Chairman, A. G. Walkden; General Secretary, Walter M. Citrine, Smith Square, London, S.W. 1, England.

As stated in previous reports in this series, for some years there were in Canada branches of organizations with headquarters in the United Kingdom affiliated with the British Trade Union Congress. The connection of the last of these was severed in 1925 when the Canadian locals of the Amalgamated Society of Carpenters and Joiners were granted complete self-government, becoming the Amalgamated Carpenters of Canada.

AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR

The 52nd annual convention of the American Federation of Labor, which was held in Cincinnati, Ohio, November 21 to December 2, 1932, was attended by 327 delegates, the representation being divided as follows: 231 delegates represented 78 international and national organizations, while 4 departments, 22 state federations, 54 city central bodies (Trades and Labour councils), and 13 local trade and federal unions were represented by one delegate each. Of the three fraternal delegates present one was from the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada and two from the British Trades Union Congress.

MEMBERSHIP OF THE FEDERATION

In 1881, when the American Federation was formed, the membership was less than 5,000. In 1912 it stood at 1,770,145. At the 1932 convention the secretary reported that the average paid-up reported membership at the close of the fiscal year, August 31, 1932, was 2,532,261, a decrease of 357,289 as compared with the number reported in 1931. The average paid-up membership for the past 20 years was as follows:—

| | | | |
| 1913 | 1,996,004 | 1923 | 2,926,468 |
| 1914 | 2,020,671 | 1924 | 2,865,979 |
| 1915 | 1,946,347 | 1925 | 2,877,297 |
| 1916 | 2,072,702 | 1926 | 2,803,966 |
| 1917 | 2,371,434 | 1927 | 2,812,407 |
| 1918 | 2,726,478 | 1928 | 2,896,063 |
| 1919 | 3,260,068 | 1929 | 2,933,545 |
| 1920 | 4,078,740 | 1930 | 2,961,096 |

In reporting on the membership of the Federation the secretary, as in the past, pointed out that national and international organizations are required to pay per capita tax only upon their fully paid-up memberships and that therefore the membership reported did not include the members who were unemployed during the fiscal year. A survey of the membership of the affiliates of the Federation, the secretary stated, indicated that there were thousands of members for whom no per capita tax was paid.

The total affiliations at the end of the fiscal year included 106 national and international organizations representing 26,362 local branches and 307 local trade and federal labour unions, making in all 26,669 branches. Four trade departments, 49 state federations and 619 city central bodies are also under charters from the federation. The local branches which constitute the national and international organizations are the source from which nearly all funds are secured to carry on every activity in the labour movement; the local branches also constitute the state federations, city central bodies and local department councils. There were 604 of the last-named, the charters for which were derived from the federation departments.

XVII. REGISTRATION OF TRADE UNIONS AND UNION LABELS

Trade Unions Act Adopted by Dominion Parliament in 1872—Act Not Compulsory—List of Organizations Registered With Date of Registration—Professional Syndicates Act Passed by Quebec Legislature in 1924—List of Unions Registered Under This Act—Registrations of Union Labels Under the Trade Mark and Design Act.

In previous issues of this report mention has been made of the causes for the adoption of measures, the purpose of which was the registration of trade unions and union labels. Only a small number of unions have availed themselves of the opportunity of registering under these Acts.

REGISTERED TRADE UNIONS

In 1872 the Dominion Parliament adopted the Trade Unions Act, under the provisions of which registered trade unions are exempt from liability for prosecution for being in restraint of trade. The Act not being compulsory, not many labour bodies have sought registration, the total number to date being 41, of which 28 have either dissolved or amalgamated with other unions. The following list gives the names of the existing registered unions, which includes eight central organizations, two national Catholic unions, two independent unions and two local branches of international organizations, and indicates the date of registration:—

Brotherhood of Dominion Express Employees, April 27, 1918 (now Brotherhood of Express Employees).
Canadian Brotherhood of Railroad Employees, July, 1909 (now Railway).
Syndicat National et Catholique des Employes de Magasins de Quebec, December 10, 1919.
The Musicians' Protective Association of Montreal (local No. 406, American Federation of Musicians), February 16, 1920.
Federated Seafarers' Union of British Columbia (now of Canada), May 9, 1922.
Vancouver and District Waterfront Workers' Association, February 4, 1924.
Mine Workers' Union of Canada, March 19, 1926.
Canadian Brotherhood of Stationary Engineers, July 20, 1927.
Canadian Brotherhood of Automotive Transportation Employees, April 22, 1932.
Saskatchewan Mine Workers' Association, June 28, 1932.
Bakery and Confectionery Workers Union of Montreal, October 18, 1932.
Canadian Association of Railway Enginemen, Conductors, Trainmen, Yardmen, Telegraphers and Dispatchers, December 7, 1932.

The Quebec Legislature in 1924 passed the Professional Syndicates Act, under which statute, after the performance of certain formalities, a union is constituted a corporation enjoying civil rights, and which inter alia, authorizes the registered unions to "enter into contracts or agreements with all other syndicates, societies, undertakings or persons respecting the attainments of their objects, and particularly such as relate to the collective conditions of labour." Up to the close of 1931 seven delegate bodies and 48 local syndicates had been registered under the Act, and during 1932 five syndicates were registered, making a total of 60 registrations. The full list of existing national Catholic bodies which have registered under the Professional Syndicates Act, in order of registration, is as follows, the last five being the 1932 registrations:—

Central Council of National Syndicates of Sherbrooke.
Syndicated Catholic Council of Allied Printing Trades of Montreal.

*L'Union Nationale des Ouvriers de la Rive Sud (National Union of Workers of the South Shore), Levis, has dual registration, being registered under both of the above-mentioned statutes.

REGISTRATION OF UNION LABELS

Reference has been made in previous issues of this report to the adoption by the Dominion Parliament of amendments to the Trade Mark and Design Act to permit the registration of trade union labels. Up to the close of 1931 there had been 35 registrations. There were no registrations of union labels during 1932. The full list of organizations which have registered their union emblems, according to date, is as follows:—

International Allied Printing Trades Association, May 20, 1927.

* The asterisk indicates that union has registered two labels.

† Indicates three registrations, the latest of which was for the association's trade mark and the two earlier registrations were for union labels.

XVIII. STATISTICS OF TRADE UNIONISTS IN CANADA

International Craft Unions Have Another Heavy Loss in Membership—Canadian Group Shows a Gain—Independent Units Also Have Increase in Members—Grand Total of Trade Unionists in the Dominion—Reported Female Membership—Figures Showing Number of Local Branches and Membership in Canada of International and Canadian Organizations—Division of Branches by Provinces—Trade Union Organizations with Chief Officers and Branches by Cities and Towns—Affiliation of Local Units with Federations, District Councils and Trades and Labour Councils—Membership of All Classes of Organized Workers by Localities.

The statistics as to the numerical strength of the various central labour organizations and their affiliations were for the most part prepared from information supplied early in 1933 by the officers of the unions, the figures furnished giving their standing at the close of 1932. Application for particulars was made by the department to every known central international and Canadian organization, and in most instances the information solicited was promptly supplied, very few failing to furnish any particulars. The figures recorded for the organizations which did not report, or only sent in partial information, have been secured from departmental records and other reliable sources, and in such cases the figures are printed in italics.

In table 1, giving the number of local unions and membership of international organizations in Canada, the figures have been arranged to show, respectively, (1) the number of branches, and (2) the membership of each organization in Canada and elsewhere Defining the term "elsewhere" it may be mentioned that several internationals have local branches in countries other than the United States and Canada. Among these are the following: (1) The American Federation of Labor and the Brotherhood of Painters and Decorators, with branches in the Philippine Islands and Panama; (2) the International Brotherhood of Blacksmiths, Drop Forgers and Helpers, the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen and Helpers, and the United Association of Plumbers and Gas Fitters all have branches in the Panama Canal Zone; (3) the Cigarmakers' International Union and the Leather Workers' International Union, with branches in the Philippine Islands; (4) the Order of Railway Conductors, with a division in Mexico; (5) the International Seamen's Union, the Operative Plasterers' International Association, and the American Federation of Musicians, with branches in the Hawaiian Islands; (6) the International Typographical Union with branches in Newfoundland, the Hawaiian and Philippine Islands; (7) the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, with branches in Newfoundland, the Hawaiian and Philippine Islands and Panama; (8) the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers with branches in Panama and Newfoundland; (9) the International Association of Machinists, with branches in Panama, the Hawaiian and Philippine Islands; (10) the Journeymen Tailors' Union, the International Brotherhood of Paper Makers, the International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers, the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union, the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union, the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen and the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, with branches in Newfoundland.

The names of the International Broom and Whisk Makers' Union, International Glove Workers' Union of America, Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers of North America, International Seamen's Union of America, and the United Slate, Tile and Composition Roofers, Damp and Waterproof Workers' Association are omitted from the accompanying table, all five having lost their Canadian following, while the name of the Sheep Shearers' Union of North America is added, having extended its jurisdiction into Canada. This leaves 78 international craft organizations operating in the Dominion, which with the two international industrial unions known as the One Big Union and the Industrial Workers of the World, make a total of 80 international organizations with members in Canada, four less than the number recorded in 1931.

The figures given in the appended table indicate that there were in Canada at the close of the year, 1,813 local branches of what are classified as international craft organizations, a decrease of 71 as compared with 1931. The One Big Union reported 47 local units, a gain of 1, and the Industrial Workers of the World 8 branches, a gain of 3. The total number of branches in Canada of all classes of international organizations is 1,868, a loss of 67. The reported and estimated Canadian membership of the 78 international craft organizations is 149,129, a decrease of 39,090. The One Big Union reported a membership of 23,340, a loss of 920, while the Industrial Workers of the World had 3,618 Canadian members, an increase of 152. A computation of these figures indicates that the aggregate of members in the Dominion at the close of 1932, identified with the organizations whose names appear in the accompanying table was 176,087, a loss of 39,858. In 1931, the number of branches of international organizations was 1,884, with a combined membership of 188,219, a decrease of 15,259. In 1930, the number of branches in Canada of international unions was 1,997 with a combined membership of 230,943, an increase over 1929 of 564. The peak of Canadian membership in international organizations was reached in 1920, when it stood at 267,247, comprised in 2,455 local branches.

The 78 international craft organizations whose names appear in the appended table represent 25,952 branches under their respective jurisdictions, with a combined membership of 2,636,907; the One Big Union and the Industrial Workers of the World combined have 144 local branches with a reported membership of 45,460, making a grand total of 26,096 branches represented by the 80 organizations and an aggregate membership of 2,682,367. Only nine of the 80 international organizations having branches or members in Canada are not in affiliation with the American Federation of Labor, and between them they have 3,840 subordinate branches, with a combined membership of 451,547, of which 439 branches with 56,286 members are located in the Dominion. Of the remaining 2,230,820 members, comprised in 22,256 branches identified with the 71 international craft organizations affiliated with the American Federation of Labor including the federal and trade unions of the Federation itself, 119,801 belong to 1,429 Canadian branches. The total paid-up membership of the American Federation of Labor with its 106 affiliated national and international organizations and directly chartered local unions was reported to be 2,532,261, but the secretary stated at the 1932 convention that a survey of the membership of the affiliated bodies indicated that because of unemployment there were thousands of members for whom per capita tax had not been paid to the American Federation, and consequently they were not included in the tabulation.

The returns received from the officials of the organizations, whose names appear in the accompanying table, showed that 68 had losses, 8 made gains and 4 had no change in their standing. Of the international craft organizations the Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employees stands first as to membership in Canada, reporting 15,312 comprised in 198 branches, a loss of 2,128 members and 6 local branches. Occupying second place, comes the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen with 10,743 members, a loss of 2,573, comprised in 115 branches, a decrease of 1. The Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen ranks third with 10,565, indicating a loss of 2,709, comprised in 93 local lodges, a loss of 1. The United Mine Workers, although having lost 7,750 members in Canada, caused to a large extent by the formation of a new miners organization in Nova Scotia, occupies fourth place with 9,350 members, comprised in 38 local branches, a loss of 3. The United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners ranks fifth with 9,032 members, a decrease of 2,521, and a loss of 7 branches, now having 67. The Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employees follows with 8,846 members, an increase of 297, comprised in 25 local divisions, a loss of 1. Next in order comes the International Association of Machinists, with a loss of 2,095, now having 6,553 members, comprised in 76 branches, a decrease of 1. Other international craft organizations with 5,000 or more members are: (1) The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers 6,550, a gain of 879; (2) International Federation of Musicians, 6,000, a gain of 589; (3) The Amalgamated Clothing Workers, 5,000, the same as reported for 1931.

In Table 1A is recorded the number of local branches and membership of the Canadian Organizations. At the close of 1932, the Trades and Labour Congress, the great part of whose membership is drawn from the international organizations, had 46 local unions under direct charters, an increase of 4, with a combined membership of 4,812, a loss of 927. The All-Canadian Congress of Labour, whose membership is comprised in Canadian bodies, had 41 local unions under direct charters, an increase of 10, with a combined membership of 4,073, a gain of 972 as compared with 1931. The remaining organizations have between them 614 branches, making in all 701 subordinate local branch unions which are not affiliated with international organizations. The combined membership of the Canadian group at the close of 1932, according to information furnished by the various organizations, and the estimated membership for those which did not report, stood at 66,993. These figures indicate that there are 22 more branch unions, with an increase in membership of 9,644 as compared with the figures recorded in 1931.

In addition to the local branches affiliated with either international or Canadian organizations there are 47 independent trade unions in the Dominion, an increase of 10 over the number recorded in 1931. Only 2 of the 47 failed to report, the combined membership of the 45 local branches being 15,496, which compared with the membership of the independent unions in 1931, shows an increase of 3,397.

The membership of the national Catholic unions, as reported by the general secretary of the Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada, is 25,000, a decrease of 151, as compared with the previous year, comprised in 109 local bodies, seven of which are designated as study circles, a loss of 12.

The information furnished the department by the officers of labour organizations and that secured from other reliable sources indicates that there were in Canada at the close of the year, 2,725 local branch unions of all classes, a decrease of 47 divided as follows: International, 1,868; Canadian 701; independent units, 47; national Catholic, 109, with a combined membership of 283,576, apportioned among the various groups as follows: International, 176,087; Canadian, 66,993; independent, 15,496; and national Catholic, 25,000. Subdividing the international group, it will be found that the craft unions in Canada number 1,813, with a combined membership of 149,129; that the One Big Union has 47 units with 23,340 members, and the Industrial Workers of the World, 8 branches with 3,618 members.

As in the past the Department has endeavoured to secure information as to what proportion of trade union membership is made up of female workers. These particulars, as has been stated previously, are difficult to obtain, many of the organizations not keeping separate records of male and female members. Of the 80 international organizations whose names appear in the appended table only 13 furnished the desired information, the total number of female members reported in their respective jurisdictions (outside of Canada), in which they have a combined membership of 2,506,280 being only 48,079. Of the organizations which have no locals or members in Canada, 12 reported a female membership of 45,391, making a total of 93,470 female workers in industry. This membership is known to far short of the actual number of women workers identified with organized labour, there being many other organizations besides those reporting which admit female members, but, as above stated, keep no separate records of male and female members, and consequently made no report. The Canadian female membership of trade unions at the close of 1932, as reported by 230 of the local branch unions of all classes in the Dominion, was 3,939, divided by provinces as follows: Ontario, 1,414; Quebec, 777; British Columbia, 733; Alberta, 626; Manitoba, 151; New Brunswick, 123, Saskatchewan, 76; Nova Scotia, 39.

The National Women's Trade Union League, which has the endorsation of the American Federation of Labour and the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada is a body designed to assist in the organization of women workers. The league, which has head offices in Washington, D.C., does not issue charters to trade unions of women, its efforts being directed towards encouraging the female workers to enter the existing labour organizations. The platform of the league embraces (1) organization of workers into trade unions, (2) equal pay for equal work, (3) eight-hour day and 44-hour week, (4) an American standard of living, (5) full citizenship for women, (6) the outlawry of war, and (7) closer affiliation of women workers of all countries. Miss Rose Schneiderman is the president and Miss Elisabeth Christman is secretary, their office being located in the Machinists' Building, Ninth St. and Mt. Vernon Place, N.W., Washington, D.C.

(a) Includes United States, Mexico, Canal Zone, Philippine and Hawaiian Islands, Newfoundland, etc.

(b) Includes only the unions directly chartered, i.e., those unions not affiliated through any international organization. The American Federation of Labor at the close of the fiscal year August 31, 1932, had 106 national and international unions affiliated, representing 26,362 locals, as well as four departments, 49 state federations, 619 city central bodies and 307 local trade and federal labour unions, making a total of 1,085 charters, representing a fully paid-up membership of 2,532,261. Because of unemployment there were thousands of members for whom no per capita tax was paid by the affiliated unions, and who, therefore, are not included in the number of members reported.

(d) Includes sub-branches of local unions.

* Indicates that union is affiliated with American Federation of Labor.

Indicate that union has also affiliated its Canadian membership with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada.

† Indicates that although suspended from membership in the A. F. of L., the Canadian membership is still affiliated with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada.

‡An affiliate of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour.

CANADIAN CENTRAL BODIES

The table following gives the reported membership of the Canadian Central labour bodies, included in which is the name of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, the bulk of whose membership, as previously pointed out, is drawn from international organizations, the standing of which has already been taken into account. The Congress, besides the affiliated membership of 61 international and 3 Canadian organizations, has 46 directly chartered unions, an increase of 4. The membership of the unions in direct affiliation which is recorded in the accompanying table, and not counted elsewhere, is 4,812, a decrease of 927. The total membership of the Congress at the close of its fiscal year was reported at 122,129, a decrease of 19,008, comprised in 1,608 local branch unions, a loss of 27.

The All-Canadian Congress of Labour has in affiliation the eleven central bodies marked thus (†) in the accompanying table, and the One Big Union, whose name appears in table 1. The reported membership of the twelve affiliates is 46,655, comprised in 320 local branches, an increase in members of 21,434 and in branches of 26, the gain being accounted for, to a large extent, by the reaffiliation of the One Big Union. The directly chartered unions number 41, a gain of 10, with a combined membership of 4,073, a gain of 972, making a total membership of 50,728.

The Amalgamated Building Workers of Canada shows a loss of 4 branches, now having 3, with a combined membership of 423, a loss of 17.

The Amalgamated Carpenters of Canada reported 14 branches, a loss of 1, with a total membership of 2,018, a decrease of 482.

The Amalgamated Civil Servants of Canada, which has the largest following of the four organizations embracing employees of the Dominion Government whose names appear in the trade union group, has 39 local branches, a gain of 1, with a combined membership of 4,435, a loss of 209. The United Postal Employees of Canada is second in the group, having 36 local branches, a decrease of 5, with a membership of 2,200, a loss of 200. The Federated Association of Letter Carriers stands third in this group of organizations of Dominion Government employees, having 48 branches, a gain of 5, with a membership of 1,397, a loss of 59. The Dominion Railway Mail Clerks' Federation reported a gain of 1 branch, now having 16, with 934 members, an increase of 8.

The Amalgamated Mine Workers of Nova Scotia, an organization formed during 1932, has 21 local branches, with a combined membership of 7,801.

The Bridge, Structural, Ornamental, Reinforced Iron Workers, Pile Drivers and Riggers' Union reported 1 branch, no change since last report, with 179 members, a loss of 1.

The Brotherhood of Express Employees has 27 branches, one more than in 1931, and the membership numbers 1,324, a loss of 203.

The Canadian Association of Railway Enginemen increased its local divisions by 13, now having 65, with a membership of 2,370, an increase of 815.

The Canadian Association of Seamen, another organization to be formed in 1932, had no locals at the close of the year, but reported a membership of 1,252.

The Canadian Association of Stationary Engineers reported 16 branches, a gain of 1, with 400 members, a loss of 100.

The Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees reported a membership of 15,430, a loss of 1,920, comprised in 194 local divisions, a decrease of 31.

The Canadian Carpet Weavers' Beneficial Association, while retaining its 5 local branches, shows a loss of 12 in members, now having 152.

The Canadian Electrical Trades Union has 8 branches, 1 less than reported in 1931, with a loss in membership of 40, now having 923.

The Canadian Printers' Union reported a gain in membership of 37, now having 73, comprised in one general body.

The Civil Service Association of Alberta reported 12 branches, the same as in 1931, with 850 members, an increase of 150.

The Electrical Communication Workers of Canada consists of one division, with eastern, western and British Columbia sections, as well as 4 radio units, 2 marine and 2 shore, and a mixed unit, the membership reported being 211, a gain of 16.

The Industrial Union of Needle Trades Workers, whose membership is comprised in one general body, failed to report, and its membership is shown as 2,500, the same as for 1931.

The Lumber Workers' Industrial Union of Canada reported 30 branches, no change, with a membership of 7,000, the large gain of 3,500.

The Mine Workers' Union of Canada lost a branch, leaving the number of local branches at 15, with a membership of 3,000, a loss of 131.

The National Association of Marine Engineers showed no change, the standing being 16 local lodges and 1,086 members.

The National Union of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of Canada, while retaining its 4 local branches, shows a gain in members of 100, now having 286.

The Native Brotherhood of British Columbia, the third organization to be formed during 1932, has 8 local branches, with a combined membership of 480.

The Provincial Federation of Ontario Fire Fighters retains its 32 affiliated branches with a membership of 1,832, but as 6 of the branches are also affiliates of the International Association of Fire Fighters, whose membership has been taken into account in table No. 1, only the membership of the 26 branches not under dual charters is recorded in the accompanying table, which indicates the same number of branches as in 1931, and with the same membership, 726.

The Saskatchewan Brotherhood of Steam and Operating Engineers has the same number of branches as recorded in 1931, viz., 2, but a decrease in membership of 6, now having 28.

The Vancouver and District Waterfront Workers' Association, which has only 1 branch, reports a membership of 630, a decrease of 50.

The gain in the number of local branches of Canadian central organizations for the year 1932 was 28, and an increase in members of 9,825. In 1931 the increases were 6 in branches and 181 in members.

(a) Includes only the local branch unions under direct charters at the close of 1932. Besides these there are in affiliation the three Central Canadian bodies marked () with 76 branches and 3,333 members, and also two provincial federations of labour and 38 trade and labour councils. Per capita tax was also paid during the year by a number of local branches of international unions which had affiliated individually, as well as by 60 International organizations which had affiliated the whole of their Canadian membership, numbering 119,119, comprising 1,417 local branches. The whole directly chartered and affiliated paid-up membership of the Congress was reported at 122,129.

(b) Includes only the local unions under direct charters. In addition to these the All-Canadian Congress has in affiliation the 11 central bodies indicated thus (†), with 313 branches, and a combined membership of 22,943, as well as the One Big Union, with 48 branches and 23,712 members (one branch and 372 members being in the United States), and 14 trades and labour councils. The total membership of the All-Canadian Congress was reported at 50,356.

(c) Includes only the local branches directly chartered. The Federation of Ontario Fire Fighters also has in affiliation the six local branches of the International Association of Fire Fighters located respectively at Fort William, Hamilton, London, North Bay, Ottawa, and Toronto, making a total of 32 affiliates and a membership of 1,832.

TRADE UNION BRANCHES BY PROVINCES

The accompanying tables indicate the number of subordinate branches of the international and Canadian organizations located in the various provinces of the Dominion. The names of the different bodies are arranged, for the purpose of comparison, in the same order as they appear in tables No. 1 and No. 1A.

There were 1,868 branches of international organizations, including those of the two international industrial unions, in existence in the Dominion at the close of 1932, a decrease of 67 as compared with the number recorded in 1931. By provinces the local branches, according to the numerical standing, are divided as follows: Ontario, 757, a loss of 27; Quebec, 277, a loss of 9; British Columbia, 186, a loss of 12; Alberta, 182, a loss of 7; Saskatchewan, 140, a loss of 5; Manitoba, 138, a loss of 4; Nova Scotia, 99, a loss of 2; New Brunswick, 85, a loss of 1; and Prince Edward Island, 4, no change.

In table No. 2A, giving the standing of the Canadian organizations, the names of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada and the All-Canadian Congress of Labour are included, the figures shown being only for their directly chartered branches, and which are not elsewhere taken into account. The local branches recorded for the Provincial Federation of Ontario Fire Fighters include only those which are chartered direct and which are not connected with any other organization. The number of branches of Canadian organizations at the close of 1932 was 701, an increase of 22 over 1931, divided by provinces as follows: Ontario, 261, same as in 1931; Quebec, 85, an increase of 1; Alberta, 81, a loss of 3; British Columbia, 75, a gain of 9; Saskatchewan, 59, a loss of 7; Nova Scotia, 57, a gain of 22; Manitoba, 41, a gain of 2; New Brunswick, 35, a loss of 2; and Prince Edward Island, 7, no change.

FEDERATION OF TRADE UNIONS

The table following contains the name of every known federation of trade union branches in the Dominion, together with the number of affiliations and combined membership. The figures given in the table do not in any way affect the number of local branch unions or the total trade union membership of the Dominion, all of the local branch unions and membership having been included in the statements which appear in preceding sections.

The Alberta Federation of Labour reported 121 affiliations, a loss of 9, with a combined membership of 7,136, a decrease of 1,664. The New Brunswick Federation of Labour shows a decrease of 4 affiliates, now having 43, with a combined membership of 3,186, a loss of 314.

Of the reporting councils in the building trades group, the Toronto body stands first with 22 affiliates, a gain of 2, and a membership of 4,500, a loss of 1,000. The Winnipeg council shows a gain of 1 affiliate, now having 12, with a membership of 3,000, a gain of 1,350. Vancouver council is third with 18 affiliates, a loss of 2, the membership of 1,874 also showing a loss of 426. Hamilton council while showing a gain of 1 affiliate, now having 11, reports the same membership as in 1931—1,500.

In the group of allied printing councils, Toronto again stands in first place with 8 affiliates and 2,101 members, a loss in the latter of 749. Montreal council occupies second place, having 7 affiliates, a loss of 1, with 1,600 members, a loss of 550. The Toronto Joint Board, a new body appearing for the first time, is in third place with 8 affiliates and a membership of 1,400.

Division No. 4, Railway Employees Department, which is under charter from the Railway Employees' Department of the American Federation of Labor is the most important of the railway federations, and is composed of the internationally organized shop mechanics and car department employees of all Canadian railway lines. The department has in affiliation local branch unions of 10 international organizations and several railway system federations, and comprises a total membership of 36,024, a decrease of 109 members as compared with the number reported in 1931. The strongest system federation whose members are in the employ of a single railway company is the Canadian National Railway system federation No. 11, which is composed of the shop mechanics in affiliation with seven international organizations comprising such workers, and is sub-divided into Atlantic, Central and Western Regions, the first named region having 1,376 members, the Central 5,487, and the Western 4,000 members, making a total membership of 10,863, a loss of 3,610 members as compared with 1931. Standing third in this group as to membership is Canadian Pacific Railway System Federation, No. 125, which has the local branch unions of 6 international organizations comprising a membership of 11,040, a loss of 2,460 as compared with the previous year. The two strongest numerically of the local system federations of shop mechanics are those comprising employees of the C.P.R., the Montreal federation has 12 local unions in affiliation, the same number as in 1931, with 3,000 members, a decrease of 800; next is the federation in Winnipeg with 9 local unions affiliated, an increase of 2, with 1,307 members, a loss of 111. The third largest is the local federation in London, comprising shop mechanics employed in both the C.P.R. and C.N.R. shops, and which has 5 affiliates, with a membership of 660, a loss of 140.

The federation of employees of public authorities which reported the strongest following is the B.C. Federation of Civic and Municipal employees, which has 7 affiliated unions, a gain of 1, with a combined membership of 3,000. The Vancouver body is second, with 4 affiliates, a gain of 1, with a membership of 1,400, an increase of 200. Standing third is the Edmonton federation, with a gain of 1 affiliate, now having 7, and a membership of 650, the same as reported for 1931.

The Labour Educational Association of Ontario, whose name appears in the miscellaneous section, permits representation to those bodies which contribute a prescribed fee, irrespective of their membership, and consequently no account of numerical standing is obtainable.

Of the eleven delegate bodies of National Catholic unions published in this section, two more than was recorded in 1931, two failed to make returns. The Montreal Building Trades Council has the largest membership of those which reported, having 26 affiliates with 3,300 members. Next is the federation of pulp and paper trades unions, with 4 affiliates and 1,750 members, an increase of 1,300. The Quebec Building Trades Council stands third, having 7 unions in affiliation, a loss of 1, with a membership of 1,450, an increase of 250. In fourth place is the Boot and Shoe Workers Federation with 5 affiliated unions and a membership of 1,300, a loss of 200. The federation of Printing Trades report 9 affiliates and 650 members, an increase in membership of 200.

The statement appended indicates that there were at the close of the year 51 federations composed of non-secretarian unions, 2 more than in 1931, divided by groups as follows: Provincial federations, 2; building trades councils, 13; printing trades councils, 15; railway employees' federations, 16; federations of employees of public authorities, 4; miscellaneous, 1.

The federations of national Catholic unions are divided as follows: Building, 6; printing, 2; boot and shoe workers, 2; pulp and paper, 1.

The following table gives, for comparative purposes, the affiliates and memberships of the respective federations for 1931 and 1932:—

DISTRICT COUNCILS

The purpose of the appended statement is to show the extent to which branch unions of particular trades federate for conference and co-operation in trade and other matters. Although some of the councils have only a few affiliates, they comprise all the branches and members in their respective jurisdictions.

The Ontario Conference Board of the Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers' International Union has in affiliation the 31 branches of the organization located in the province, the same number as reported in 1931, with a combined reported membership of 1,906, a decrease of 454.

The Toronto District Management Committee of the Amalgamated Carpenters of Canada reported 3 branches in affiliation the same as in 1931, with 800 members, a loss of 70. The Vancouver District Management Committee of the same organization has 3 affiliates with a combined reported membership of 350, a decrease of 20.

There are one inter-provincial, two provincial and five district councils of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, the same number as recorded in 1931. The Quebec Provincial Council reported 16 branches of the Brotherhood in the province in affiliation, a loss of 2, with a combined reported membership of 2,300, a loss of 1,100.

The Ontario Provincial Council claims 32 branches in the province in affiliation, 2 less than in 1931, with a combined membership of 2,867, a loss of 419.

The Western Canada Conference, an interprovincial body having jurisdiction over Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, has 5 local unions and a district council in affiliation, 2 less than in 1931, with a membership of 1,800, a decrease of 210.

The jurisdiction of the five district councils is generally confined to a particular city, but in some instances extends to adjacent localities. The Montreal Council reported the largest following of the district bodies, having 8 affiliates, the same as in 1931, with a membership of 1,300, a decrease of 700. In second place stands the Vancouver council with four affiliates, 1 less than recorded in 1931, with 1,014 members, a loss of 286.

District council No. 5 of the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers, which comprise the 6 branches of the organization in the City of Montreal failed to report any membership. The Ontario Provincial Association of the United Association of Plumbers, Gas and Steam Fitters lost 3 affiliates, now having 11, with a membership of 1,400, a loss of 100. The Alberta Provincial Conference of the Journeymen Stonecutters' Association has 3 affiliates, same as in 1931 but the membership has decreased by 12, now being 38.

District Council No. 30 of the Brotherhood of Boilermakers, which has jurisdiction over lodges of the craft whose members are employed on railroads which have their greatest mileage in Canada, has 32 affiliated lodges, no change, and shows a decrease in members of 585, now having 1,735. The District Council of Montreal of the International Association of Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Iron Workers appears for the first time, with 2 affiliates and 300 members. There are one provincial council and four district lodges of the International Association of Machinists in Canada. The provincial body, which has jurisdiction over Ontario, has 36 affiliates, a loss of 4, the membership not being reported. Of the district lodges, No. 2, which includes in its membership all local lodges of the association whose members are employed in Canadian railroad shops, reported 59 affiliated lodges, the same as in 1931, with a combined membership of 5,000 a loss of 1,500. The district lodge which stands second as to membership is No. 82 of Montreal, which reported 3 affiliates, the same as in 1931, with 1,800 members, a loss of 200. The Conference Board of Ontario of the International Moulders' Union reported 19 affiliated branches, a loss of 1, with a membership of 550, a decrease of 162.

The Montreal Joint Board of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, reported 5 affiliates, a loss of 1, but failed to report its membership. The Toronto Board of this organization reported the same number of affiliates, viz, 7, but shows an increase of 5 in membership, now having 1,675. There are two joint boards of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, located respectively in Montreal and Toronto, that in the last named city having 5 affiliates, the same as in 1931, with a membership of 1,500, a loss of 200. The Montreal board lost 625 members, now having 1,175 comprised in 5 affiliated branches. The International Fur Workers' Union also has joint boards in Montreal and Toronto, the latter having 4 affiliates, with 766 members, a decrease of 84 in membership. The Montreal board failed to make a report as to its standing. The Headgear Workers' Central Bureau of Canada, a delegate body of the Cloth Hat, Cap and Millinery Workers' International Union, has 3 Canadian branches in affiliation, the same as in 1931, with a combined membership of 450, a decrease of 50.

There is one council of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union, that for the province of Ontario. This body, though in a dormant condition, has not dissolved, and it is understood that it is to be revived.

In the printing trades group, the Ontario and Quebec Conference of the International Typographical Union, the only delegate body of printers composed entirely of Canadian branches, reported 18 affiliates, a gain of 2, and the membership was reported at 2,000, a loss of 752. The Northwestern Conference contains members from British Columbia, but its jurisdiction also includes the States of Washington, Idaho and Oregon, and it has 51 affiliates with 3,220 members, a gain of 419.

There are five district councils of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees, the one with the largest following being that in Winnipeg with 11 affiliated local divisions, a loss of 2, with a membership of 1,500, an increase of 808. Quebec council reported 9 affiliates, a decrease of 2, the membership being given at 378, a loss of 22. Halifax council is third with 8 affiliated divisions, with a membership of 405, a gain of 115.

The only entirely Canadian district council of the International Longshoremen's Association is that embracing the 4 local branches in Saint John and vicinity, and which reported 1,327 members, an increase of 234 as compared with 1931. The largest district council of the longshoremen is that with jurisdiction over the entire North Atlantic coast, including Canadian ports, and numbers among its affiliates local branches in both Canada and the United States; the affiliations reported were 52 with a membership of 25,000. The Pacific Coast District, which includes British Columbia, reported 12 affiliated branches with a membership of 3,000.

District 26 of the United Mine Workers, with jurisdiction over the coal fields of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, has now 25 affiliations, a decrease of 1, with a membership of 6,000, a loss of 7,500. The report from the provisional officers handling U.M.W. affairs in what is known as District 18 during the suspension of the district union, shows that 13 local unions are identified with the U.M.W. in that territory, 2 less than in 1931, the combined membership of which was reported at 3,350, a loss of 250.

There are two delegate bodies of the Journeymen Barbers' International Union—the Dominion Federation and the Ontario Federation—the last mentioned having 21 affiliates, with 1,500 members; the Dominion Federation has 24 affiliates, with 2,976 members. There are now two districts of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees. District No. 11 of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, with jurisdiction over the provinces of Quebec and Ontario, reported 24 affiliates, a gain of 1, the membership being 820, a loss of 280. No. 12, which was formed during 1932, with jurisdiction over the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, reported a membership of 15 but made no report as to the number of branches in affiliation.

Of the two delegate bodies made up of affiliates of the International Association of Fire Fighters, that operating in the province of British Columbia has 4 affiliates, and 475 members, a decrease of 20 while that for Alberta-Saskatchewan has 5 affiliates, with 200 members, a loss of 75.

The Ontario Executive Board of the International Union of Operating Engineers reported 16 affiliates, but the membership was not given. There are two district councils of the International Brotherhood of Firemen and Oilers; No. 7 reported 16 affiliates and 750 members a decrease of 50; No. 8 reported a membership of 9 but did not state the number of affiliates.

There are 52 district councils in this group, divided by trades as follows: Carpenters, 10, clothing workers, including ladies' garment workers, cap makers, and fur workers, 7; railway employees and machinists, 5 each; longshoremen, 3; mine workers, printers, barbers, fire fighters, firemen and oilers, and theatrical stage employees, 2 each; bricklayers, electricians, painters, plumbers, stone cutters, boilermakers, bridge and structural iron workers, moulders, and operating engineers, 1 each.

The table following gives, for comparative purposes, the affiliates and membership of the respective councils for both 1931 and 1932.

TRADES AND LABOUR COUNCILS

The composition and functions of trades and labour councils have been discussed in a preceding chapter. The purpose of this statement is to show the extent to which these bodies represent the organized workers in the localities where they have been established. In some instances trades and labour councils have jurisdiction over a number of adjacent localities, but in the main they are confined to a particular city or town. Fourteen of the councils are operating under charters from the All-Canadian Congress of Labour, and are designated by the word "national" and the affix "A.C.C.L." Two labour councils are chartered by the One Big Union, and are shown with the affix "O.B.U.", while six are identified with the national Catholic unions. The remaining 38 councils are made up of delegates from local branches of international organizations and such Canadian bodies as are in harmony with the international trade union movement, and are operating under charters derived from the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada. Seventeen of the latter councils are also chartered by the American Federation of Labour, a proceeding to which the Canadian body does not object. The number of unions given for each locality includes the branches of all classes of organizations named in the report. There are two trades and labour councils in the Province of Nova Scotia, both being located in Halifax, one of which represents the international trade union movement, being chartered by the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, and has in affiliation 19 local unions out of 39 in the district, representing a membership of 4,280; the other council is under charter from the All-Canadian Congress, and has 10 of the unions in affiliation, with a membership of 490.

Of the four councils in New Brunswick, two each in Moncton and Saint John, the one representing the international labour movement in the first named city is the most representative, having 12 of the 29 local unions in the locality as affiliates, with a membership of 1,800; the Saint John council of the same class being second with 25 affiliates out of 43 unions in the city, with a membership of 2,760. Of the two councils of the All-Canadian Congress that in Moncton has 6 affiliates with 650 members and that in Saint John 4 affiliates with 127 members.

The Montreal council of the Trades and Labour Congress ranks first in the province of Quebec, having 78 of the 197 unions in the city in affiliation, with a membership of 42,140. The council operating under the auspices of the All-Canadian Congress has 25 affiliates, with a membership of 6,700. The Quebec and Levis council of the international movement has in affiliation 26 of the 76 local unions in the locality. The national council reports 14 affiliates, and a membership of 1,000.

Of the 25 councils in Ontario, that in Toronto representing the international organizations stands first, having 70 of the 151 unions in affiliation with a membership of 25,000; the national council of the All-Canadian Congress has 31 affiliates with 4,500 members. Hamilton council representing the international trade unions is second with 40 of the 59 eligible unions, with a membership of 6,000. The national council in Hamilton has 10 affiliates with 500 members. Ottawa council ranks third with 30 of the 74 local unions in the district in affiliation with a membership of 2,500. St. Thomas council stands fourth with 12 affiliated unions out of 26 in the city, and represents 2,000 organized workers; London Trades and Labour Council comes next with 26 unions affiliated out of 53, with a membership of 1,700.

There are 4 trades councils in Manitoba, two of which represent the international labour movement, the Winnipeg council in this class having 32 of the 107 unions in the locality in affiliation, but the membership was not reported. The council operating under the auspices of the All-Canadian Congress reported 7 affiliates with 5,000 members. The third council is that of Pine Falls, representing the international trade union movement, and has 3 affiliates with 145 members. The O.B.U. has a council at Winnipeg, but it failed to make any return.

Of the five councils in Saskatchewan, three represent the internationally organized workers, the one with the largest following being the Saskatoon council, which has 18 affiliated unions out of 37 in the locality, with a membership of 1,640. Regina council representing the internationals is second with 20 affiliates out of 43 in the district, and represents 1,000 members, while Moose Jaw council of the same class is close behind with 22 affiliates out of 29 unions in the locality and a membership of 830. Of the two national councils of the All-Canadian Congress, Regina stands first with 9 affiliates and 300 members, while Saskatoon council has 4 affiliates with 100 members.

There are five councils in Alberta, three of which represent the international trade union movement, the most representative being that in Edmonton, which reported 40 unions in affiliation out of 70 in the locality, with 3,500 members Calgary council representing the international movement has 1,890 members, 27 affiliated unions out of 73 in the locality. The larger of the two national councils of the All-Canadian Congress is in Edmonton, which has 12 affiliates, with 960 members.

There are also five councils in British Columbia, the largest of which is the Vancouver-New Westminster and District body, which represents the international movement, and has in affiliation 62 out of 138 unions in the locality, with a membership of 13,200, the national council for the same district being second with 22 affiliates, with a membership of 4,780. Victoria council representing the international unions is third with 21 affiliated unions out of 43 in the locality, with a membership of 1,500

Of the six central councils of the national Catholic unions, that in Quebec reporting 26 affiliated syndicates out of 76 in the locality, with a membership of 4,800, is the largest. The second reporting council is that in Chicoutimi, which has 12 unions reported in affiliation, with a membership of 1,500.

The names of the councils operating under dual charters are preceded by an asterisk, the reports published being for both 1931 and 1932, and show (1) the number of branch unions in affiliation, (2) members represented, and (3) total branch unions operating in the locality.

TRADE UNION MEMBERSHIP BY LOCALITIES

In this section is given the name of every locality in the Dominion in which exist one or more branches of the various classes of trade unions operating in Canada. Two tables are presented herewith, showing (1) the localities which have local branches of international unions (including the O.B.U., and I.W.W.), Canadian and independent units; and (2) the localities in which national Catholic unions are operating. The names of cities, towns, etc., are arranged alphabetically, and in order of provinces, proceeding from east to west. The number of branches reporting membership and the membership reported are also shown in this statement.

There are 2,725 trade union branches of all classes in Canada, 1,813 of which are affiliates of international craft organizations, 47 are units of the One Big Union, 8 are identified with the Industrial Workers of the World, 701 are branches of Canadian bodies, 47 are independent units and 109 are National Catholic unions. Sixty-one of the last named unions supplied information as to membership, and similar particulars were received from 2,040 branches of the five other classes of organizations operating in the Dominion, making 2,101 reporting unions, representing 77 per cent of the total, although reports were received from 124 fewer unions than reported in 1931.

The membership reported from the head offices of all organizations with branches or members in Canada, or which has been secured from other sources, totals 283,576 comprised, as above stated, in 2,725 branches. The membership reported by the 2,101 local branches is 186,034, or an average of approximately 89 for each reporting branch. The remaining membership of 97,542 divided among the 624 non-reporting branches gives an approximate average of 156 members. The membership of the system divisions of telegraphers cannot be recorded in any particular locality, and is therefore included under localities not specified. The 2,040 reporting branches of the non-sectarian bodies, i.e., those classed as international, Canadian and independent units, show a membership of 179,279, an average of close to 88; the total membership of 576 non-reporting branches is 77,297, an average of approximately 134. The 61 reporting national Catholic unions out of a total of 109 give a membership of 6,755, an average of 111, the remaining membership of 18,245 divided among the 48 non-reporting unions indicates the high average of 380.

Where a local union has a large membership, or where a skilled craft is highly organized, reports of numerical strength are invariably supplied. There are instances, however, where officers are not permitted to supply any information concerning the organization without first obtaining the sanction of the members, and this permission, it is known, has at times been refused, it being considered that the publication of such information might be injurious to their interests. The apathy of the local officers is very often responsible for the failure to furnish particulars, but for the present report the response to requests for membership was fairly generous, the reporting unions, as above mentioned, representing about 77 per cent of the total.

There are 14 branch unions in the Dominion which reported a membership of 1,000 or over, five less than the number recorded in 1931, ten of which are connected with international craft organizations, one is identified with a Canadian body, two are independent units and one a national Catholic union. The union reporting the largest membership is the Syndicated Longshoremen of Montreal, an independent unit which has 2,857 members.

The local branch union, whose jurisdiction is confined to a particular city, which has the largest following is Toronto branch No. 113 of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway, Bus and Coach Employees, which reported 2,517 members; next comes the United Steel Workers, Sydney, N.S., another independent unit, with 2,023 members; followed closely by Montreal branch No. 790 of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway, Bus and Coach Employees, which reported 2,016 members; then comes Montreal lodge No. 111 of the International Association of Machinists, with 1,500 members, while close behind comes the Toronto branch No. 149 of the American Federation of Musicians with 1,492 members. Other local branch unions with strong memberships are: Workers Study Circle (National Catholic), Quebec, 1,450; Springhill branch No. 4514, of the United Mine Workers of America, 1,238; Toronto Civic Employees, No. 43, 1,202; Vancouver division No. 101, of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employees, 1,152; Toronto branch No. 91 of the International Typographical Union, 1,140; Saint John branch No. 273, International Longshoremen's Association, 1,000. Two of the system divisions of the Order of Railroad Telegraphers, whose members are stationed over a wide territory, reported large memberships, the strongest being System Division No. 7, covering the Canadian Pacific Railway, with 2,710 members; System Division No. 43, with jurisdiction over the Canadian National Western Lines, has 1,350 members.

UNION MEMBERSHIP IN CANADIAN CITIES

The appended table shows the names of 29 cities having not less than 20 trade union branches of all classes, and gives (1) number in each locality, (2) number of unions reporting membership, and (3) number of members reported.

| Localities | Number of Unions in Locality | Number of Unions reporting membership | Number of members reported | Localities | Number of Unions in Locality | Number of Unions reporting membership | Number of members reported |

The 29 cities enumerated in the above list with 1,511 branches represent approximately 55 per cent of local branches of all classes operating in Canada, and represent about 77 per cent of the reporting branches and about 67 per cent of the membership of all groups as reported by the local unions, and they also contain about 44 per cent of the entire trade union membership in the Dominion. In 1931, there were 29 cities with not less than 20 branches each and between them they represented approximately 56 per cent of the branches of all classes and contained over 50 per cent of all union members in Canada.

UNION MEMBERSHIP BY PROVINCES

The following table shows the number of local branches of international and Canadian organizations, independent units and national Catholic unions in each province, together with the number that reported their membership and the number of members reported:—

XIX. TRADE UNION BENEFITS

Payments for Benefits Made by Eleven Canadian Central Labour Organizations and by Fifty-nine International Unions with Branches in Canada—Canadian Group has a Decrease—International also Shows a Decrease—Largest Expenditures are for Death Benefits—Large Disbursements by Four Railroad Brotherhoods—International Benefits in Detail—Amount Paid by Canadian Local Branch Unions to Their Own Members.

An important feature of labour organization is the provisions made by the majority of the trade unions for the payment of various classes of benefits, huge sums being expended annually, more especially by the railroad brotherhoods and some of the older international craft organizations. Of the 29 Canadian central labour bodies, 11 reported disbursements for benefits in 1932—eight paid death benefits; strike benefits were paid by two; other benefits by five. The total amount disbursed was reported at $37,872.73, a decrease of $37,568.08 as compared with the reported disbursements of eleven organizations in 1931. The table following gives the names of the Canadian central bodies reporting payments for benefits, as well as the amount spent for the classes of benefits indicated.

Of the 78 craft and two industrial organizations with branches or members in Canada, 59 of the first named reported from headquarters as to expenditures for benefits to members, but no reports as to payments for benefits were supplied by the industrial unions. The expenditures are for a one year period, and while in some instances are for the fiscal year of the respective organizations, are in the main for the calendar year 1932. Of the 59 organizations whose names appear in the accompanying table death benefits were paid by 54, unemployed and travelling by 10, strike by 30, sick and accident by 19, and old age pensions by 13, viz.: Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers' International Union; International Association of Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Iron Workers; United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners; International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers; Glass Bottle Blowers' Association; Granite Cutters International Association; Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers; Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union; Quarry Workers' International Union; Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen; Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employees; Sheep Shearers' Union of North America, and the International Typographical Union, the remaining amounts recorded in the column being for other purposes. Some of the 21 organizations having Canadian affiliations have benefit features, the administration of which in some instances is under the control of the local branches.

This is mainly accounted for by the fact that many local unions existed independently prior to their affiliation with the international "central," and some of these "locals" provided for death, sick and other benefits, for which a fund had been created. In this manner the benefit features have often become identified with the local branches, and their jurisdiction has been recognized. In other instances there is a division of control, sick benefits being administered by local branches, while the death, strike and pension funds are governed by the international body. The returns as to benefit payments furnished by the international organizations are for the whole membership. It is in rare cases that separate reports are received as to disbursements made by international organizations to their Canadian members, the general officers stating that to prepare such a statement would entail more work than they are in a position to undertake.

As for earlier reports, the department has endeavoured to ascertain what benefits in addition to those disbursed by the central organizations were paid during 1932 to their own members from the funds under the immediate control of the various Canadian branches of international organizations. Application for this information was forwarded to every known local union, and of these 830 reported having made payments on account of benefits, the aggregate of such disbursements being given in a separate table.

One hundred and fifteen local branch unions of Canadian organizations, 64 national Catholic unions and 20 independent units also reported disbursements for benefits to their own members.

The following statement shows the total reported expenditures made on account of benefits by the various international organizations operating in Canada as printed in a subsequent table:—

| Death benefits | $13,999,890 |
| Unemployed and travelling benefits | 430,296 |
| Strike benefits | 824,877 |
| Sick and accident benefits | 1,811,617 |
| Old age pensions and other benefits | 8,885,530 |

According to the returns received, the expenditures for benefits in 1932 by the international organizations with branches in Canada were $904,664 less than the disbursements for the same classes of benefits in 1931. The expenditure for death benefits, though as usual, responsible for more than half of the total disbursements, is lower by $1,755,543 than the amount reported for the previous year. The amount spent for unemployment and travelling benefits was $35,738 less than in 1931; for strike benefits there was an increase, the expenditure being greater by $34,533. The disbursements for sick and accident benefits were lower in 1932 by $1,661,232. Old age pensions amounted to $5,227,397. The total amount recorded in the old age and other benefit column shows an increase of $2,513,316 as compared with 1931.

The heaviest expenditure for death benefits was made by the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, the sum of $3,351,072; the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen spent $2,563,195, and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen had an outlay of $1,327,836 for death benefits. The Brotherhood of Railway Conductors reported having expended $1,191,400 for this class of benefits. Only ten organizations reported payments on account of unemployed and travelling benefits, the heaviest outlay being made by the Order of Railway Conductors, which organization disbursed $169,469, the International Moulders' Union being second with $121,344, followed by the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, with $113,395. Of the thirty organizations which paid strike benefits the International Photo Engravers' Union comes first with disbursements of $249,836, second being the International Moulders' Union with expenditures of $123,477, and the International Typographical Union third with an outlay of $118,389. In the sick and accident benefits column the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen is credited with an expenditure of $902,886, but a portion of this amount was for disability benefits and widows' pensions. For sick and accident benefits only, the Order of Railway Conductors expended $237,391, the United Association of Plumbers reporting the next largest sum—$179,430, with the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers following with an expenditure of $143,872. The International Typographical Union reported the heaviest expenditure solely for old age pensions, the amount being $1,466,880; the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners paid $1,052,685 for old age claims, while the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers expended $971,835 for these pensions.

The Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen had the largest aggregate expenditure for benefits, having disbursed a total of $5,308,639; the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers stands second with an outlay of $4,664,599; the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen being third with $2,833,997, and the International Typographical Union fourth with $2,101,813. The combined expenditures for benefits by the four brotherhoods, whose members are engaged in engine and train service, represent $14,340,455 of the total of $25,952,210 expended as benefits by the international labour bodies operating in the Dominion.

BENEFITS PAID BY LOCAL BRANCHES

Reports furnished by 830 local branch unions in Canada show that these bodies expended a total of $640,250 to their own members on account of the various benefits provided by their respective laws. The sum is $97,059 larger than that reported in 1931 by 943 local branches. The highest expenditure was for unemployed benefits, $266,303 being distributed, an increase of $98,871 as compared with 1931; the next highest expenditure was for sick and accident benefits, $137,009 being disbursed, a decrease of $39,050. For strike benefits $95,133 was paid out, an increase of $84,898. Death benefits amounted to $79,079, a smaller amount by $33,072 than expended in 1931. The expenditure for "other benefits" which represent disbursements for various purposes, including donations to other unions, amounted to $62,726, a decrease of $14,588. Of the total outlay for benefits by Canadian branch unions to their own members the 646 having international affiliation disbursed $518,706, an increase of $112,257, the expenditure for each class of benefits being: Death, $27,011; unemployed, $255,769; strike, $76,751; sick and accident, $102,664; other benefits, $56,511. The 164 branches of Canadian organizations, including 49 national Catholic unions, distributed $79,821, a decrease as compared with the outlay for 1931 of $25,563, divided as follows: Death, $33,213; unemployed, $7,709; strike, $17,997; sick and accident, $17,347; other benefits, $3,555. Twenty independent units reported expenditures for benefits of $41,723, an increase of $10,365, apportioned as follows: Death, $18,855; unemployed, $2,825; strike, $385; sick and accident, $16,998; other benefits, $2,660.

The following summary indicates the total amount disbursed by the local branch unions in Canada for the classes of benefits named:—

| Death benefits | $ 79,079 |
| Unemployed benefits | 266,303 |
| Strike benefits | 95,133 |
| Sick and accident benefits | 137,009 |
| Other benefits | 62,726 |

The expenditure of the above amounts by the local branch unions among their own members as previously explained, is in addition to the disbursements made for benefits by the central organizations.

The arrangement of the accompanying table is similar to the preceding one giving the disbursements by central international bodies, with the exception that the "other benefits" column does not include old age pension payments, but does embrace all gratuities, etc., which are not classed in other columns.

XX. NEW AND DISSOLVED LABOUR BODIES

New Unions Number 142, Dissolved 189, showing a Loss of 47 Local Branches during 1932—New and Dissolved Unions by Trade Groups—Names and Locations of the Labour Bodies Formed and Dissolved.

During the year 1932 there were eleven independent units formed, while one independent unit passed out of existence. The accompanying statement of dissolved unions includes the branches which seceded from parent bodies, the new names under which they are now functioning being given in the list of new unions. There were 142 local unions formed during 1932, and 189 dissolved or amalgamated with other unions, making a decrease, as stated in an earlier chapter, of 47. By trade groups the new and dissolved unions were as follows:—

| Mining and Quarrying | 33 | 11 |
| Lumbering | 11 | 8 |
| Agriculture | ..... | 1 |
| Building | 10 | 38 |
| Metal | 2 | 13 |
| Printing | ..... | 6 |
| Clothing | 5 | 8 |
| Steam Engineers and Firemen | 3 | 8 |
| Food and Tobacco | 2 | 4 |
| Railway Service | 22 | 50 |
| Navigation and General Transport | 15 | 10 |
| Communication | 2 | ..... |
| Personal Service | 11 | 7 |
| Employees of Public Authorities | 14 | 10 |
| Miscellaneous | 12 | 15 |

The delegate bodies organized during 1932 number 6—3 federations and 3 district councils. For the same period 5 delegate bodies passed out of existence—4 district councils and 1 central council (national Catholic). As explained in an earlier chapter, the formation or dissolution of these delegate bodies does not affect the trade union membership of the Dominion, their establishment being made possible only by the existence of local branch unions, which are the foundation of the whole plan of labour organization.

LIST OF LABOUR BODIES FORMED IN 1932

The following statement contains the name of every federation, district council, trades and labour council and local branch union known to have been formed in Canada during the year 1932, as well as the names of branches whose names have been re-inserted. Where the locality is given for bodies covering a wide territory it designates the address of the secretary. The list of local branches is arranged in trade groups, the name of the organization from which charter was secured, the location of the branch and the total charters issued by the respective organizations being given.

XXI. THE LABOUR PRESS

Official Trade Union Journals—Method of Circulating—Names of Labour Journals and Papers Published in Canada—List of International Labour Journals—National Catholic Union Periodicals—Communist Publications.

The development of the trade union movement in North America has brought into existence a labour press of some significance, all of the more important labour organizations having official journals through which trade union activities and official business are reported to the rank and file. In some instances the publications, which are usually issued monthly, but sometimes semi-monthly or quarterly, devote space to craft problems and incidents of interest to the labour movement generally. The editorship of the union journals is in some cases an elective position, but usually the secretary has charge of the editing and management. The head offices of the publications issued by the international labour bodies are located in the United States. All official journals have a regular subscription rate, but most of the organizations arrange to include the fee in the per capita tax so as to insure the publication reaching each member, whether residing in Canada, United States, or elsewhere.

There are thirteen labour periodicals printed in Canada, ten of which are known as official journals of central organizing bodies (two are issued by one organization), three are published by groups of branch unions connected with international organizations, and the remaining four in the list are journals of civil service employees' associations which are, or which claim to be, identical with trade unions. There are also The Civil Service Review, published by the Civil Service Federation of Canada, and The Civil Service News, official organ of the Civil Service Association of Ottawa, neither of which organization is affiliated with any trade union body.

At the close of 1932, there were nine Canadian papers published under the auspices of some labour or labour political organization, or which claimed to be issued in the interests of the trade union movement. Their names and place of publication are given in this chapter. There are upwards of 150 weekly papers published in the United States under the auspices or in the interests of the organized workers and recognized as a part of the labour press by the trade union movement as represented by the American Federation of Labor.

The following six Canadian labour publications devote some of their space to matter printed in the French language: (1) Canadian Congress Journal; (2) Canadian Unionist; (3) Canadian Railway Employees' Monthly; (4) The Federated Railwayman; (5) The Labour World, and (6) The Postal Courier (Le Courrier de la Poste). The official journal of the United Mine Workers contains sections printed in several different languages.

With a view to stimulating the labour papers of the continent the International Labour Press was established some years ago, through the agency of which the editors of the various recognized labour publications are brought into conference annually at the same time and in the same city in which the American Federation of Labor is holding its convention, when matters relative to their work may be discussed and suggestions invited as to how the labour news service of the continent may be improved. The president of the International Labour Press is Matthew Woll, 105 A.F. of L. Bldg., Washington, D.C., and the secretary R. E. Woodmansee, Box 15, Springfield, Ill.

COMMUNIST PUBLICATIONS

In addition to the recognized trade union periodicals the Communist Party published The Worker as its official organ until the party was declared illegal in December, 1931, following which the paper appeared under the auspices of the Worker Publishing Association. The Young Communist League publishes The Young Worker as its official monthly journal and the official paper of the Workers' Unity League is Workers' Unity, both of which are printed in Toronto. The Canadian Labour Defence League, which is known as a Communist organization, issues the Canadian Labour Defender.

The Workers' Party of America publishes in New York, N.Y., an official paper under the title of the Daily Worker, which is understood to be one of the two dailies published in the English language in the interests of communism; the other daily is published in London, England, under a similar name. The Labour Herald, which was the official journal of the Trade Union Educational League, was in 1924 consolidated with the Liberator and Soviet Russia Pictorial under the name of the Workers' Monthly, the name of which in 1927 was changed to The Communist, being published monthly by the Workers' (Communist) Party of America as a theoretical magazine for the discussion of revolutionary problems.

The Communist League of America, the opposition group to the Workers (Communist) Party of America, publishes a weekly organ in New York under the title of The Militant, and the National Youth Committee of the same group, in December, 1931, commenced the publication of a monthly paper under the name of the Young Spartican.

XXIII. NON-TRADE UNION ASSOCIATIONS

Important Organizations of Wage-Earners in the Dominion Not Identified With Organized Labour—Chief Organizations of School Teachers—Associations of Government Employees and Commercial Travellers—Objects of the Organizations in This Group, With Chief Officers—Affiliations and Membership.

Apart from the labour organizations which have been discussed in earlier chapters of this report, and which make up the trade union movement of the Dominion, there are a number of associations of wage earners that are not identified with organized labour, but which it is believed are of sufficient importance to justify reference being made to them in the present volume. Included in this group of non-trade union bodies are central associations of school teachers, who, however, are also organized locally, and are brought together in district and provincial federations. These in turn are in the main connected with a Dominion-wide body known as the Canadian Teachers' Federation, the objects of which are: (1) To obtain co-operation and co-ordination of all provincial teachers' organizations upon policies and activities of common interest; (2) to provide machinery by which the various provincial organizations could be kept in touch with one another, and through which mutual assistance could be quickly and readily given. Other advantages of membership in the teachers' organizations are stated to be the efforts put forth to secure what are considered adequate salaries for the teaching profession, and below the schedules prepared by the associations members are not supposted to accept a position. With a view to maintaining this principle members are enjoined in some instances from seeking a position where a vacancy has occurred through a school board refusing to pay the scheduled salary, a policy which is in accord with one of the fundamental principles of organized labour.

The names of associations of Government employees which are, or which claim to be identical with trade unions, have appeared in a previous chapter of this report. The majority of organizations of civil servants, however, do not so identify themselves, and their names are accordingly included in the present group. These embrace organizations composed of various classes of employees in the service of the Dominion Government, as well as bodies comprising employees of provincial Governments, the objects of all of which are to speak collectively for their respective membership on matters which they desire to bring to the attention of the proper authorities.

Though there are in the Dominion a number of ex-soldier associations which were formed with a view to fostering the comradeship of the trenches, the only veterans' organizations which it is considered fitting to include in this report are (1) The Veterans' Service Guild, an association for ex-soldiers employed in the Government service, the activities of which are chiefly confined to Montreal where it was established in 1922, (2) Canadian Railways Veterans' Guild, organized in 1925, composed of men who are employed in the departments of the Canadian National Railways, (3) Canadian Workers' Federation of Returned Soldiers and Sailors, which was formed in Montreal in 1919 to protect their members against alleged discrimination by labour unions.

Appearing in this chapter are the names of six municipal employees associations, two more than recorded in 1931, whose members are not connected with the trade union movement. In some instances, however, municipal employees are so identified.

The stronger numerically of the associations whose names are printed in this group embrace commercial travellers. Some of these organizations, which have been in existence for many years, have as a result of their efforts secured numerous privileges for their members, and in addition have disbursed large sums for benefit purposes. The oldest of these organizations is the Commercial Travellers' Association of Canada, which has been actively functioning for over fifty-three years. Included among the organizations of commercial travellers is the Catholic Commercial Travellers' Association of Canada, a grouping of French-Canadian Roman Catholic commercial travellers' societies, which accepts as its principle "submission to the authority of the church and adherence to directions from the Holy See," and is designed to direct its members towards the religious and social apostolate.

In this section of the report is given the name of the Toronto Writers' Club, which was organized in 1923, and which aims at promoting the interests of novelists and other writers. An interesting statement in the information received from the organization shortly after its formation said: "The club is not in any sense of the word a labour organization. Few of its members earn enough money to consider themselves in the same class financially with trade union members." The names of four press clubs are also included, the objects of which are the advancement of journalism and the promotion of good fellowship among the members. To promote the knowledge, skill and proficiency of news men there is the Chartered Reporters' Association of Ontario.

The Ontario Chauffeurs' Association, which was organized in 1910 as the Toronto Chauffeurs' Protective Association, endeavours to eliminate the dangers of injuries from motor vehicles by developing a higher standard of efficiency of licensed drivers. The Canadian Brotherhood of Chauffeurs and Mechanics, which was formed in 1927, is designed to assist distressed members and endeavour to find them employment.

The Canadian Association of Power Engineers was formerly known as the Canadian Brotherhood of Stationary Engineers and its name was included in the list of trade unions. Certain changes being made in the constitution during 1929, it is considered more appropriate to embody the organization in this group. Among the objects of the association are: (1) To promote engineering knowledge and to improve the status of the power engineer; (2) to give support to any beneficial legislative measure relating to safety in the installation and operation of power plants.

The International Geneva Association (formerly the International Geneva Association of Hotel and Restaurant Employees), which has three Canadian branches, located respectively in Montreal, Ottawa and Toronto, is composed of waiters, captains and head waiters, a class of wage earners over whom the Hotel and Restaurant Employees and Beverage Dispensers' International Alliance claims jurisdiction so far as the North American continent is concerned. The Geneva Association, which has an employment policy, renders voluntary aid to its sick members and members in distress as well as maintaining a home for convalescent, aged and incapacitated members.

The Canadian Association of Fire Marshals seeks the uniformity of legislation pertaining to fire prevention, and the Dominion Association of Fire Chiefs, in addition to seeking methods for fire prevention, meets annually to discuss the best means for fire protection. There are two other bodies for fire chiefs, which, together with three organizations composed of fire fighters, paid and voluntary, have objects along somewhat similar lines.

The Canadian Yardmasters' Association, which was organized early in 1925, and is comprised of yardmasters, assistant yardmasters and relieving yardmasters actively employed on Canadian railroads, seeks to educate the members of the craft that they may be in a position to give better service to the shippers and receivers conducting business with the railroads. In addition to the membership being pledged to work for and maintain, an eight-hour day, it is also declared that "yardmasters shall not at any time feel obligated to make apologies to any other class of employees for any action taken by them, but should at all times maintain an attitude of freedom of thought and action." The association publishes an official monthly journal known as the Canadian Yardmasters' Magazine. Another organization of railroad employees is the Canadian Ticket Agents' Association.

The Officers (Merchant-Navy) Federation of Canada seeks to advance and protect the interests of the Canadian certificated marine officers and to represent them whenever their economic, professional and legislative interests are involved. Another association of seamen is the Merchant Marine Service Association (formerly the Merchant Marine Officers Service Association) and includes in its membership all such grades which do not require a marine certificate. The objects of the association are somewhat similar to that of the Federation. There is also an association of Montreal pilots.

The name of the Chief Constables' Association of Canada is recorded, as are also two local bodies of police, located respectively in Toronto and Hamilton, as well as an international association of chiefs of police, with the latter of which a number of Canadian police chiefs are affiliated.

For improving and elevating the art of magic there is in Toronto a branch of the International Brotherhood of Magicians, and the United Women's Educational Federation of Ontario has as its object the education of women on all social and political subjects affecting their interests.

To promote the social unlift of the Japanese resident in Canada there is the Canadian Japanese Association, the membership of which is confined to British Columbia; also included in this group is the Chinese Nationalist League, whose membership is scattered over the Dominion, and among whose objects is the social well-being of the Chinese residing in Canada.

ASSOCIATIONS OF SCHOOL TEACHERS

With the exception of the trade unions the best organized group of wage-earners is perhaps that composed of school teachers. The teachers have local associations which are in most instances affiliated with the provincial bodies in their respective provinces. For the purpose of co-ordinating the activities of the provincial associations there is a Dominion organization known as the Canadian Teachers' Federation, with which eleven associations, including those of the four western provinces, three Ontario bodies, one Quebec association and the association of the Maritime Provinces are affiliated. The objects of the Canadian Teachers' Federation, which was organized in Calgary in July, 1920, are:—

(a) To obtain co-operation and co-ordination of all provincial teachers' organizations upon policies and activities of common interest.

(b) To provide machinery by which the various provincial organizations could be kept in touch with one another and through which mutual assistance could be quickly and readily given;

(c) The Dominion organization shall in no way interfere with the full liberties of the provincial organizations in dealing with matters concerning their own provinces.

The chief officers of the Canadian Teachers' Federation are: Pres., W. Barker, 230 Highfield St., Moncton, N.B. Sec., M. J. Coldwell, 131 Connaught Cres., Regina, Sask.

ASSOCIATIONS OF GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES

In addition to the organizations of government employees which are mentioned in an earlier chapter, there are many other associations of such workers which are in no way identified with the trade union movement, the names of which are given a place in the present chapter, and include both associations of Dominion and Provincial civil servants. The associations of Dominion Government employees in some instances cover definite branches of the civil service, while it is understood the provincial bodies embrace all classes in one general organization. The objects of the civil service associations are in the main to speak collectively for their respective members on matters affecting conditions of employment. For the employees of the Dominion Government there is a Civil Service Federation, with which several group associations are affiliated, and which is designed to represent all branches of the service, and although itself not connected with organized labour, does not exclude membership to those bodies which are so affiliated. Among the names of associations of Dominion Government employees is included that of the Halcyon Club. This was originally intended as a social organization, but since the passing out of existence of the Women's Branch of the Civil Service Association of Ottawa, the Halycon Club has also become the medium of expression of the women in the Government service at Ottawa in regard to conditions of employment or other matters. The list of associations of Government employees, together with the names and addresses of the chief officers, are as follows: —

VETERANS' CIVIL SERVICE GUILD

An association in which active membership is confined to war veterans in the employ of the Federal or Provincial Governments was established in Montreal on March 29, 1921, under the name of Veterans' Civil Service Guild. Associate membership is permitted to returned men in the employ of municipalities, who have the right to attend meetings of the guild or any council thereof (provision being made for the formation of local councils where seven or more apply for membership), but are not eligible for office, nor have they the right to vote. Upon an associate member becoming an employee of the Federal or Provincial Governments he is permitted to apply for active membership. The application fee is not less than $1 and the dues not less than $4 per annum for active and $2 for associate members. The objects of the Veterans' Guild are in the main similar to other organized bodies of civil servants. Pres., W. J. Gerrard, 73 Pine Ave., St. Lambert, Que. Sec., C. L. Robinson, 10212 St. Hubert St., Montreal, Que.

MUNICIPAL EMPLOYEES' ASSOCIATIONS

The Ottawa Municipal Service Association was formed on March 22, 1925, for the purpose of promoting the common interests of municipal employees, and to improve the efficiency of the civic service. Membership is open to all municipal employees, on either the inside or outside service, who have been regularly employed by the corporation of Ottawa for one year. Pres., F. B. Proctor, 131 Somerset St., Ottawa, Ont., Sec.-Treas., A. D. Stalker, 193 Sunnyside Ave., Ottawa, Ont.

The Hamilton Municipal Service Association, formerly known as the Hamilton City Hall Employees' Association, was organized in May, 1930. Pres., R. J. Menary, 110 Gladstone Ave., Hamilton, Ont. Sec., W. E. Griffin, 45 Barnesdale Ave. N., Hamilton, Ont.

The Toronto City Hall Employees' Association was organized in 1919. Pres., George M. Scott, 58 Kingsmount Park Rd., Toronto, Ont. Sec., H. A. McMullen, 266 Erskine Ave., Toronto, Ont.

The Toronto Municipal Foremen's Association was organized in January, 1918. Pres., T. E. Matthews, 344 Beresford Ave., Toronto, Ont. Sec., W. Sangster, 590 Soudan Ave., Toronto, Ont.

The Toronto Water Supply Association was formed in November, 1919, for the purpose of bringing together all employees of the Water Supply Section for their mutual benefit and welfare. The membership consists of the following classifications: stationary engineers, electricians, filter, electrical and chlorine operators, oilers, firemen and coal passers, etc. Pres., John Hamilton, 813 Mount Pleasant Rd. Sec., G. C. Brown, 264 Garden Ave.

COMMERCIAL TRAVELLERS' ASSOCIATIONS

There are in the Dominion six associations of commercial travellers, with beneficial features, all of which have large memberships. The oldest organization is the Commercial Travellers' Association of Canada, which was established in Toronto in 1871 and incorporated by Act of Parliament on May 26, 1874, and by an amendment thereto granted further privileges in March, 1876. The Dominion Commercial Travellers' Association was formed in 1875 and incorporated in 1880; the Ontario Association was formed on December 23, 1876, and incorporated in Ontario on September 13, 1880; the Maritime Commercial Travellers' Association was formed in 1881 and incorporated by the Nova Scotia Legislature in 1886, the Northwest Association was incorporated in Manitoba on May 23, 1887, incorporation being confirmed by the Dominion Government on June 21, 1906; the Association of Commercial Travellers of Quebec was founded in 1902 and was incorporated September 22, 1922. The names of the associations and their chief officers are as follows:

CATHOLIC COMMERCIAL TRAVELLERS' ASSOCIATION OF CANADA

Besides the above organizations of commercial travellers, there is the Catholic Commercial Travellers' Association of Canada, which was formed in Montreal in 1917 as a result of the amalgamation of the Montreal Catholic Commercial Travellers' Club (organized September 20, 1914) with several clubs of a similar nature in the province of Quebec. The association, membership in which is limited to Roman Catholics who speak the French language, has as its principle "submission to the authority of the church and adherence to directions from the Holy See." Its aim is to organize the scattered forces of the commercial travellers and to direct them towards the religious and social apostolate. Pres., N. R. Beaudet, 4006 Marlowe Ave., Montreal, Que. Sec., Elie Ducharme, 2982 Maplewood Ave., Outremont, Montreal, Que.

CANADIAN RAILWAYS VETERANS' GUILD

The Canadian Railways Veterans' Guild was originally organized during 1925, under the name of the Canadian National Veterans' Guild, membership being open to men who served in the late war and who are employed in any of the branches or departments of the Canadian Railways. Members are required to pay an entrance fee of two dollars, and a monthly contribution of not less than fifty cents, provision being also made for the levying of special assessments when such is necessary. Among the objects of the guild (the headquarters of which are in Montreal) are: (1) Securing recognition of the just claims of veterans; (2) establishing harmonious relations between the Railways and their employees by negotiation in the matter of wage schedules and working conditions; (3) furnishing to members such pecuniary or other aid as the circumstances require. Pres., F. H. Morgan, M.C., 472 Third Ave., Verdun, Que. Sec., P. J. Derrig, 4205 Messier St., Montreal, Que.

Gordon Spanner, Osgoode Hall, Toronto, Ont.

ONTARIO CHAUFFEURS' ASSOCIATION

The Ontario Chauffeurs' Association was organized in 1910 as the Toronto Chauffeurs' Protective Association, securing a provincial charter in 1913, and operating until the outbreak of the Great War in 1914, when owing to so many of its members enlisting, the association was compelled to cease operations. With the close of the war the organization was revived. The association, in addition to affording mutual protection to its members, seeks to eliminate the danger of injuries from motor vehicles by developing as far as possible a higher standard of efficiency of licensed drivers and to co-operate with those in authority in the suppression of reckless driving of automobiles by owners and careless and inexperienced chauffeurs. The benefits to members include the maintenance of an employment bureau and free medical service. Pres., J. W. Shepherd, 1 May St., Toronto, Ont. Sec., H. E. D. Mitchell, 80 Summerhill Ave., Toronto, Ont.

CANADIAN BROTHERHOOD OF CHAUFFEURS AND MECHANICS

The Canadian Brotherhood of Chauffeurs and Mechanics was formed on January 27, 1927, and operates under a provincial charter. Parsons, 181 Torrens Ave., Toronto, Ont.

CANADIAN ASSOCIATION OF POWER ENGINEERS

The Canadian Association of Power Engineers was originally formed in June, 1927, as the Canadian Brotherhood of Stationary Engineers, and as such its name appeared in the list of Canadian central labour bodies as published in previous issues of this report. On August 25, 1927, the organization was registered under the provision of the Trade Unions Act. Certain changes were made in the constitution in 1929 and the name altered to the first mentioned. It is, however, considered appropriate to include the name of the association in this chapter. The objects set forth (1) It is the purpose of this association to promote engineering knowledge and improve the status of the power engineer in the Dominion of Canada; to secure for its members the latest developments and their application in the field of power engineering, and so enable the individual engineer to increase the efficiency of the power plant in which he may be employed; also, to foster a spirit of co-operation between employer and employee to the mutual benefit of all concerned; (2) To give its support to any beneficial legislative measure relating to safety in the installation and operation of power plants in the Dominion of Canada; (3) To investigate any grievance that may arise, whether of our members or their employers, and advise them of the best policy to be adopted in settlement of same, having in mind at all times the welfare of the association at large, so that it will in no way jeopardize the integrity and standing of the association in the business world of Canada; and (4) To adopt a policy in view of the fact, that, whereas the welfare and health of the public at large is dependent on the continuous and safe operation of the power plants entrusted to the care of its membership; therefore, this association will in no way consider affiliation with any labour organization, or take part in any labour disputes or strikes, which may in any way endanger or interfere with the public service rendered by its membership. Pres., J. Park, 640 Warsaw Ave., Winnipeg, Man. Sec., Jas. Cowie, 202 Chamber of Commerce, Winnipeg, Man.

Membership is open to all oil producers in Canada, all Canadians who are associated with the oil industry in foreign fields and all Canadian drillers, although for the present the association will confine its efforts to the oil well drillers. Pres., A. D. Brownlee, Sarnia, Ont. Sec., C. N. Peat, Petrolia, Ont.

INTERNATIONAL GENEVA ASSOCIATION

The International Geneva Association is a beneficial and fraternal organization. Its membership is composed of men engaged in the hotel, restaurant, club and catering industry. In addition to its social and trade features (including an employment policy), the society maintains at Littleton, Colo., the Geneva Home, an institution for convalesent, aged and incapacitated members. The parent body was established at Geneva, Switzerland, on May 21, 1877. There are branches of the association throughout the world, and these maintain affiliated relations with each other and the parent body "for the benefit of members who may be compelled to travel or who choose to live in one of the countries where the various branches of the institution are situated, carrying on a policy of reciprocity with the Geneva Federation in the various branches thereof." The report of 1932 indicates that the association has 22,000 members comprised in 360 branches in various countries. The International head offices are located in Zurich, Switzerland. Prior to the war there were branches in Vancouver, Winnipeg and Montreal, but these lapsed. The Montreal branch was subsequently re-organized, and has 100 members. In 1927 a branch was formed in Ottawa, and in 1928 a branch was established in Toronto. In 1932 these branches reported 56 and 110 members respectively. The president and secretary respectively of the general administrative board are F. G. Walther and K. Englehardt, and these officers may be reached at 143 West 44th street, New York, N.Y. The chief officers of the Canadian branches are: Montreal—Pres., J. Los, St. James Club. Sec., Joseph Filippi, 3609 St. Urbain St.; Ottawa—Pres., John Adam, Chateau Laurier. Sec., W. F. ### FIREMEN'S ASSOCIATIONS

The Firemen's Association of Ontario was organized in Toronto on August 29, 1899, and was incorporated on July 23, 1910. The aims of the association are to improve not only the methods of fire fighting, but also, in more recent years, to direct efforts towards fire prevention. Pres., W. H. Tory, Georgetown, Ont. Sec., W. J. Armstrong, 282 Indian Rd., Crescent, Toronto 9, Ont.

The Temiskaming Firemen's Association, with objects similar to those above mentioned for other firemen's associations, was formed October 25, 1916. Pres., Secord Robinson, Kapuskasing, Ont. Sec., F. E. Thompson, Box 686, New Liskeard, Ont.

The Niagara District Firemen's Association was organized on June 28, 1922, and is composed of the delegates of the volunteer, fully paid, partly paid, exempt and veteran fire companies, departments and associations in the Niagara district. This organization was formed for the purpose of an annual exchange of opinions regarding fire fighting methods and appliances. Pres., R. Eddington, Welland, Ont. Sec., Claude E. Richardson, Merritton, Ont.

CANADIAN YARDMASTERS' ASSOCIATION

The Canadian Yardmasters' Association was formed early in 1925, and is composed of yardmasters, assistant yardmasters and relieving yardmasters actively employed on Canadian railroads. There are ten branches within the association, and the membership is approximately 680, the grand division headquarters being in Toronto, Ont. According to the preamble to the constitution, each individual member is pledged "to work for and maintain an eight-hour day," and "no less wages than have prevailed for yardmasters on Canadian railroads during the year 1924." It is impressed upon members that they "must at all times encourage and maintain wholesome relations with the management, and keep their superior officials advised of irregularities that will affect the safe and efficient terminal operation." In addition, it is stated that "yardmasters shall not at any time feel obligated to make apologies to any other class of employees for any action taken by them, but should at all times maintain an attitude of freedom of thought and action." Pres., Robert Muirhead, 615 Yonge St., Toronto, Ont. Sec., Frank Wray, 615 Yonge St., Toronto, Ont.

CANADIAN TICKET AGENTS' ASSOCIATION

CANADIAN WORKERS' FEDERATION OF RETURNED SOLDIERS AND SAILORS

The Canadian Workers' Federation of Returned Soldiers and Sailors was formed in Montreal in 1919, during a strike in a local shipyard. The returned men, believing they were being discriminated against by the labour unions, organized the federation to protect their interests. The objects of the federation are as follows:—

(a) To assist all who are members to obtain employment.

(b) To obtain for those who are members such wages and working conditions as are essential to human well-being in accordance with present day standards.

(c) To secure promotion and advancement for members, who, by their ability, diligence and strict attention to duty, are entitled to favourable consideration.

(d) To aid members who are returned soldiers or sailors to acquire a knowledge of trades and occupations for which members and returned soldiers are adapted, and provide and create opportunities for members who engage in industry.

(e) To prevent and repudiate any discrimination open or covert against members of the Federation or any returned soldiers or sailors who may apply for a position as an apprentice, helper or assistant in any trade, occupation or calling.

(f) To suggest, recommend, promote and demand, such legislation as is likely to be an advantage to members of the Federation and returned soldiers or sailors, in so far as it may tend to promote the welfare of members and returned soldiers and sailors generally.

(g) To give members any pecuniary assistance as the circumstances of the member in person requiring same may demand.

(h) To do any and all things that will in any way contribute to the betterment and improvement of the social and economic position of the members and of persons and institutions that are deserving of such aid and support as the Federation can give.

Proviso. Each and every one of the hereinbefore mentioned objects shall be broadly interpreted.

The Canadian Workers' Federation of Returned Soldiers and Sailors may affiliate with any organization having similar or kindred objects, but only in so far as such affiliation will better permit the Federation to carry out its objects. Pres., A. Mullett, 2047 Theodore St., Montreal, Que. Sec., W. Smith, 2410 Bourbonniere Ave., Montreal, Que.

CANADIAN JAPANESE ASSOCIATION

CHINESE NATIONALIST LEAGUE

An organization composed of Chinese, which has its headquarters in Vancouver, is known as the Chinese Nationalist League. The league, which has been in existence for some years, has the following aims and objects:—

(a) To provide means for and assist in benevolent and charitable objects for education and social reform, and to develop, secure, maintain, encourage and extend a central control and organization to assist, utilize and co-ordinate the various public or private agencies, institutions and associations now carrying on similar work or operations, or which may hereafter be established, which shall be deemed advantageous in carrying on operations throughout Canada for the welfare of the society;

(b) To promote the higher education, profitable employment and social well-being of the Chinese resident in Canada, and other races, in every possible way;

(c) To purchase, take, have, hold, possess, retain and enjoy any property, real or personal, corporeal or incorporeal whatsoever, and for any or every estate or interest therein whatsoever, given, granted, devised or bequeathed to it or appropriated, purchased or acquired by it in any manner or way whatsoever to, for or in favour of the uses and purposes of this corporation;

(d) From time to time acquire, accept and receive by purchase, lease, contract, donation, legacy, transfer in trust or otherwise, any kind of real or personal property, and to use, apply and devote in whole or part the same or the income thereof for such public or private religious, charitable, educational, patriotic or other objects as may be deemed best, or as may be required by the terms, conditions, trusts and objects of any such purchase, lease, contract, donation, legacy, transfer or otherwise, and to carry out, perform and comply with such terms, conditions, trusts and objects;

(e) To take or otherwise acquire and hold membership in any association or company having objects altogether or in part similar to those of this corporation or carrying on any business which may seem capable of being conducted so as directly or indirectly to benefit this corporation;

(f) To draw, make, accept, indorse, execute and issue promissory notes, bills of exchange, bills of lading, warrants and other negotiable or transferable instruments;

(g) To sell, exchange, lease, dispose of, turn to account or otherwise deal with or contract with reference to all or any part of the property and rights of this corporation;

(h) To do all other acts and things as are incidental or conducive to the attainment of the above objects, and generally in any way to do all such things as shall be calculated directly or indirectly to promote the best interests of the Chinese and other races throughout the Dominion of Canada;

(i) To advocate and secure possible remedies and assist in the enactment of ordinances and laws required to carry out the foregoing by means of bulletins, education or any other method of propaganda that may from time to time be considered advisable.

On two occasions application for incorporation of the league has been made, but both were refused. The latest application was made in August, 1921.

Pres., Y. S. Chan, 529 Gore Ave., Vancouver, B.C. Sec., How Min Yet, 529 Gore Ave., Vancouver, B.C.

AFFILIATIONS AND MEMBERSHIP

There are 120 organizations included in the group embracing "Non-Trade Union Associations" divided by classes as follows: School teachers, 15; government employees, 55, municipal employees, 6; commercial travellers, 9; all others, 35. In the list of school teachers appears the name of the Canadian Federation of Teachers, a Dominion-wide body with which the eleven associations marked with double asterisks in the accompanying table are affiliated, and whose combined membership of 23,362 makes up the membership of the federation. The three remaining unaffiliated associations have a combined membership of 3,031, making an aggregate of organized school teachers of 26,393.

Of the 55 associations of Government employees 51 comprise civil servants in the employ of the Dominion Government, one is made up of persons who may be employees of Dominion, provincial or municipal authorities, and the remaining three are composed of provincial civil servants. The 38 associations designated by an asterisk are in affiliation with the Civil Service Federation of Canada, whose numerical strength of 10,330 is the combined membership of the affiliated bodies whose names appear in this chapter; six of the unaffiliated associations reported a combined membership of 7,094, making a total of reported organized Dominion Government employees of 17,424; the three bodies of provincial civil servants reported a combined membership of 4,147, making an aggregate of 21,571 organized Government employees not connected with the trade union movement. The Civil Service Federation also has in affiliation the Federated Association of Letter Carriers (referred to in an earlier chapter), and the United Postal Employees of Canada, the membership of the first named organization and the Ottawa branch of the latter being included in the numerical strength of the federation.

The membership reported by five of the six associations of muncipal employees was 1,187 and that of the nine commercial travelers' associations 34,632, the latter, as usual, constituting the most numerous group in the non-trade union list. The combined membership of the 35 other associations is 15,271. The aggregate of membership of all classes of organizations as given in the appended table is 99,054, a decrease of 6,098 as compared with the figures of 1931. The statement following gives the reported membership of each association, together with the number of affiliations, where the organization has subordinate branches in affiliation.

To the Hon. W. A. Gordon, K.C., M.P.,
Minister of Labour.

Sir,—I have the honour to submit the Twenty-third Annual Report on Labour Organization in Canada, being for the calendar year 1933. The volume was prepared in the Labour Intelligence Branch of the Department, and, like previous reports on the same subject, contains much information concerning the labour bodies with which the Canadian organized workers are identified, as well as giving statistics of organized labour in the Dominion.

I have the honour to be, sir,

Your obedient servant,

W. M. DICKSON,

Deputy Minister of Labour.

INTRODUCTION

Classification of Labour Organizations in Canada—Memberships—Main Organizations and their Affiliates—Union Membership by Industrial and Trade Groups—Unions having Large Memberships—Character and Development of Trade Unions—Trade Unions Act —Labour in Politics—Labour Members of Parliament and Provincial Legislatures—Canadian Labour Defence League—Workers' Educational Association of Ontario.

The information presented in this, the Twenty-third Annual Report on Labour Organization in Canada, depicts as accurately as possible the standing of the various labour bodies at the close of the calendar year 1933. The present volume follows closely along the lines of its predecessor, and contains statistical and other information concerning labour unions, federations, district councils, trades and labour councils and such other bodies in Canada for which information has been received in the Department. In addition to this there are chapters dealing with organizations other than trade unions, labour press, trade union conventions, new and dissolved unions, trade union benefits and organizations of workers throughout the world. Brief reference is also made to labour in politics; labour members of parliament and provincial legislatures; the Workers Educational Association of Ontario, etc.

The Labour Gazette, a monthly publication issued by the Department, contains information concerning conventions of the various labour organizations and other union activities.

As has been mentioned in previous reports in this series, labour organization in Canada falls into two classes: (1) local branches of international unions having headquarters in the United States but having membership in both countries. The Canadian branches of nearly all of these unions are affiliated with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada (referred to in a subsequent chapter), which, however, has also in affiliation a number of purely Canadian central organizations as well as local unions directly chartered; (2) unions whose members are wholly in Canada. This class is grouped according to affiliation under: the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada; the All-Canadian Congress of Labour; the National Catholic Unions affiliated with the Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada; other Canadian Central Organizations, and various independent central bodies and local units.

Craft unions, which include workmen in a single craft or a number of closely related crafts or trades, such as bricklayers and stonemasons, and industrial unions, which have members in various occupations in a particular industry, for instance in coal mining, are the two principal types of organization in Canada. Some of the first mentioned class include several crafts with helpers and labourers so that they are quasi-industrial unions. There is still another type of organization which organizes workers in all industries under one general union, centrally controlled, usually with sub-divisions by industries and localities. In a subsequent section the development of the various types of organization in Canada is briefly outlined.

UNION MEMBERSHIP IN 1933

The trade union membership in Canada, the peak of which was reached in 1919, when there were 378,047 organized workers in the Dominion, has during the last three-year period shown a decline, the total loss during that period being 24,324, notwithstanding the slight gain in 1933.

The industrial depression which prevailed not only in Canada but throughout the whole world is responsible to a great extent for this decline. With the consequent scarcity of employment, great numbers of members of unions were unable to make payment of the monthly dues, and in the course of time were suspended and their names finally dropped from the records. While a few of the organizations exempt from the payment of dues for a certain period those members who are out of work, it is however, contingent upon the regular payment of the prescribed fees that their membership is maintained. The unemployment situation, is gradually improving and as a result the total trade union membership in Canada for 1933 shows a gain of 2,644 but a loss in branches of 18.

According to information furnished by officers of central organizations, and that secured from departmental records, the international craft union group, which consists of the Canadian members of 78 organizations, the same as in 1932, had 1,753 branches in the Dominion, a decrease of 60, with a combined membership of 140,801. The One Big Union reported 46 local units in Canada, a loss of 1, with 23,300 members, a loss of 40. The Industrial Workers of the World reported 8 branches, same as reported in 1932, with a membership of 3,618, no change. The group of Canadian central organizations, which numbers 34, an increase of 5, had 748 branches, a gain of 47, with a combined membership of 76,062, an increase of 9,069. The National Catholic group consists of 110 unions, a gain of 1, with a reported membership of 26,894, a gain of 1,894. There were 42 independent units, 5 less than the number recorded for 1932, with a combined membership of 15,545, a gain of 49. A computation of these figures indicates that there were in Canada at the close of 1933 a total of 2,707 trade union branches, a loss of 18, with a combined reported membership of 286,220, an increase, as previously stated, of 2,644. According to the official estimated census figures as of June 1, 1933, trade unionists represent 2·7 per cent of the population; adding 90,819, the number of members comprised in the non-trade union associations, the organized wage-earners in the Dominion at the close of 1933, represented 3·5 per cent of the population.

The number of branches and the reported and estimated membership of the various classes of labour organizations operating in Canada at the close of 1933, with the number of members of each group affiliated, are indicated in the following table:—

(a) Has one local union in San Francisco, California, U.S.A., with 340 members.

(b) In an affidavit of the general secretary of the One Big Union presented before the Manitoba Court of Appeal (Samuel Sykes and Thomas E. Moore vs. the One Big Union et al) the membership of the organization was given as approximately 7,000 (Western Weekly Reports, 1934, Volume I, page 655.)

(c) Affiliated directly with the American Federation of Labor but not with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada.

The first report of the Department of Labour on Labour Organization in Canada was for the year 1911. The table following shows, for each year, the number of trade union branches in Canada, together with their combined memberships:—

| — | Branches | Membership | — | Branches | Membership |
| 1911 | 1,741 | 133,132 | 1923 | 2,487 | 278,092 |
| 1912 | 1,883 | 160,120 | 1924 | 2,429 | 260,643 |
| 1913 | 2,017 | 175,799 | 1925 | 2,494 | 271,064 |
| 1915 | 1,883 | 143,343 | 1927 | 2,604 | 290,282 |
| 1916 | 1,842 | 160,407 | 1928 | 2,653 | 300,602 |
| 1918 | 2,274 | 248,887 | 1930 | 2,809 | 322,449 |
| 1919 | 2,847 | 378,047 | 1931 | 2,772 | 310,544 |
| 1920 | 2,918 | 373,842 | 1932 | 2,725 | 283,576 |

The chart appearing on page 10 based on the above membership figures, indicates at a glance the fluctuations which have occurred in the standing of organized labour in the Dominion for the past twenty-three years, the period covered by these annual reports.

The figures for the membership of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada are 12,458 greater than that claimed by that organization, the explanation being that the respective affiliated bodies in reporting to the Department included all members who were in good standing, while the Congress only reports the number of members for whom per capita tax had been received. Besides the affiliated membership of central organizations the Trades and Labour Congress had 49 directly chartered local unions with a combined membership of 5,328, which figure is included in the total membership of 118,004.

The figures for the All-Canadian Congress of Labour indicate an affiliated membership of central bodies of 51,998, which with the membership of 3,120 comprised in the 39 directly chartered local unions gives a total of 55,118 members.

UNION MEMBERSHIP BY INDUSTRIAL AND TRADE GROUPS

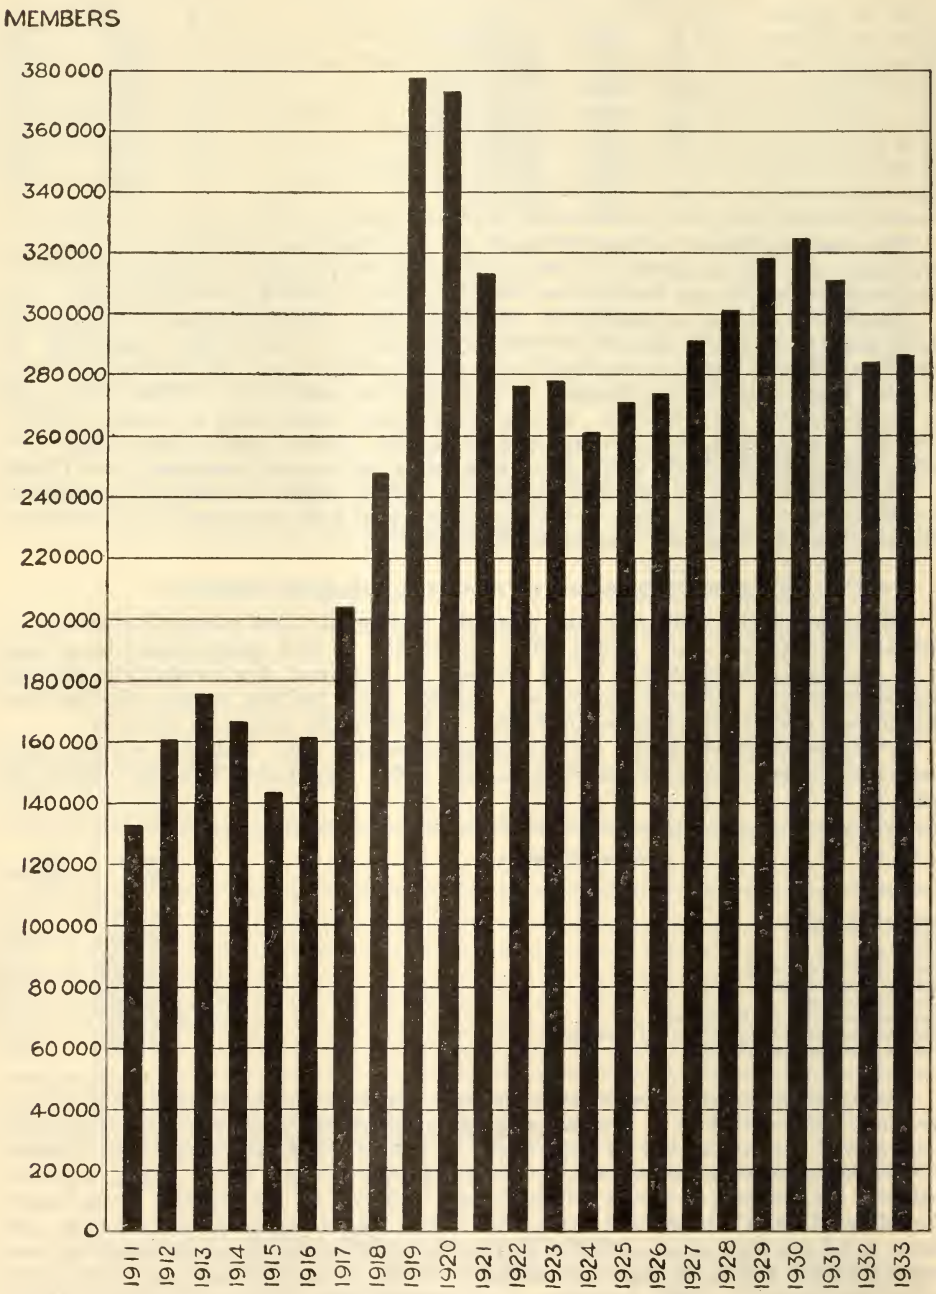

The accompanying table and chart show the division of union membership among the various industries and trade groups. The membership of each central body is included in the trade group in which most of its members are employed. For instance the membership of the various carpenters' unions are classified under building trades. The membership of each central body is given in Table 1 and 1A, in the section on statistics.

It will be observed in the accompanying table and chart that the railroad group contains the largest number of members, namely, 74,651, representing 26·08 per cent of the total.

| Mining and Quarrying | 23,772 | 8·30 |
| Building | 25,410 | 8·88 |
| Metal | 11,772 | 4·11 |
| Printing and Paper Making | 13,531 | 4·73 |
| Clothing, Boot and Shoes | 17,332 | 6·06 |
| Railroad Employees | 74,651 | 26·08 |
| Other Transportation and Navigation | 18,170 | 6·35 |
| Public Employees, Personal Service and Amusement | 26,380 | 9·22 |
| All other trades and general labour | 75,202 | 26·27 |

Mining and Quarrying.—Organizations in these industries are chiefly among coal miners. The United Mine Workers of America, which has considerable membership in Alberta and Nova Scotia, Districts 18 and 26 respectively, as well as the Amalgamated Mine Workers of Nova Scotia, organized during 1932, include all classes of workers in coal mines, mechanics, engineers, etc., as well as miners. These unions, however, do not organize metal miners. The Mine Workers' Union of Canada with nearly all of its membership among coal miners in Alberta has a small number of its members in other mining, having organized some copper miners as well as coal miners in British Columbia during 1932 and some metal miners in Northern Ontario in 1933. A number of independent local coal miners' unions in Alberta and British Columbia in the Crow's Nest Pass District as well as in Saskatchewan had a total membership of over 4,400.

TWENTY-THREE YEARS OF TRADE UNIONISM IN CANADA

Building Trades.—This group includes the various unions whose members are engaged chiefly in building and construction with some exceptions, such as carpenters in wood working establishments and electrical workers on electric railways, in railway shops and in electric light and power plants. In the larger cities these have Building Trades Councils. The carpenters, bricklayers and masons, electrical workers and plumbers together make up over 84 per cent of the total membership.

Metal Trades.—The members of the unions in this group work chiefly in metal working establishments and in railway shops but elevator constructors and bridge, structural and ornamental iron workers are included. The machinists' union had over half the membership in the group, the blacksmiths, boilermakers and moulders each having over 1,200 members.

Printing and Paper Making Trades.—This group includes workmen in printing and publishing and in pulp and paper mills. The carpenters, electricians, etc., as well as the engineers and firemen in the pulp and paper mills belong, however, to the building, metal trades and engineering unions. The printing pressmen, the paper makers and the pulp, sulphite and paper mill workers had over half the total membership but the typographical union had a membership of over 4,000.

Clothing, Boot and Shoe Trades.—The Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, an international union of employees in men's and boys' ready-made clothing factories, was the largest in this industry but the International Ladies' Garment Workers, composed of employees in cloak, suit and dressmaking establishments, and the Industrial Union of Needle Trades Workers had considerable memberships. This last organization affiliated with the Workers' Unity League, organizes workers in fur shops as well as in clothing factories. The membership of all of these unions is chiefly in Montreal, Toronto and Winnipeg. The Boot and Shoe Workers' Union had a membership of over 1,800, while the International Fur Workers' Union and the United Garment Workers, the latter with members in overall and work clothing factories, had over 700 members each.

Railroad Employees.—This group of organizations of steam railway employees includes four of the independent international unions, namely, the Locomotive Engineers, the Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, the Railway Conductors and Railroad Trainmen, the membership of each ranging from about four thousand to over twelve thousand. A number of the other unions with considerable membership are affiliated with the American Federation of Labor and the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada. The Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employees consist of section men and the mechanics in the bridge and building departments and had the largest union membership in Canada, being over 13,000. The Railway Carmen which includes car repairers and car building trades such as carpenters, upholsterers, etc., has a membership of nearly ten thousand. This organization, along with certain locals of the machinists, boilermakers, blacksmiths, moulders, sheet metal workers, and electrical workers' unions which have members chiefly in railway shops, constitutes Division No. 4 of the Railway Employees' Department of the American Federation of Labor and represents these classes of employees in negotiations with the railway companies. The Railroad Telegraphers and the Railway and Steamship Clerks also have considerable memberships. The latter includes clerks, freight handlers and station employees not only on steam railways but employed by steamship companies; most of its members, however, are employed on the Canadian Pacific Railway.

Among the wholly Canadian unions the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees is outstanding, having in fact the second largest membership of any union in Canada. While membership is open to nearly all classes of railway employees, its organization is chiefly among clerks, freight handlers, station employees, shop labourers, dining and sleeping car employees on the Canadian National Railways and among employees of the Canadian National Express Company. It has also some members in car shops and among steamship clerks and freight handlers. This union as well as the Canadian Association of Railway Enginemen is affiliated with the All-Canadian Congress of Labour.

Other Transportation and Navigation Trades.—The Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employees, having a large membership in Canada, includes motormen and conductors and miscellaneous classes of electric railway employees as well as bus drivers. Electrical workers, machinists, etc., usually belong to the unions of their respective crafts but in some few instances by arrangement with these unions are in the street railway organization. The One Big Union has a considerable membership among the employees of the Winnipeg Street Railway and its suburban lines. For longshoremen there are several unions. The International Longshoremen's Association has in its organization the employees of this class in Halifax and Saint John but in Montreal as well as in Vancouver, Victoria, etc., they belong to independent unions. The National Association of Marine Engineers, affiliated with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, has members throughout Canada. A seamen's union has members on the Pacific coast. Two masters' and mates' associations, but not classed as labour organizations, are referred to in the last chapter. The National Catholic Unions and a number of ship labourers' unions, independent, in Quebec, have several hundred members in these industries.

Public Employment, Personal Service and Amusement.—Those organizations of federal government employees which are classed as unions, include postal clerks, letter carriers, railway mail clerks and the Amalgamated Civil Servants of Canada, membership in which is open to all classes of federal government employees. The total membership of these is approximately 8,000. The only union of provincial government employees is the Civil Service Association of Alberta with a membership of 850. Among civic employees the local unions chartered by the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada have a total membership of over 5,000. The International Association of Fire Fighters has a membership of nearly 2,500. There are also a number of unions chartered by the All-Canadian Congress of Labour and a number of independent unions. In personal service, the barbers' union and the hotel and restaurant employees each have over 400 members. The musicians' union and the stage employees' organization, which includes moving picture operators, have several thousand members.

All Other Trades and General Labour.—The largest organizations in this group are the Lumber Workers' Industrial Union with 7,500 members, mostly in British Columbia and the northern part of Ontario, and the Industrial Workers of the World with 3,618, most of these also lumbermen in the same districts. The Commercial Telegraphers and the Firemen and Oilers organizations have over 1,500 and over 400 respectively, while the International Operating Engineers' Union has over 600, and the Brewery Workers' Union, including various classes of such employees, has 675. Four unions of fishermen on the Pacific coast have each about five hundred members. An item of interest is the existence of the only remaining Canadian unit of the Knights of Labour, namely the Papineau Assembly in Quebec with a membership of 175. The membership of the National Catholic Unions in this group, including employees in various classes of employment, chiefly in factories, is 23,817.

UNIONS HAVING LARGE MEMBERSHIPS IN CANADA

Of the 78 international craft unions with branches or members in Canada, there are 9 with 5,000 or more members, 4 of which are composed of employees who are identified with railway operation. In the Canadian group are 4 bodies with over 5,000 members, one of which is also a railway organization. The names of the 13 organizations appear in the following statement, being arranged according to numerical strength, and among them they represent a total Canadian trade union membership of 113,339, comprised in 884 local branches; approximately 40 per cent of the total membership and about 33 per cent of the total trade union branches.

| Brotherhood of Maintenance-of-Way Employees | 197 | 13,867 |
| Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees | 171 | 13,392 |
| Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen | 90 | 12,898 |
| United Mine Workers of America | 42 | 10,950 |
| Brotherhood of Railway Carmen of America | 114 | 9,691 |
| Amalgamated Building Workers of Canada | 31 | 8,383 |
| Lumber Workers' Industrial Union | 33 | 7,500 |
| Order of Railroad Telegraphers | 13 | 6,959 |
| Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America | 15 | 6,500 |
| Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway, Bus and Coach Employees of America | 24 | 6,000 |
| International Association of Machinists | 75 | 5,920 |
| United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners | 60 | 5,916 |

UNEMPLOYED WORKERS' ORGANIZATIONS

From information received in the Department, it would appear that there are in existence throughout the Dominion various organizations of unemployed workers. A number of such organizations have formed a national organization of which H. Sula is secretary-treasurer. The headquarters is located at 274 College St., Toronto, Ontario. No information as to the number of locals or membership for 1933 has been furnished for inclusion in this report.

CHARACTER AND DEVELOPMENT OF TRADE UNIONS

The formation of the first trade associations in Canada were independent in character and occurred about the middle of the nineteenth century. These bodies usually consisted of workmen of a single craft in one locality but in a short time more associations were formed and as a result a movement developed for wider organization of workingmen. Some of the central bodies which resulted, like some of those already in existence in Great Britain and the United States, were general in character, including workmen of all occupations in a particular industry. There were others called industrial unions, each including all classes of labour in a particular industry. Many unions, however, were formed of workmen in a single craft, or a number of related crafts, having one or more local branches in each locality organized, and by the end of the century this type predominated.

The Knights of Labour, an organization of the general type with local and trade assemblies, formed in the United States in 1869, operating also in Canada, had reached its greatest numerical strength in 1885 with a total membership of about one million, but declined thereafter and early in the twentieth century had a relatively small membership. An instance of the formation of a general union for a smaller area is the Provincial Workmen's Association formed among coal miners in Nova Scotia in 1879 which attempted to organize all classes of workmen in the province but was not successful, becoming a purely coal miners' union. In the meantime, most of the craft organizations (chiefly international, that is having local branches in Canada as well as in the United States) had become united through afiliation with the American Federation of Labor, formed in 1881 to promote the common interests of the unions in legislation, etc., and to charter local trades and labour councils, state federations, etc., for similar purposes. As stated elsewhere in this report, the Federation has in affiliation a number of unions, each of which comprises all the classes of labour in a single industry, for instance the coal miners' union, the United Mine Workers of America. The Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, originating in 1873, similarly functions in promoting the common interests of the various organizations in Canada represented in it, chartering also local trades and labour councils and provincial organizations.

The Canadian Federation of Labour was formed under the name National Trades and Labour Congress in 1902 when the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada decided in future to deny representation to the local assemblies of the Knights of Labour and other unions conflicting in jurisdiction with the international unions. The unions connected with the Federation, with certain others later organized, merged in the All-Canadian Congress of Labour in 1927.

The Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada, formed in 1921, following conferences of National Catholic Unions in 1918 and succeeding years, included a number of national unions expelled from the Trades and Labour Congress in 1902 and similar unions organized later.

Separate chapters in this report are devoted to the above mentioned organization and to several separate organizations formed in later years, the Industrial Workers of the World, the One Big Union, the Amalgamated Mine Workers of Nova Scotia and the self-designated "revolutionary" unions affiliated with the Workers' Unity League.

TRADE UNIONS ACT, 1872

Until 1872 the organization and activities of trade unions encountered difficulties as being in restraint of trade under English law still in force in some of the Canadian provinces. In that year the Trade Unions Act was passed by the Parliament of Canada as a result of a strike of printers in Toronto and other cities to secure a nine-hour working day, a number of union members having been arrested on a charge of conspiracy in restraint of trade. The statute declared the purposes of a trade union not to be unlawful so as to render any person liable to prosecution merely on the ground that they were in restraint of trade. The Act also permitted the registration of unions in the office of the Secretary of State, such unions thereby securing legal status in certain respects. The Criminal Law Amendment Act enacted during the same session contained provisions as to picketing, intimidation, etc. The present law on these subjects is found in the Criminal Code, Sections 496-502, Chapter 36. The provision in the Trade Unions Act as to criminal conspiracy is also now included in the Criminal Code. The provinces of Quebec, Manitoba and British Columbia also have legislation regarding trade unions. Elsewhere in this report there is a list of unions registered under the Trade Unions Act, Chapter 202, R.S. 1927.

LABOUR IN POLITICS

For almost fifty years delegates to the annual conventions of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada have urged that the Congress take an active part in politics. As early as 1887 a resolution was adopted by the Congress which declared "that in the opinion of this Congress the working classes of Canada will never be properly represented in Parliament or receive justice in the legislation of the country, until they are represented by men of their own class, and members of this Congress pledge themselves to use their utmost endeavours, wherever practicable, to bring out candidates for local and Dominion elections in the constituencies in which they reside." With a view to meeting, to some extent, the agitation for political action, the Congress, at its convention in 1900, approved of independent political action on the part of its members, and six years later, provincial autonomy in the establishment of labour political parties was granted. No further action along these lines was taken until 1917, when the Congress adopted a suggestion that organized workers in Canada should follow the British plan and organize a labour party on a basis which would permit of united action on the part of trade unionists, socialists, fabians, co-operators and farmers. As a result, the Canadian Labour Party was formed in 1921. In the next few years some success was attained in co-ordinating the various political parties but when the secretary of the Party resigned in 1927, the main organization ceased to function. The Quebec and Alberta sections of the Party, however, continued and are active at the present time.

In addition to these two sections of the Canadian Labour Party, independent labour parties are functioning in Nova Scotia, Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and British Columbia.

According to an announcement appearing in the Canadian Unionist official organ of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour in its issue for October, 1931, a National Labour Party was formed. In a manifesto the aim of the party was declared to be "to organize the workers politically for the purpose of establishing, by constitutional means, an equitable economic and social order."

In the report for 1932 mention was made of the establishment of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, at the inauguration meeting of which delegates were present who were said to represent labour, farmer and socialist groups in five provinces—Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia. The representatives of the Federation have been active throughout the Dominion during the year and in the provincial election held in British Columbia were successful in electing a number of candidates to the legislature.

LABOUR MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT AND PROVINCIAL LEGISLATURES

Provincial Legislatures: Alberta—Fred. J. White (Party Leader), Calgary; C. L. Gibbs, Edmonton; Chris. Pattison, Edson; Andrew Smeaton, Lethbridge. British Columbia—Thomas A. Uphill, Fernie. Manitoba—S. J. Farmer, Winnipeg; W. Ivens, Winnipeg; J. Queen, Winnipeg; Marcus Hyman, Winnipeg; F. H. Lawrence, St. Boniface. Ontario—E. H. Hutchison, Kenora.

Besides the activities of the political parties mentioned previously there are other organizations, also, which nominate labour candidates for municipal councils, school boards, etc., the candidature of such labour representatives being in many instances endorsed by trades and labour councils and similar non-political labour bodies.

In a subsequent chapter of this report reference is made to the Communist Party of Canada, the political organization of the Communist movement. Following court decisions declaring the Communist Party of Canada an unlawful organization in 1931, under section 98 of the Criminal Code, candidates advocating similar radical social and political policies, have been nominated under the name of "United Front."

CANADIAN LABOUR DEFENSE LEAGUE

The Canadian Labour Defense League was formed in 1925. Among the objects of the organization, as stated, are the following: (1) to provide legal defense for all workers arrested and prosecuted for any form of working class activity; (2) to provide support for the families of prisoners; (3) to stand for freedom of speech, assembly and organization for the working class. The League has been active in the promotion of an agitation for the repeal of Section 98 of the Criminal Code, and representatives of the organization have interviewed the Prime Minister and members of his cabinet in this connection. The general secretary is A. E. Smith, Room 102, 331 Bay St., Toronto 2, Ont.

THE WORKERS' EDUCATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF ONTARIO

This Association is composed of workingmen and others who have established an organization to provide for higher non-technical education such as that available to students at universities. Financial support is obtained from labour organizations and universities and the officers of the Association are elected from these bodies. Branches have been established in various cities in the province.

The movement originated in the Workers' Educational Association of Great Britain, established in 1903, and has since spread to various countries throughout the world.

The first branch of this organization to be formed in Canada was at Toronto, in 1918. Classes are formed and lectures are given in the centres where branches are established on social and economic problems, literature, etc. Similar associations have been formed in other provinces.

The Labour Educational Association of Ontario is referred to in Chapter IX, Federations of Trade Unions.

I. INTERNATIONAL LABOUR ORGANIZATIONS IN CANADA

American Federation of Labor—Exponent of Organization on Trade Lines—Pays Per Capita Tax to Trades and Labour Congress of Canada—Objects and Principles—Source of Revenue—Departments of the Federation—International Craft Organizations—Number Operating in Canada—Those in Affiliation with Trades and Labour Congress of Canada.

The majority of organized workers in Canada being connected with international organizations, nearly all of which are affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, it is considered right that reference be made in this report to the body with which they are identified. The American Federation of Labor in addition to issuing charters of affiliation to central organizing bodies, grants certificates of membership to certain classes of wage-earners over whom no existing organization claims jurisdiction. When the membership of such bodies has increased sufficiently to warrant such action, a central organization may be established, the members of the body concerned being directly transferred, and the new main organization thus formed becoming an affiliate of the Federation. To assist in the formation of new unions, either as branches of affiliated central organizations, or as units under its own control, the Federation maintains a staff of organizers. The plan of organization of the Federation which is a voluntary grouping of self-governing organizations, all having complete autonomy over the craftsmen covered by their respective charters, is founded on a scale which its affiliates consider to be adequate to meet the present requirements of the organized workers. While the American Federation of Labor is an exponent of organization on trade lines, it does not oppose the amalgamation of those unions composed of closely allied crafts, such action being given approval when the organizations concerned voluntarily desire to amalgamate. At certain conventions of the Federation, resolutions have been introduced seeking support for a system of industrial unionism, whereby the workers in a particular industry would be grouped in one organization, but such proposals have always met with defeat. Provision is made in the constitution of the Federation for the establishment of departments, through which organizations of kindred trades are brought together to deal with matters pertaining to their respective industries, charters being issued also to state federations and local trades and labour councils. The American Federation of Labor has always been most active in promoting legislation intended for the improvement of working conditions of that part of its affiliated membership located in the United States, constituting the great majority of the organized workers, and has on many occasions rendered both moral and financial assistance to affiliated organizations in their efforts to secure improvement in trade conditions. The Federation and its various departments endeavour to adjust differences which arise between the affiliated organizations on the question of trade jurisdiction, and in the majority of cases their authority in such matters is recognized.

The American Federation of Labor exchanges fraternal delegates with the British Trades Union Congress and the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada (which is referred to in Chapter II) and acknowledges the last-named as head of the international trade unionism in Canada so far as legislative matters are concerned, paying a per capita tax to the Congress on the members of its directly chartered federal and trades unions (those bodies over which no international craft organization claims jurisdiction) located in the Dominion. The authority of the American Federation of Labor to deal with trade matters as they affect international organizations on the North American continent is fully conceded by the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, which body usually accepts the decisions rendered by the Federation. That such judgments be respected, has been assisted materially by the Congress refusing to accept per capita tax or to seat at annual conventions delegates from organizations which had refused to obey the instructions of the Federation.The Congress has on occasions, however, permitted the affiliation of Canadian membership of international organizations, notwithstanding that they had been suspended by the American Federation of Labor.

The majority of the international labour organizations, including the railroad brotherhoods whose members are engaged in engine and train service, have local branch unions in Canada. Most of the central organizations are what are known as craft unions, although some of them, such as miners and street railway employees, are industrial in character, embracing in their memberships nearly if not all of the workmen employed in the respective industries. The stronger of the international organizations maintain in Canada resident vice-presidents or other officials for the purposes of looking after the interest of the Canadian membership and of reporting to their respective headquarters on trade conditions and the operations of their local branch unions in the Dominion. These officials keep in close touch with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, which body renders assistance when required in promoting the cause of the various international labour bodies operating in Canada. Some of the international organizations have in Canada dues collecting agencies, the moneys so collected being deposited in a bank in the locality where the agency is operating and by whom disbursements are made to the Canadian membership.

AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR

On November 15, 1881, the American Federation of Labor was founded in Pittsburg, Pa., its original name being the Organized Trades and Labour Unions of the United States and Canada. The present name was chosen at the annual conference held in Columbus, Ohio, in 1886. As its name implies, the organization is a federated body, and includes in its membership most of the important international unions. In addition to granting charters to national and international organizations and trade departments, charters are also issued to state federations, city central councils, and such local trade and federal unions as do not fall within the jurisdiction of any existing international bodies.

The aims and objects of the American Federation of Labor as set forth in the constitution, are as follows:

1. The object of this federation shall be the encouragement and formation of local trade and labour unions, and closer federation of such societies through the organization of central trade and labour unions in every city, and the further combinations of such bodies into state, territorial or provincial organizations to secure legislation in the interest of the working masses.
2. The establishment of national and international trade unions, based upon a strict recognition of the autonomy of each trade, and the promotion and advancement of such bodies.
3. The establishment of departments composed of national or international unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, of the same industry, and which departments shall be governed in conformity with the laws of the American Federation of Labor.
4. An American federation of all national and international trade unions to aid and assist each other; to aid and encourage the sale of union-label goods, and to secure legislation in the interest of the working people, and influence public opinion by peaceful and legal methods in favour of organized labour.
5. To aid and encourage the labour press of America.

PRINCIPLES OF THE FEDERATION

1. The abolition of all forms of involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime.
2. Free schools, free text books and compulsory education.
3. Unrelenting protest against the issuance and abuse of injunction process in labour disputes.
4. A work day of not more than eight hours in the twenty-four hour day.
5. A strict recognition of not over eight hours per day on all federal, state or municipal work, and not less than the prevailing per diem wage rate of the class of employment in the vicinity where the work is performed.
6. Release from employment one day in seven.
7. The abolition of the contract system of public work.
8. The municipal ownership of public utilities.
9. The abolition of the sweat-shop system.
10. Sanitary inspection of factory, workshop, mine and home.
11. Liability of employers for injury to body or loss of life.
12. The nationalization of telegraph and telephone.
13. The passage of anti-child labour laws in states where they do not exist and rigid defence of them where they have been enacted into law.
14. Woman suffrage co-equal with man suffrage.
15. Suitable and plentiful playgrounds, for children in all cities.
16. The initiative and referendum and the imperative mandate and right of recall.
17. Continued agitation for the public bath system in all cities.
18. Qualification in permits to build of all cities and towns that there shall be bathrooms and bathroom atttachments in all houses or compartments used for habitation.
19. We favour a system of finance whereby money shall be issued exclusively by the Government, with such regulations and restrictions as will protect it from manipulation by the banking interests for their own private gain.

Under the constitution only one central organization of a particular trade or calling is granted a charter of affiliation, no recognition being given to dual national or international unions, i.e., bodies covering the same calling, unless the written consent is given of the existing affiliated unions whose jurisdiction is involved.

The revenue of the Federation is derived from a per capita tax upon the fully paid-up membership of all affiliated bodies, and on a varying scale, as follows: (a) from international or national trade unions, one cent per month; (b) from local trade unions and federal labour unions chartered direct by the Federation, 35 cents per month (12½ cents of which must be set aside to be used only in case of strike or lockout involving such local or federal union); (c) from city central and state bodies, $10 per year, payable quarterly. Levies of one cent per member per week may be made on all affiliated unions for a period not exceeding ten weeks in any one year to assist in the support of an affiliated national or international union engaged in a protracted strike or lockout. Local trade unions and federal labour unions, chartered direct, are also required to forward to the Federation 25 per cent of the total initiation fee received by the local union, which in no case shall be less than $1.

In the development of its organization the American Federation of Labor has established departments covering four leading groups of industries, viz., building trades, metal trades, railroad employees, and union label trades. Each department, which comprises organizations affilated with the Federation, has power to manage and finance its own business. These departments are charged with watching the interest of the workers in the industries represented and may initiate or assist movements, the aim of which is to promote the welfare of such workers.

Local councils of the departments are in operation in various cities, and the union branches of these respective trades are thus brought together for joint action, their conduct of course must be in conformity with the general policy of the American Federation of Labor. Each department is entitled to send a delegate to the annual conventions of the Federation. The mining trades department, which came into existence on July 8, 1912, was dissolved on July 1, 1922.

The Building Trades Department of the Federation, according to the latest information received, has in affiliation sixteen international unions, and had an average membership for 1933 of 306,576 and also seven state and 357 local building trades councils, twelve of which are reported as being located in the Dominion but only from the following Canadian cities were reports received: Edmonton, Hamilton, Montreal, Ottawa, Quebec, St. Catharines, Saint John, Toronto, Vancouver, Winnipeg.

The Metal Trades Department had in affiliation fifteen international unions, the affiliated membership of which is approximately, 350,000, as well as 85 local state and district metal trades councils.

The Railway Employees' Department had nine international organizations in affiliation, made up chiefly of railway shop employees, and has an approximate membership of 346,096. In addition, according to the latest report, there are 100 railroad system federations or departments under charter, eight of which cover employees on the following Canadian railways: Canadian National Railways, comprising Atlantic, Central and Western Regions; Canadian Pacific; Dominion Atlantic; Edmonton, Dunvegan and British Columbia; Esquimalt and Nanaimo; Kettle Valley; Temiskaming and Northern Ontario, and Toronto, Hamilton and Buffalo. Division No. 4, embracing the shop mechanics employed on all Canadian lines, also operates under charter from the Railway Employees' Department.

The Union Label Trades Department had 41 international unions affiliated with a total membership of 435,277. In addition there are local label leagues under charter, of which six are located in Canadian cities, viz., Hamilton, Kitchener, Montreal, Three Rivers, Toronto and Vancouver.

The American Federation of Labor has a staff of regular organizers on salary, one of whom is resident in Canada.

At each convention, in addition to others, a committee on adjustment is appointed for the purpose of investigating and endeavouring to bring about settlements of jurisdictional disputes between unions which have not been adjusted through other agencies, and in the majority of cases amicable adjustments are reached.

Particulars as to membership together with the names of the chief officers of the American Federation of Labor are recorded in Chapter XVI.—Organization of Workers Throughout the World.

In addition to the American Federation of Labor and its 108 directly affiliated organizations, there are a number of other central labour bodies operating in North America. Among the more important of these are the railroad brotherhoods, which embrace workers in engine and train service, and which comprise one of the strongest labour groups on the North American continent.

During the year a branch of the International Seamen's Union was established in Canada, and as a result, the name of this international organization has been re-inserted in the list, it having been dropped from the previous report on account of having lost all its branches in Canada. The name of the Sheep Shearers' Union of North America will not appear in this report, the organization failing to report either locals or members in Canada.

Besides the unions mentioned in this chapter there are approximately thirty other labour organizations operating on the North American continent, but as they did not make returns to the Department, and because they are not considered to be important factors in the labour movement, owing to the fact that their activities are confined to a small area, their names are not included in this report. With but few exceptions the organizations operating in Canada and the United States are what are commonly known as craft unions, 108 of which are in direct affiliation with the American Federation of Labor. The American Federation of Full-Fashioned Hosiery Workers, the American Federation of Silk Workers, and the International Pocket Book Workers' Union, which though not directly chartered by the American Federation of Labor, are indirectly affiliates by reason of holding charters from organizations which are in direct affiliation, and are therefore designated as affiliates of the Federation, making 111 bodies so identified.

Of the 81 organizations whose names appear in Chapter XVIII, Table 3, 79 have extended their jurisdiction into Canada by establishing one or more branches or having members resident in the Dominion; the American Federation of Labor has also granted charters to a number of local unions in the Dominion, there being no central organization covering the work people so organized, make 80 international unions with Canadian affiliations, same as in 1932. Of the organizations operating in Canada, 71 are affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

The Industrial Workers of the World, which is a central organizing industrial union, having no connection with the labour movement as represented by the American Federation, is discussed in Chapter VI.

Fifty-nine of the affiliates of the American Federation of Labor, as well as the Federation itself, have given recognition to the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada (as head of the internationally organized labour movement of the Dominion) by affiliating the whole of their Canadian membership with that body. The Brotherhood of Railroad Signalmen, which, though having been suspended from the A.F. of L. in 1928 over a question of jurisdiction, maintains its affiliation with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada for its Canadian members, which makes 61 international organizations identified with the Canadian body.

II. TRADES AND LABOUR CONGRESS OF CANADA

Formed in 1873—Objects and Principles—Attendance at the 1933 Convention—Reported Decrease in Membership—Receipts and Expenditures—Numerical and Financial Standing for Twenty Years—Officers of the Congress—Provincial Executive Committees—Fraternal Delegates.

The Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, which was originally formed in 1873 under the name of The Canadian Labour Union, but adopted its present name at the convention held at Ottawa in 1874, is the oldest and most representative body of internationally organized workers in the Dominion. The issues of this report, prior to 1932 contain historical accounts of the Congress.

OBJECTS OF THE CONGRESS

(a) To encourage and form such organizations of workers as conform to its rules and regulations;

(b) To establish city or district central councils based upon the strict recognition of the autonomy of each affiliated organization and the promotion and advancement of such bodies;

(c) To establish and maintain a congress with suitable headquarters at Ottawa and subsidiary Executive Committees or Federations of Labour in each of the provinces of Canada for the purpose of assisting each other;

(d) To aid and encourage the sale of union labelled goods;

(e) To influence public opinion by peaceful and legal methods in favour of organized labour and to secure legislation in the interests of the working people;

(f) To further the spirit of international trade unionism;

(g) Generally for such purposes as may best advance the interests of working people.

PLATFORM OF PRINCIPLES

The platform of principles, as revised by the executive council following the 1931 convention, is as follows:—

1. Free education and compulsory school attendance.
2. Maximum legal working day of eight hours and establishment of five-day week.
3. Holidays with pay.
4. Insertion and enforcement of fair wage regulations (based on established union conditions) in all government work direct and indirect.
5. Public ownership and democratic management of all public utilities.
6. Government control and fullest development of all natural resources.
7. Establishment of a Tariff Board on which labour will be fully represented.
8. Revenue by direct taxation.
9. Abolition of non-elective legislative bodies
10. Exclusion of all races that cannot be properly assimilated into the national life of Canada.
11. The demand for, and use of, the union label.
12. Prevention of employment of children under sixteen years of age.
13. Equal pay for equal work for men and women.
14. Voluntary arbitration in labour disputes.
15. Proportional representation with group constituencies.
16. The encouragement of the establishment of Consumers' Co-operative Societies.
17. Unemployment insurance.
18. Old age pensions, state insurance for sickness and disability.
19. Uniformity of labour laws throughout the Dominion.
20. Disarmament.

REPRESENTATION AND MEMBERSHIP

The basis of representation of affiliated bodies at annual or other conventions is: From local branch unions in Canada of international and national organizations and trade unions directly chartered by the Congress: One delegate for the first 100 members or less, and one for each additional 100 members or the majority fraction thereof; international and national organizations which have affiliated their entire membership in the Dominion are entitled to one additional delegate, who must be elected from their Canadian membership. Trades and labour councils and provincial federations of labour are entitled to three delegates each. Article III of the constitution of the Trades and Labour Congress governing membership and charters is as follows:—

Sec. 1.—The membership of the Trades and Labour Congress shall consist of such trades and labour bodies as are hereinafter defined and conform to its rules and regulations.

Sec. 2.—Any international union holding a charter from the American Federation of Labor shall be entitled to affiliate its entire Canadian membership; and any local unit in Canada of an international union, chartered by the American Federation of Labor, which is not so affiliated, shall be entitled to direct membership in this Congress.

Sec. 3.—Charters or certificates of affiliation, bearing the signature of the president and secretary-treasurer of the Congress and its seal, may be granted by the executive council of the Congress to any body of workers in Canada who are not eligible for membership in a recognized international or national union.

Sec. 4.—The Congress shall form and charter Trades and Labour Councils and Provincial Federations of Labour, composed of such organizations as are entitled to membership in the Congress.

Sec. 5.—No international or national union other than those already enumerated in sections 2, 3, and 4 shall be admitted to membership except by two-thirds vote of the annual convention of this Congress, but in no case shall any organization be admitted to membership whose jurisdiction conflicts with that of an international or national union already affiliated to this Congress.

Sec. 6.—The fee for a charter and supplies for Provincial Federations of Labour, Trades and Labour Councils and such labour unions as may be performed and chartered direct by this Congress shall be $10, and each organization so chartered shall be supplied with an official seal.

Sec. 7.—The executive council shall have power, apart from any other power enumerated in this constitution, by a majority vote of its members, given either at a meeting of the council, or otherwise, to suspend from membership any affiliated or chartered body which in the opinion of the executive has violated either the letter or spirit of the constitution, or which has, or the officers of which have, (a) encouraged or advocated secession from international unions or assisted in forming independent or dual organizations; (b) refused to join or affiliate with an international union of its trade or calling when so ordered by the executive. Such suspension shall debar any organization from all rights and benefits of membership in this Congress until the next annual convention, when the suspension may be made permanent and the charter revoked or affiliation cancelled by majority of the delegates present on a roll call vote. Any organization may also be suspended from membership or its charter revoked or its membership cancelled upon a motion introduced at any regular convention and adopted by majority of the delegates present on a roll call vote.

The revenue of the Congress, besides the fee charged for charters supplied to such bodies as are entitled to them, is derived from a tax of 18 cents per member per year from international and national organizations and from unions chartered direct by the Congress, 36 cents per member from trades and labour councils, and a lump payment of $10 per annum from provincial federations of labour. The Congress owns the building in Ottawa in which the head office is located, and which is valued at $40,000, the management being vested in a board of trustees composed of the executive council.

ATTENDANCE AT THE 1933 CONVENTION

At the forty-ninth annual convention of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada held in Windsor, Ont., September 18-23, 1933, credentials were received for 218 delegates, 43 of whom represented international organizations which have affiliated the whole of their Canadian membership with the Congress, 1 represented a provincial federation, 32 represented trades and labour councils, 10 represented divisions of railroad telegraphers, 130 represented local branch unions, and the 2 fraternal delegates present represented respectively the British Trade Union Congress and the American Federation of Labor.

The report of the secretary-treasurer named the 58 international organizations which had paid per capita on the whole of their Canadian membership, as well as the 2 national unions, federations, trades and labour councils, and showed that the total membership for which per capita tax had been paid up to the close of the fiscal year was 105,546, a decrease of 16,583, comprised in 1,512 local branch unions, a loss of 27. In reporting the membership the secretary-treasurer stated that "while there is a decrease in the number of paid members, it does not mean there has been a decrease in the membership of the movement" and he added, "the continuance of widespread unemployment has resulted in thousands being unable to pay their monthly dues in their respective unions."

The international and national organizations in affiliation with the Congress are indicated thus () in the tables in a subsequent chapter giving the membership of the respective unions.

The total receipts for the fiscal year, including the balance on hand, amounted to $41,191.99; expenditure, $38,034.10, leaving a balance of $3,157.89.

The secretary-treasurer also submitted a report of the trustees of Congress headquarters, the figures for which were included in the above totals, and which showed receipts of $1,624, and expenses for maintenance, etc., of $1,511.01.

III. ALL CANADIAN CONGRESS OF LABOUR

Established in 1927 to Promote the Interests of National and Independent Unions—Preamble to Constitution—Purposes—Membership and Representation—Accepts Industrial Unionism as Its Basic Organizational Principle—No Convention in 1933—Affiliated Central Organizations—Officers of the Congress.

The All-Canadian Congress of Labour had its origin at a conference of trade union representatives held at Montreal in March, 1927. Several conferences had been held previously between representatives of the Canadian Federation of Labour, an organization formed in 1902, and some of the other national unions. A preliminary meeting of representatives of such bodies was held at Toronto on November 22-23, 1926, at which gathering it was arranged to hold a convention at Montreal in March, 1927. At the meeting in Montreal which was presided over by two chairmen—D. Giroux (of the Canadian Federation of Labour) and A. R. Mosher (of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees) a resolution was adopted establishing the All-Canadian Congress of Labour, which is embodied in the preamble to the constitution as follows:—

Whereas, we the representatives of national and independent unions in Canada, meeting in convention in the city of Montreal, Quebec, on the 16th to the 19th of March, 1927, are convinced that

(a) the Canadian labour movement must be freed from the reactionary influence of United States-controlled unions;

(b) Canadian workers require a new organization through which they may collectively promote their general welfare and raise their economic and social standard;

(c) while the workers, under the present system cannot obtain the full value of their labour, it is nevertheless necessary to strive at all times to procure higher real wages and better conditions of labour;

(d) it is necessary to promote among the workers a thorough understanding of working-class economics;

Therefore, be it resolved, that a central body composed of the national and independent unions of Canada be here established to give expression to these aims and objects.

The Canadian Federation of Labour, having decided to merge its identity with the new congress, a committee was appointed to wind up its affairs, and in due course passed out of existence.

PURPOSES OF THE CONGRESS

The purposes of the All-Canadian Congress, as set forth in Article II of the constitution, are as follows:—

Article II.—PURPOSES.—The congress shall promote the interests of its affiliated organizations and strive to improve the economic and social conditions of the workers by:

(a) That organization of the workers in autonomous bodies for economic action, i.e., organization in the industrial field.

(c) Furthering such legislation as shall be of immediate benefit to the workers, and which tends to increase their social and political power.

The head office of the Congress is in Ottawa, where in 1930 the organization opened new offices in the building of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees.

MEMBERSHIP AND REPRESENTATION

The membership is derived from (a) affiliated national unions and (b) chartered independent local unions. Charters are also issued to central councils composed of delegates from national or independent unions identified with the congress, but such bodies have no representation at conventions of the congress, neither are they required to pay per capita tax. The representation at annual or special conventions is as follows: (a) Affiliated national unions, two delegates representing the general executive board and one delegate from each local unit, (b) independent local unions, one delegate each.

The revenue of the congress is derived as follows: (a) From affiliated national unions, two cents per member per month, (b) Local unions directly chartered by the congress, 15 cents per member per month, and 50 cents of each initiation fee.

ACCEPTS INDUSTRIAL UNIONISM

NO CONVENTION IN 1933

Representations having been made to the executive board of the Congress that it was undesirable to hold the annual convention for 1932 owing to the inability of many locals to meet the expense of sending delegates, a notification was sent out to all affiliated unions and chartered local unions advising them that the regular convention would be postponed until 1933. As there was very little improvement in conditions generally, the executive announced a further postponement necessary, therefore, no convention of the Congress was held for 1933. Meetings of the Executive of the Congress and representatives of the executives of affiliated organizations have been held from time to time.

AFFILIATED CENTRAL ORGANIZATIONS

The secretary of the Congress reported two new affiliates during the year—The Canadian Amalgamated Association of Seamen and the Canadian Bushmen's Union. The Seamen's Union was formed at Vancouver on April 24, 1931, and is composed of seamen employed in the deck, catering and engine room departments of ships under Canadian Registry. The Bushmen's Union, the organization of which was started in 1933 comprises those engaged in lumbering and pulp and paper operations. The headquarters of the union is located at 7 Bank of Hamilton Chambers, Port Arthur, Ont. The secretary-treasurer is Geo. Salverson.

During the year the Amalgamated Carpenters of Canada; the Bridge, Structural, Ornamental, Re-inforced Iron Workers, Pile Drivers and Riggers' Union of Canada, and the National Union of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of Canada merged with the Amalgamated Building Workers of Canada, and as a consequence the names of the first three organizations have been dropped.

The complete list of the affiliates of the Congress are as follows:—Amalgamated Building Workers of Canada; Canadian Association of Railway Enginemen Conductors, Trainmen, Yardmen, Telegraphers and Dispatchers; Canadian Amalgamated Association of Seamen; Canadian Association of Stationary Engineers; Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees; Canadian Bushmen's Union; Canadian Electrical Trades Union; Canadian Printers' Union; Electrical Communication Workers of Canada; Vancouver and District Waterfront Workers, and the One Big Union. The latter organization which withdrew in 1930 reaffiliated with the Congress in 1932. In addition to the above mentioned eleven organizations, one less than was recorded in 1932, there were 39 directly chartered unions, a decrease of 2, with a combined membership of 3,120, a loss of 953. The total reported membership of the Congress at the close of 1933 was 55,118, an increase of 4,762, as compared with the year 1932. The Congress also had fourteen national councils under charters, the cities in which they were located appearing in Chapter XII.

OFFICERS OF THE CONGRESS

President—A. R. Mosher (president of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees), Box, 395, Ottawa, Ont.

Secretary-Treasurer—W. T. Burford (of the Electrical Communication Workers of Canada), 230 Laurier Ave. W., Ottawa, Ont.

Other Members of the Executive Board—G. W. McCollum (of the Canadian Electrical Trades Union), 109 Sherwood Ave., Toronto, Ont.; T. McGregor (of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees), 264 Martin Ave., Winnipeg, Man.; Harry Burgess (of the Vancouver and District Waterfront Workers), 4423 Belmont St., Vancouver, B.C.

IV. ONE BIG UNION

Instituted at a Meeting Held in Calgary, 1919, Sponsored by British Columbia Federation of Labour—Preamble to Constitution—Membership Figures—Officers of the Organization.

The origin of the One Big Union, generally referred to as the O.B.U., took place at a meeting held at Calgary, Alta., in March, 1919. The calling of a delegate conference was decided upon in 1918 after certain proposals advocated by western delegates to the Trades and Labour Congress Convention at Quebec City was turned down. This delegate conference was to give the western membership of the Congress an opportunity of preparing a progressive policy which it was believed would be acceptable to the eastern representatives. The British Columbia Federation of Labour, a body under charter from the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada but which has since passed out of existence, sponsored the holding of this conference. It was attended by 237 delegates, two of whom were from Ontario, and although no sessionist movement was contemplated, the second resolution adopted favoured the immediate reorganization of the workers along industrial lines. On recommendation of the policy committee the new organization became known as the One Big Union. A second meeting was held in Calgary on June 11, 1919, when the tentative constitution drawn up at the March meeting, with certain amendments, was ratified, the preamble to which is as follows:—

Modern industrial society is divided into two classes, those who possess and not produce, and those who produce and not possess. Alongside this main division all other classifications fade into insignificance. Between these two classes a continual struggle takes place. As with buyers and sellers of any commodity, there exists a struggle on the one hand of the buyer to buy as cheaply as possible, and on the other, of the seller to sell for as much as possible, so with the buyers and sellers of labour power. In the struggle over the purchase and sale of labour power the buyers are always masters—the sellers always workers. From this fact arises the inevitable class struggle.

As industry develops and ownership becomes concentrated more and more into fewer hands; as the control of the economic forces of society become more and more the sole property of imperialistic finance, it becomes apparent that the workers, in order to sell their labour power with any degree of success, must extend their forms of organization in accordance with changing industrial methods. Compelled to organize for self-defence, they are further compelled to educate themselves in preparation for the social change which economic developments will produce whether they seek it or not.

The One Big Union, therefore seeks to organize the wage-earners according to class and class needs and calls upon all workers to organize irrespective of nationality, sex, or craft into a workers' organization, so that they may be enabled to more successfully carry on the everyday fight over wages, hours of work, etc., and prepare ourselves for the day when production for profit shall be replaced by production for use.

Fuller details concerning the O.B.U. will be found in the issues of this report for the years 1919 and 1920. At the close of the year 1919 the organization reported a membership of 41,150 comprised in 101 local units.

LATER MEMBERSHIP FIGURES

At the close of 1932, according to the report of the secretary-treasurer, the O.B.U. had 47 local units in Canada and a rank and file unit in the United States, with a combined membership of 23,712. For 1933 the general secretary reported 46 local units in Canada, a loss of 1 and a rank and file unit in the United States with a membership of 340, the Canadian membership being given at 23,300.

The O.B.U. also had two central councils under charters, their location appearing in the list of trades and labour councils in Chapter XII.

OFFICERS OF THE O.B.U.

The officers of the general executive board of the One Big Union are as follows: Chairman, J. Duff; Secretary-treasurer, R. B. Russell; A. Meikle; T. H. Dunn; W. McCallum, and T. Roberts. Headquarters, 54 Adelaide St., Winnipeg, Man.

V. AMALGAMATED MINE WORKERS OF NOVA SCOTIA

Formed at Glace Bay, N.S., on June 19, 1932—Provisional Officers Elected—First Convention of New Union—Preamble to the Constitution—Membership—Chief Officers.

The Amalgamated Mine Workers of Nova Scotia was formed at Glace Bay, N.S., on June 19, 1932, following a vote of the membership of the United Mine Workers of America, District 26, on the question of a reduction of ten per cent in wages, and on which, certain locals in the Glace Bay District were debarred from voting under the constitution of the union owing to being in arrears for dues.

At a subsequent sub-district convention these locals voted in favour of a provincial organization and the new union was formed and provisional officers elected. Fuller details concerning the formation of the union are contained in the report for 1932.

FIRST CONVENTION OF NEW UNION

At the first convention of the new union, held in Glace Bay on September 19-24, 1932, a constitution was adopted, the preamble of which is as follows:—

Modern society is divided into two classes: those who produce and do not possess and those who possess and do not produce. Alongside of this main division all other classifications fade into insignificance. Between these two classes a continual struggle always exists.

The capitalistic class now owns and controls the means of production and raw material together with the finished product, and is using the same solely in the interest of their own class, and therefore must be diametrically opposed to the interest of the non-owning working or producing class. We therefore, call upon all workers engaged in the production of all industries, employed or unemployed, regardless of race, colour, creed, or occupation, to organize into industrial affiliated organizations for the purpose of protecting their interests against the encroachments of the capitalistic exploiting class, having the abolition of the wage system as their ultimate goal, by taking over the raw material, the machinery of production, and the means of distribution and convert same to render service to all humanity, instead of the present economic system of production for profits only, for the non-producing owning class and the exploitation of the producing non-owning class.

We firmly believe that the capitalistic system can no more function efficiently, and that we can expect only intensified exploitation and unemployment with all the misery and privations that follow in its wake until a new system is ushered in which will economically emancipate the workers from wage slavery which robs them at the point of production.

The following are the objects of the Amalgamated Mine Workers as set forth in the constitution:—

(1) To organize all workers regardless of occupation according to class needs, to work ceaselessly in the interest of their class; (2) Non-contributory unemployment insurance, full maintenance during periods of enforced idleness, sickness or accidents. Improvement of living standards, wages, working hours, and enact legislation for the benefit and protection of all workers generally; (3) To educate the workers as to their class position in society and show them the way out from capitalistic exploitation to their economic emancipation; (4) To assist all workers during labour disputes or lockouts by financial contributions and our economic strength when necessary; (5) To insist upon all workers having committees of themselves to inspect mines and workshops.

Article III of the constitution reads as follows:—

(1) The supreme power of the organization lies in the referendum vote of the rank and file membership; (2) The district shall pay all expenses incurred in the conducting of all district elections; (3) That no lawyer be ever consulted or engaged in connection with any agreement, settlement of grievances or internal work of the union. Consultation with a lawyer to be only in purely criminal or legal cases. In all union work such as agreements, settlement of grievances or internal work of the union we will rely always on the advice, guidance, and counsel of members of our own organization; (4) This organization shall always remain a purely workers' organization and shall as far as possible be kept from all political influences, or anything which tends to disrupt the ranks of our organization. The business of the organization shall be confined to looking after the individual business of its members; (5) That May 1st (May day) and June 11th (Davis day) be recognized as constitutional holidays by this organization.

MEMBERSHIP OF THE AMALGAMATED MINE WORKERS OF N.S.

At the close of the year 1932, the membership of the Amalgamated Mine Workers of Nova Scotia was reported at 7,801, comprised in 21 local unions. According to the report of the secretary-treasurer the membership at the close of 1933 was 5,363, a decrease of 2,438, comprised in 19 local unions, a loss of 2.

CHIEF OFFICERS

VI. INDUSTRIAL WORKERS OF THE WORLD

Established in 1905—Has for Its Objective the Abolition of Present Wage System—Founders of Movement—Principles of I.W.W.—Affiliates in Canada—First Canadian I.W.W. Conference—Chief Officers of Canadian Administration—Numerical Strength Chief Officer.

The Industrial Workers of the World (generally referred to as the I.W.W.) was established in 1905, and has for its objective the abolition of the present wage system. Among the founders of the movement were Eugene V. Debs, William Haywood and Daniel De Leon, leader of the Socialist Labour Party, all of whom are now deceased.

PRINCIPLES OF THE I.W.W.

The principles of the I.W.W., as set forth in the preamble to the constitution which was adopted in 1908, are as follows:—

The working class and the employing class have nothing in common. There can be no peace so long as hunger and want are found among the millions of working people, and the few who make up the employing class have all the good things of life.

Between these two classes a struggle must go on until the workers of the world organize as a class, take possession of the earth and the machinery of production, and abolish the wage system.

We find that the centering of the management of industries into fewer and fewer hands makes the trade unions unable to cope with the ever-growing power of the employing class. The trade unions foster a state of affairs which allows one set of workers to be pitted against another set of workers in the same industry, thereby helping defeat one another in wage wars. Moreover, the trade unions aid the employing class to mislead the workers into the belief that the working class have interests in common with their employers.

These conditions can be changed and the interest of the working class upheld only by an organization formed in such a way that all its members in any one industry, or in all industries, if necessary, cease work whenever a strike or lockout is on in any department thereof, thus making an injury to one an injury to all.

Instead of the conservative motto: "A fair day's wage for a fair day's work," we must inscribe on our banner the revolutionary watchword, "Abolition of the wage system."

It is the historic mission of the working class to do away with capitalism. The army of production must be organized, not only for the everyday struggle with capitalists, but also to carry on production when capitalism shall have been overthrown. By organizing industrially we are forming the structure of the new society within the shell of the old.

The early history of the organization was recorded in previous issues of this report.

THE I.W.W. IN CANADA

The original affiliate of the Industrial Workers of the World, the Western Federation of Miners, left the organization in 1910, and was granted affiliation with the American Federation of Labor. Other branches of the I.W.W. comprising workers other than miners were established in certain localities in Western Canada, but these gradually ceased to function, the last of which passed out of existence in 1915. The I.W.W. re-established a branch at Vancouver in 1922, consisting of lumber workers, who withdrew from the Lumber Workers' Industrial Union of Canada, an independent body, when the latter became identified with the Red International of Labour Unions.

FIRST CANADIAN I.W.W. CONFERENCE

By the action taken early in 1932, through a referendum vote, a Canadian administration for the I.W.W. membership in the Dominion, was established, the powers conferred being as follows:—

(a) The officials of the Canadian administration of the I.W.W. shall be a secretary-treasurer, who shall be officially designated "Canadian secretary-treasurer," and an executive board which shall be officially designated "Canadian Executive Board." The duties and powers of the above-named officials shall bear the same relation to the Canadian membership as the present general officials of the I.W.W. under the present constitution, with such exceptions as may be hereafter designated or adopted by general conventions of the I.W.W., or emergency rulings of the general administration of the I.W.W.

(b) The Canadian administration shall have the power to determine all initiation fees, dues and assessments under its jurisdiction.

(c) The Canadian administration shall be empowered to publish literature and establish a press. All literature and press policies shall be sanctioned by the general administration of the I.W.W.

The Canadian administration is under the supervision of the general administration, whose head office is in Chicago, and from whom the Canadian administration shall purchase all supplies, due books and due stamps and shall pay 2 cents per due stamp and 15 cents for cash due book, plus duty and shipping charges, but the general administration may at its discretion authorize the Canadian section to manufacture such supplies as are needed.

The first conference of the Canadian administration of the I.W.W. met in Port Arthur, the Canadian headquarters, on September 12, 1932, with seventeen delegates and members in attendance. With the object of bringing back into the organization unemployed members and of retaining the present out-of-work members it was decided to reduce the initiation fee to 20 cents and the monthly dues to 5 cents, and those who are employed to pay the initiation fee of $1 and monthly dues of 25 cents. For the purpose of raising funds to conduct organization work a 25 cent stamp was decided upon which may be sold to all persons whether or not they are members of the I.W.W.

The chief officers of the Canadian Administration are: Chairman, William McPhee, 314 Bay St., Port Arthur, Ont.; Secretary-treasurer, J. D. Golden, 314 Bay St., Port Arthur, Ont.

NUMERICAL STRENGTH OF THE I.W.W.

Following its formation in 1905, the I.W.W. claimed a membership of 400,000. In 1931 the total membership was reported at 21,596 of whom 3,466 were in Canada. The number of members for 1932 in Canada was reported at 3,618 comprised in 8 local branches but the head office failed to supply the total membership. At the close of 1933, the total membership is reported at 31,691 in 45 local branches, of whom 3,618 comprised in 8 local branches are located in Canada.

VII. NATIONAL CATHOLIC UNIONS

Plan of Organization—Federation of Catholic Workers—Attendance at 1933 Convention—Financial Statement—A Chaplain Selected by the Religious Authorities For Each Catholic Body—Federations and Secretariats—Canada Only British Country Having Catholic Unions—International Federation of Christian Trade Unions—Numerical Strength of the Federation—Chief Officers.

The plan of organization of the National Catholic Unions is based on the principle of craft unionism and whose operations with the exception of the Diocese of Ottawa are confined entirely to the Province of Quebec.

The National Catholic Unions accept for their guidance the declarations of Pope Leo XIII, contained in an encyclical, Rerum Novarum, on "The Conditions of the Working Classes," dated May 15, 1891, and which declares "These workingmen's associations should be organized and governed as to furnish the best and most suitable means for attempting what it aimed at, that is to say, for helping each member to better his condition to the utmost in body, soul and property." Yet that it is clear "that they must pay special and chief attention to the duties of religion and morality, and that social betterment should have this chiefly in view;" for "the foundation of social laws being thus laid in religion, it is not hard to establish the relations of members one to another, in order that they may live together in concord and achieve prosperity." The provisions of this encyclical were subsequently proclaimed by Pope Pius X as fundamental rules for workingmen's associations, and further amplified by Pope Pius XI in his encyclical Quadragesimo Anno, dated May 23, 1931.

FEDERATION OF CATHOLIC WORKERS

As the Catholic syndicate movement grew there developed an agitation for a central body, in which the work of the various unions could be co-ordinated. Accordingly a meeting of representatives from national unions was held in the city of Quebec in September, 1918, there being 27 unions represented. A report submitted to the meeting stated that there were in existence 41 national Catholic unions (bodies to which none but adherents of the Roman Catholic faith are admitted) and seventeen other national unions, which were termed neutral, membership being open to workers of all denominations. These latter unions, it is understood, are not now in existence, their disappearance possibly being accounted for in part by the fact that, though national Catholic unions are designed ostensibly for adherents of the Roman Catholic faith, provision is made for the admittance of non-Catholic as associate members who may vote, but are not eligible for office. When non-Catholic membership of a union reaches fifty they may form a non-Catholic section of the national Catholic body and elect their own officers.

Following the meeting of delegates in 1918 other conventions of representatives of the national Catholic unions were held regularly each year, and in 1921, at the meeting held in Hull, with 220 delegates in attendance, a central organization was established under the name of Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada, and a set of rules adopted. (These rules were published in this report for 1921.) The preparation of the principles of the Federation was referred to the religious authorities, and as incorporated in the constitution define the Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada as an interprofessional labour organization, uniting together the various labour groups in Canada which have the double character of being national and Catholic. The full text of these principles and of the aims and objects appeared in the annual Report on Labour Organization in Canada for 1931.

On August 12, 1930, the federation was registered under the Professional Syndicates Act of the Province of Quebec.

The Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada has met regularly each year since its formation in 1921, that for 1933 being opened in Montreal on November 18, and was attended by 194 delegates, representing 4 federations, 7 central councils and 108 local syndicates. The financial statement as presented at the convention showed receipts for the fiscal year of $6,367.45 and expenses of $6,298.87, leaving a balance of $68.58.

A proposal submitted to the 1930 convention to have the Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada affiliate with the International Federation of Christian Trade Unions (a body referred to later in this chapter) was submitted to the executive board. Up to the present this affiliation has not taken place.

A CHAPLAIN FOR EACH CATHOLIC BODY

The constitution of the Federation of Catholic Workers provides for the appointment of a general chaplain, selected by the religious authorities. The section governing the powers of the chaplain reads as follows:—

The general chaplain is by right a member of all congresses of the federation and of the federal bureau. He may attend the meeting of all committees formed by the federation or send a representative. He exercises, in deliberations, the same rights as those exercised by delegates or members belonging to the congress whereat such discussions take place, and is subject, like them, to the usual rules of procedure.

The chaplain does not vote. The general chaplain may attend the meetings and take part in the proceedings of any organization affiliated with the federation.

The chaplain depends solely, in the exercise of his functions, on the religious authorities by which he was appointed.

The general chaplain has the right to give his personal opinion on any question, like all delegates; but his proper function is to represent the church among the Catholic syndicated workmen. It is for him to state and recall, whenever it is needed, the Catholic principles and doctrine, and he only fills his mission when he asks the congress and the committees to make their resolutions and conduct conform to the Catholic principles and doctrine.

The general chaplain may demand that a resolution which, in his judgment, would affect Catholic morals or the teachings of the church, be submitted to the religious authorities and approved by them before being put in force.

The general chaplain of the federation has charge of the superior interests of the souls, of society and of religion. He is entitled, on the part of the delegates, to all the consideration and respect which are due to the religious authorities which he represents.

Each delegate body and local national Catholic syndicate also has a chaplain, appointed by the religious authorities, whose powers are similar to those of the general chaplain for the Federation of Catholic Workers.

FEDERATIONS AND SECRETARIATS

The national Catholic unions of closely allied and particular trades have, like the non-sectarian trade unions, established federations (delegate bodies referred to in a later chapter of this report). In the city of Quebec in 1920 there was formed the secretariat of Catholic syndicates, which is designed to have charge of the various matters affecting the activities and development of the local organizations. In the secretariat in Quebec city are located the headquarters of the Catholic Federation of Pulp and Paper Factory Employees, as well as the offices of a number of business agents. There are also secretariats in Montreal, Three Rivers, Chicoutimi, Sherbrooke, St. Hyacinthe, and the diocese of Ottawa, that in the first-named place being the headquarters of the federations of the building and printing trades. The Montreal secretariat publishes an official organ for the national Catholic unions in its jurisdiction, the title of the publication being La Vie Syndicale. The Catholic union movement, as previously stated, has city central councils, bodies similar to trades and labour councils, a chapter concerning which appears in this report.

CANADA ONLY BRITISH COUNTRY HAVING CATHOLIC UNIONS

According to information available, Canada is the only British country in which there are trade unions or syndicates designed chiefly for adherents of the Roman Catholic church, and all but one syndicate and a study circle are located in the Province of Quebec. In Great Britain there was at one time an organization known as the Catholic Federation which was composed of Roman Catholics generally for particular Catholic purposes, and included in its membership adherents of the faith who were trade unionists. Besides this body there was also in England the National Conference of Catholic Trade Unionists which was composed exclusively of Catholic members of trade unions, but in both cases these trade unionists were supposed to confine their activities to defending Roman Catholic interests inside the existing non-sectarian trade unions. According to information received in the department in 1930, both of the above-mentioned organizations have made several attempts to function, but the Roman Catholics in Great Britain would not sever their connection with the regular trade unions and no religious difficulty is experienced. As a result, it was reported, the two English organizations gradually died out.

INTERNATIONAL FEDERATION OF CHRISTIAN TRADE UNIONS

The first Catholic trade unions (or Christian unions as they are called in Europe) were established in Germany by Bishop Katteler, assisted by the clergy, over sixty years ago. Since that time the Christian trade union movement has spread to other European countries, there now being central federated bodies of such unions in Austria, Belgium, Czechoslovakia, France, Germany, Hungary, Jugoslavia, Luxemburg, Netherlands, Spain and Switzerland. These several organizations, which according to the latest reports had a membership of over a million and a half, are brought together in the International Federation of Christian Trade Unions, which was established at The Hague in June, 1920. There are also fifteen Christian trade internationals operating in Europe, and which embrace the following classes of workers: General employees, building workers, factory and transport workers, printing workers, wood workers, clothing workers, agricultural workers, metal workers, mining workers, postal, telegraph and telephone workers, railway workers, tobacco workers, textile workers, food workers, and public employees.

Article II of the statutes of the International Federation of Christian Trade Unions sets forth that—"The confederation adopts as a basis Christian principles. It therefore affirms that economic and social life implies the collaboration of all children of the same people. It therefore repudiates violence and class strife on the part of the employers as well as on that of the workers. The confederation reckons the present economical and social order is on essential points in contradiction with the Christian spirit. It endeavours to thoroughly modify society in accordance with these principles by following a process of evolution organic and legal. The confederation has above all for its objects the defence of the interests of the workers and employees from a viewpoint of the economic, social and public order conditions through general collaboration."

(a) Defend the workers' interests on the basis of the principles set forth in Article II, in the economic field, and specially in the field of international organizations of labour, wages, working conditions and labour legislation;

(b) Favour the interests of the organizations of affiliated confederations;

(c) Carry on propaganda in favour of the Christian syndicalist movement in the various countries where it does not yet exist, and promote the affiliation of organizations on a Christian basis which are not yet affiliated;

(d) Encourage mutual financial support between the affiliated confederations.

Besides the syndicates of Catholic workpeople affiliated with the Christian Federation of Trade Unions there are also identified with it unions composed of Protestants. The German Christian Syndicates are in great part composed of Protestant workers jointly with Catholic workers. In the Netherlands and in Switzerland there are both federations of Catholic workers and of Protestant workers, each of which is in affiliation with the International Federation.

The president of the International Federation of Christian Trade Unions is Bernard Otte, Kaiseralle 25, Berlin, Wilmersdorf, Germany, and the secretary, P. J. S. Serrarens, Drift 12, Utrecht, Holland.

NUMERICAL STRENGTH OF THE FEDERATION OF CATHOLIC WORKERS OF CANADA

In 1932 the number of members in National Catholic unions in the Dominion was given at 25,000 comprised in 102 local syndicates and 7 study circles, the latter of which, according to an amendment to the constitution of the Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada passed at the 1926 convention, are also entitled to representation in the Federation, provided the delegate is also a member in good standing of an affiliated National Catholic union. In addition to the local bodies, the Catholic trade unionists have 5 trade federations, 7 central councils and 8 local federations, bodies similar in character to those operating under the auspices of the non-sectarian unions, and which are discussed in separate chapters of this report. The above mentioned delegate bodies are directly chartered by the Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada. Nearly all of the local syndicates are also identified with the Federation, either by direct affiliation or through their connection with trade federations or central councils. Reports received from 55 of the 110 local syndicates give a combined membership of 6,160.

During the year 1933, 6 National Catholic unions and 2 study circles were formed, while 7 unions ceased to function, making a total of 101 syndicates and 9 study circles, with a combined membership of 26,894.

The following list gives the name of every known national Catholic body, with such names and addresses of officers as were supplied, the post office addresses of the respective officers being the same as the heading under which they appear, unless otherwise indicated; the arrangement of the list is to first record the officers of the Federation of Catholic Workers and those of the four federations, the various unions, preceded by the central trades councils and the local trade federations, where they exist, being grouped according to their respective localities.

VIII. OTHER CANADIAN CENTRAL LABOUR BODIES

Important Group Composed of Canadian Labour Bodies—Seven Organizations Formed—Number of Canadian Central Organizations—Division by Groups.

Apart from the organizations which have been discussed in preceding chapters, there is another important group composed of Canadian labour bodies whose jurisdiction is confined exclusively to the Dominion. All of the organizations which were formed during the year are referred to under the organization with which they are affiliated—one an affiliate of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour and six affiliated with the Workers' Unity League of Canada.

With these changes the number of Canadian central organizations in this group stands at 34 which is 5 more than the number recorded in 1932. Four of the organizations mentioned are composed of employees in the service of the Dominion Government, and one comprises Provincial Government employees, the latter and one of the first-named being affiliates of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada. Beside the five associations of Government employees mentioned, there are a large number of other bodies of civil servants, but as no claim is made that they should be classed as trade unions, their names are not mentioned in this group. They are, however, given a place in a subsequent chapter entitled "Non-trade Union Associations". Ten Canadian Central organizations are affiliates of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour, three are connected with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, nine are identified with the Workers' Unity League of Canada and the remaining nine are not identified with any organization. A complete list of the organizations referred to will be found in Table 3, Chapter XVIII.

IX. FEDERATIONS OF TRADE UNIONS

Composition, Functions and Jurisdiction of Important Delegate Bodies, Including Provincial Federations of Labour, Building and Printing Trades Councils, Federations of Railway Shop Mechanics, and Municipal Employees—Division by Groups—List of Federations with Names and Addresses of Presidents and Secretaries.

In the plan of labour organization as developed on the North American continent the formation of federations is provided for with the object of co-ordinating the activities of closely allied trades. A number of these federations have been formed in Canada, the larger number of which comprise railway shop mechanics.

The affiliated branch unions, which are represented at the meeting of the respective federations by elected delegates, are required to pay a per capita tax for the upkeep of the federated organization with which they are identified. While the jurisdiction of most of these delegate bodies is confined to a particular locality, some of them include the shop mechanics on a railway system, others cover all organized workers in a whole province, and in three instances they are formed on a Dominion-wide basis, the latter being Division No. 4, Railway Employees' Department, A.F. of L., Canadian National System Federation No. 11 and C.P.R. System Federation No. 125, all of which embrace railway shop employees. While some of the federations meet annually, those of a local character meet more frequently.

Working under charter from the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, there are two provincial federations of labour, with jurisdiction covering their respective provinces. Membership in provincial federations include (1) trades and labour councils; (2) international and national local branch unions and (3) federal labour unions, bodies usually representing trades over which no existing central organizing union claims jurisdiction. Annual meetings are held at which legislative and other matters of concern to wage earners are considered. The legislative demands which have been adopted at the conventions are presented to the respective Provincial Governments by the executive officers who may be accompanied by representatives of affiliated local unions.

All of the building trades councils, except that in Niagara Falls are affiliates of the Building Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor, and as such have full autonomy over all matters affecting all organized workmen in their respective localities engaged in the building industry, when in conformity with the laws and decisions of the Building Trades Department. No local council is permitted to enter into any agreement with an association of employers unless such agreement has been submitted to and approved by the majority of the membership in a referendum vote.

Local allied printing trades councils are provided for in the agreement made between the five printing trades organizations (International Brotherhood of Bookbinders, International Printing Pressmen's Union, International Stereotypers and Electrotypers' Union, International Photo-Engravers' Union and the International Typographical Union) under date of March 7, 1911, and under which there was established the International Allied Printing Trades Association. In some of the Federations, the Amalgamated Lithographers of America is also included. Local councils may adopt rules for their governance provided they are in accord with the general laws of the Printing Trades Association, and are designed in part to be the agents through which the allied printing trades union label may be issued to printing firms conforming to the necessary conditions.

The most important delegate body in the railway employees' group is Division No. 4, which came into existence on February 27, 1918, and which is working under charter from the Railway Employees' Department of the American Federation of Labor. The purposes of the division are (1) To promote harmony and enhance the welfare of all railroad employees; (2) to aid in organizing all such workers and to consider and decide jurisdictional disputes; (3) to discourage piece work and to confer jointly in regard to schedules and to approve same before presentation to the railway officials; (4) to encourage railroad organizations to affiliate with the American Federation of Labor; (5) to further the interests of employees by means of legislation and to take such action as may be agreed upon to protect the interests of all concerned. The division also seeks (a) to bring all railway employees within the organization, (b) to shorten the hours of labour to eight per day; (c) to establish a minimum wage scale for all employees in all branches of railway service; (d) to bring about a national agreement on all railroads in Canada, which may if necessary be divided into sections, and (e) to prevent strikes and lockouts. Division No. 4 is the largest of the federations, having jurisdiction over the organized shop workers on all Canadian railway lines, including machinists, boilermakers, blacksmiths, carmen, electrical workers, sheet metal workers, etc. These workers are in the first place members of their respective local unions, and are brought together in a system federation covering the particular railway line on which they are employed. Delegates from the system federations and crafts make up the representation at the convention of the division, which meets biennially, although special sessions may be called. Included in the system federations affiliated with the department are those composed of the organized mechanics employed on the following railway lines: Canadian Pacific; Canadian National (including the Atlantic, Central and Western regions); Dominion Atlantic; Northern Alberta; Temiskaming & Northern Ontario and the Toronto, Hamilton & Buffalo. The employees of the Esquimalt & Nanaimo and the Kettle Valley Railways are under the jurisdiction of the Canadian Pacific System Federation. The functions of Division No. 4 include the making of wage schedules and the consideration of other matters pertaining to the working conditions of the various classes of employees represented. The executive board is composed of the general chairman, vice-chairman and the secretary-treasurer, with two representatives from each affiliated craft organization. It is the business of the system federations, of which there are six in Canada, to see that the wage schedules on their respective lines are properly administered and to handle all grievances, reporting to and receiving instructions from Division No. 4. Besides the system federations the department has received information concerning six local federated bodies of railway shop mechanics in the Dominion to which representatives are elected by the local branch unions affiliated, and their functions are somewhat similar to other delegate bodies of railway shop crafts.

The composition of the federations of employees of public authorities is in some instances more diversified than that of the others mentioned, their memberships including not only ordinary civic employees, but street railway and telephone employees, where such services are publicly owned. Besides the three local organizations, meeting at frequent intervals to deal with local conditions concerning the various trades making up the respective federations, there is one provincial body of such workers, viz., the British Columbia Federation of Civic and Municipal Employees, which is registered under the Societies' Act of the province, and is authorized to issue charters to local branch associations.

The Labour Educational Association of Western Ontario was formed in Woodstock in 1903 as a voluntary unaffiliated body. In 1907 the word "Western" was dropped from the name, the annual meetings of the organization having been attended by a number of delegates from eastern cities. The representatives at the annual conventions of the association include those from such recognized labour bodies in Ontario as contribute a prescribed annual fee, $1 being the minimum and $5 the maximum, according to membership. The functions of the Labour Educational Association having developed somewhat along lines similar to a provincial federation, the name of the organization is given a place in this section. Its object is to advance the principles of the labour movement and aid the work of organization through the dissemination of information, the holding of public meetings and lectures, the distribution of educational literature, etc. For some years it published the Industrial Banner.

There were no federations formed during the year. The National Building Trades League of Toronto is the only federation that has ceased to function and consequently it is dropped from the list.

At the close of 1933 there were 50 non-sectarian trade union federations, one less than the number recorded in 1932. (The names of the federations of the National Catholic unions are given in the list appearing in Chapter VII. The federations appearing in the appended list are divided into the following groups: Provincial federations, 2; building trades councils, 12; printing trades councils, 15; railway employees federations, 16; including the three regions of the C.N.R.; federations of employees of public authorities, 4; miscellaneous, 1. The list of federations, which are made up exclusively of local branch unions of international organizations, with names and addresses of the presidents and secretaries, is as follows:—

X. DISTRICT COUNCILS

Summary of the Objects, Jurisdiction and Functions of Delegate Bodies Representing Particular Trade Union Branches—Number of District Councils in the Dominion—Division by Trades—Names of Councils, with Names and Addresses of Presidents and Secretaries.

In addition to the delegate bodies whose names appear in the preceding chapter there are in the Dominion organizations known as "district councils" or "conference boards" composed of delegates from local branch unions of a particular trade. The chief function of these bodies is to consider trade and other matters deemed to be of like interest to the affiliated membership, and which it is believed can be dealt with in a conference of representatives having the opinions of their respective constituents more satisfactorily than by individual branches. The jurisdiction of the councils varies, being in some instances confined to a locality where two or more local branches of the same craft exist; in other instances including all local branches of a given trade within a stated area, and occasionally extending to a whole province or even to cover the same class of workers throughout the Dominion. To meet the expenses of these district bodies a per capita tax is levied on the branches in affiliation, each unit being entitled to a certain number of delegates. Where the councils are purely local, meetings are held at frequent intervals, but in the case of provincial and Dominion-wide bodies the meetings are held annually. Some of the more important functions of the district councils which have been established in the Dominion are here briefly indicated.

The one Canadian conference board of the Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers' International Union is chartered by the central organization, with power to make its own constitution and by-laws and to collect a per capita tax from the local branches which constitute it to meet the necessary operating expenses. Objects of this board include endeavours to establish and maintain a uniform work-day and rate of wages in the territory under its jurisdiction, which covers the province of Ontario; the regulation of apprentice laws; the procuring of favourable legislation for the craft; and the securing of information for its members regarding conditions of employment throughout the country.

Under the scheme of organization of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners provision is made for the establishment of district and provincial councils, the first-named being of a local character, meeting at short intervals, and the provincial bodies annually. These delegate organizations have power to frame working and trade rules in their respective localities; they must also provide for and hold trial of all violations of trade rules, and can enforce penalties, subject to an appeal to the general president of the brotherhood. The two councils of the Amalgamated Carpenters of Canada have been replaced during the past year by two of the Amalgamated Building Workers of Canada, the former organization having merged with the latter. These councils have similar functions to the district councils of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners.

The Ontario Council of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, which was formed in November, 1930, is designed to bring together semi-annually the men engaged in the electrical trade in the various cities for the purpose of discussing ways and means of improving conditions in the province. The aim is also to improve the standard and efficiency of the members of the council with a view to the consumer and public deriving the maximum benefit from the use of electrical energy.

Montreal District Council, No. 5, of the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers is chartered by the central organization, and comprises the local branches of the brotherhood operating in the city of Montreal. The objects of the council are the creation of harmony and unity between the local unions of the craft, the establishing of a minimum wage in the district, and the enforcement of a code of working rules governing hours, wages, etc. Council No. 5 has legislative and executive power on all matters relating to the common interest of the local unions in the district, including the ordering of strikes, subject to the sanction of the general executive board of the brotherhood. The revenue of the council is derived by a per capita tax on the local unions under its jurisdiction.

The Ontario Provincial Association of Journeymen Plumbers and Steamfitters was formerly known as the Ontario Pipe Trades Council, but in December, 1926, the present name was chosen and a charter for the organization was issued by the head office of the United Association of Plumbers, Gas Fitters, Steam Fitters and Steam Fitters' Helpers. This provincial association, whose membership is made up of plumbers employed in the building trade, seeks to improve organization among the craft and to secure better working conditions in the trade. In matters involving members or local branches in the province the association has power to make decisions. Special efforts are made to keep the members of the Ontario branches employed by prompt advice to each other of changes in local conditions and also by the transference of members from one city to the other for special large jobs.

The Provincial Conference of the Journeymen Stone Cutters' Association as chartered by the central body is designed to establish the minimum rate of pay and the maximum number of hours for all local branches in the district. This has full power to make laws to govern itself and to levy such assessments upon its members for financial support as it may deem necessary, so long as such laws do not conflict with the constitution and by-laws of the parent body.

District Council No. 30 of the International Brotherhood of Boilermakers and Iron Shipbuilders is chartered by the international body, the jurisdiction covering all Canadian lodges of the craft having members working on railroads which have their greatest mileage in Canada. The district council is represented in the international executive by an international vice-president, and has power to levy assessments on members in the jurisdiction in case of emergency. The council has its own by-laws and may call strikes, provided the approval of the international executive council has been secured, but may arbitrate and close strikes on its own volition.

The District Council of Montreal and Vicinity, of the International Association of Bridge, Structural, and Ornamental Iron Workers, was organized in June, 1929. The council acts as administrative board for all locals under its jurisdiction. There is no local constitution, but the council is governed by the general constitution of the International Association of Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Iron Workers.

The Ontario Provincial Council of the International Association of Machinists was established with the object of standardizing conditions in the machinist industry throughout the province. The expenses of the council are met by a per capita assessment on the affiliated local branches. Regular meetings are held annually at which wage schedules are prepared and other matters considered. District Lodge No. 2 of the International Association of Machinists has jurisdiction over all units embracing members of the organization employed on Canadian railways, subject, of course, to the general laws of the Grand Lodge. The proportion and methods of representation and the collection of revenue are determined by the members comprising the district. The lodge may levy assessments within its jurisdiction, provided the same have been approved by the affiliated members. The district is divided into seven sections in accord with the territory of the respective general managers of the main trunk roads as follows: No. 1, comprising the western lines of the C.P.R.; No. 2, the eastern lines of the C.P.R.; No. 3, the western region of the C.N.R.; No. 4, the central region of the C.N.R.; No. 5, the Atlantic region of the C.N.R.; No. 6, the T., H. & B. Railroad; No. 7, the T. & N. O. Railroad. The district is officered by a president and a secretary-treasurer, who, with the seven section chairmen, comprise the district executive board. District Lodges Nos. 46 and 82 are local bodies, composed of the lodges in the cities of Toronto and Montreal, respectively, and the surrounding districts. These district lodges deal with matters affecting the interests of the members of the association in the localities mentioned.

The conference Board of Ontario of the International Moulders' Union is chartered by the central organiaztion. The board makes its own laws, subject to the approval of the general president, and elects the business agent for the territory under its jurisdiction. The revenue is derived by a per capita tax on each local union affiliated with the Conference Board, the money being received through the international headquarters.

The Montreal and Toronto District Councils of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, have power to transact business pertaining to the welfare of the various local branches comprising their memberships, such as organizing label agitations and to prevent branches from striking without the consent of the council; also to endeavour to adjust all local differences before they are referred to headquarters. These councils, which are entitled to one delegate each to represent them at the general conventions, have authority, to investigate the financial standing of affiliated local branches, reports of same to be forwarded to the general executive board.

The International Fur Workers' Union has a joint board operating in Toronto, this body having power to adopt its own by-laws, provided there is no objection by its affiliates, and may assess the members of such affiliates to meet the expenses of the joint board.

The primary object of the joint boards of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, of which there are two, located respectively at Montreal and Toronto, is to call, conduct, and settle strikes and lockouts affecting the local branches under their jurisdiction. The decision of such boards in all disputes is binding upon the local unions.

The Headgear Workers' Central Bureau of Canada, which is made up of the Canadian branches of the United Hatters, Cap and Millinery Workers' International Union, supervises all activities of such branches, appoints organizers, and is in general responsible to the chief organization for all matters concerning the branches in the Dominion.

The joint council of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union has its own rules to govern its proceedings, and one of the stated objects of this body is that of promoting improvements in the conditions of employment of union shoe workers. It also carries on work to extend the recognition and use of all union labels, particularly the boot and shoe workers' union stamp, and in general to co-operate with the general office in carrying out the contracts and policies of the organization.

The conference boards of the International Typographical Union have their own by-laws. Among other matters which engage attention at the annual meetings are those having to do with the sanitary conditions of printing offices and the securing of legislation in the interests of the printing industry, as also to secure unanimity among the various branches on matters affecting the trade. The revenue is derived from a per capita tax on the affiliations, paid direct to the conference boards. The Northwestern Typographical Conference has jurisdiction over Oregon, Washington, Idaho and the province of British Columbia. The other conference board is composed entirely of Canadian branches of the International Typograpical Union.

The district councils of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees, which meet monthly are designed to promote the welfare of the brotherhood and to bring about a larger measure of co-operation between the local lodges in the respective districts, each lodge being entitled to representation.

There are three district councils composed of branches of the International Longshoremen's Association, only one of which, however, is composed entirely of Canadian units, viz., that at Saint John, N.B. This council may make rulings and decisions affecting local branches or members, but such are subject to the approval of the district branch, final decision being in the hands of the executive council of the international association. The Atlantic Coast District Council has jursdiction over the entire north Atlantic coast, including Canadian ports, in the territory named, and its constitution stipulates that one of the vice-presidents must be located in Canada. There is also a similar district body for the Pacific Coast, whose law requires that one of the vice-presidents be located in British Columbia. Among the functions of these councils is the investigation of the conduct of local branches and members under their jurisdiction. They also have power to inflict penalties and fines against local unions for violation of the rules of the association.

There are two district unions of the United Mine Workers in Canada, viz., District 26 with jurisdiction over the coal fields of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, and District 18 covering the coal mining areas in Alberta and Southeastern British Columbia, the affairs of the latter, however, being administered by provisional officers, the charter having been temporarily withdrawn. (Particulars of the suspension of the charter of District 18 were published in this report for 1925.) District unions of the United Mine Workers have power to adopt rules for their own governance, provided they do not conflict with the laws of the international union or joint agreements. The districts also have control over the locals affiliated, and have power to collect a per capita tax and to levy assessments on their own members, such assessments not to exceed $1 per month. The district unions are not permitted to engage in a strike involving all or a major portion of the members without the sanction of an international convention or the international executive board, but the unions may order local strikes within their own territory on their own responsibility; provided, however, that where such strikes are to be financed by the international union they must be sanctioned by the international executive board.

The Journeymen Barbers' Federation of Canada, composed of local branches of the Journeymen Barbers' International Union, was established at a meeting of the Journeymen Barbers' Federation of Ontario which was held in Hamilton in November, 1925. The Dominion body is designed to protect the members in legislative matters only, the economic side to be looked after by the local branches under the supervision of the international organization. The Journeymen Barbers' Federation of Ontario is an organization composed of local branches of the Journeymen Barbers' International Union in the province. The objects of the association are: (1) the education of the barbers by means of an exchange of ideas at annual conventions; (2) the advocacy of higher wages and shorter hours: (3) the universal closing of all barber shops on the Lord's Day; (4) provincial licence and examination as to qualifications of all barbers; also more adequate sanitary regulations for barber shops, and rigid enforcement of the law pertaining thereto.

There are two districts of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and Moving Picture Machine Operators, No. 11 with jurisdiction over the maritime provinces, Quebec and Ontario, and No. 12 for the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. These districts have power to enact laws for their own governance, so long as they do not conflict with the international constitution, after they have been approved by the affiliated units. Among the purposes of these district bodies is a standardization of working conditions and rates of pay and the securing of legislation for the better protection of those engaged in the theatrical trades.

The Inter-Provincial Association of Fire Fighters, covering the provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan, was organized on August 3, 1925. The objects of the association are: (1) To organize all permanent fire fighters in the provinces mentioned; (2) to foster the encouragement of a higher degree of skill and efficiency on the part of fire fighters; (3) the cultivation of friendship among the members; (4) proper remuneration for duty performed; (5) a pension law that will provide ample funds for those dependent upon pension; (6) to have legislation enacted where necessary to make the fire fighters' position more efficient and humane, and (7) the establishment of sick and death benefit funds. The British Columbia Association of the same class, which was organized on September 15, 1924, has similar objects to the Alberta-Saskatchewan body.

The Ontario Executive Board of the International Union of Operating Engineers was organized in Hamilton, Ont., in 1924, and is a legislative and advisory body whose actions are subject to the constitution of the parent organization. The board meets annually on the second Monday in January, but may be convened for special sessions.

There are two district councils of the International Brotherhood of Firemen and Oilers, both of which were formed in 1930. No. 7 has jurisdiction over the Canadian Pacific Railway lines east of Port Arthur and No. 8 over the same lines west from Fort William. The objects of these district councils are to centralize the work in the respective localities. The chairman of the district bodies handles any grievances which cannot be settled at the local point by meeting with the higher officials at the main centre and endeavouring to effect an adjustment.

During the year four delegate bodies passed out of existence, viz: United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, Western Canada Conference and the District Council of Winnipeg; International Association of Machinists, District Lodge No. 24, and the Montreal Joint Board of the International Fur Workers' Union.

In the accompanying list is recorded the names of 48 delegate bodies, four less than the number shown in 1932, divided by trades as follows: Carpenters, 8; clothing workers, including ladies' garment workers, cap makers and fur workers; 6; railway employees, 5; machinists, 4; longshoremen, 3; printers, mine workers, barbers, stage employees, fire fighters and firemen and oilers, 2 each; bricklayers, electrical workers, painters, plumbers, stone-cutters, boilermakers, bridge and iron workers, moulders, boot and shoe workers and operating engineers, 1 each. The list of district councils which follows is arranged in trade groups, and gives the names and addresses of the presidents and secretaries where supplied.

XI. RAILROAD BROTHERHOOD COMMITTEES

Delegate Bodies of Railway Employees' Organizations Whose Functions Include the Adjustment of Grievances of Members—List of Railways on Which They Have Been Established—Chief Officers of the Various Committees and Legislative Boards.

Besides the delegate bodies which have been discussed in the preceding chapters, there is another important group whose establishment is provided for in the structure of the several railroad employees' organizations, included in which are those bodies whose members are engaged in engine and train service. The delegate bodies of the railroad workers, which are composed of representatives from the local lodges of the respective organizations, include committees which are known as "adjustment", "grievance", "protective", "legislative", etc., the object of which were discussed in some detail in a previous issue of this report.

It may, however, be stated that the functions of the first three named committees include the consideration of matters affecting the conditions of employment of their members. Through the efforts of these bodies many adjustments of local complaints have been effected, and on occasions they have made satisfactory settlements of disputes involving the whole membership on a given railway system. Four of the railroad brotherhoods have established bodies known as legislative boards, which are designed to protect the interests of railway men in laws which may be proposed in connection with railroad operation and also in respect to decisions made by the Board of Railway Commissioners. Besides the separate provincial legislative boards of the brotherhoods there are joint legislative committees which have similar functions as regards their respective provinces, and which may co-operate with other organizations outside the running trades in securing uniformity of laws concerning labour. The four organizations whose members are engaged in engine and train service maintain legislative representatives in Ottawa, the other railroad employees' organizations sending, representatives to Ottawa to look after the welfare of their members when such a proceeding is considered necessary.

The list of delegate bodies for each railway employees' organization is given separately, the names of the railroads over which the respective committees have jurisdiction being arranged in alphabetical order. In each case the name and address of the chairman and secretary (where obtainable) are given:—

XII. TRADES AND LABOUR COUNCILS

City Central Delegate Bodies Established to be the Spokesman of Organized Labour on Public Questions—How Constituted and Financed—Number Operating in Canada—Trades Councils Under Dual Charters—Division by Provinces—Names and Addresses of Presidents and Secretaries.

In addition to the three groups of delegate bodies discussed in preceding chapters there are bodies known as trades and labour councils, one of the functions of which is to act as the mouthpiece of organized labour on public questions in the localities in which they are operating. Somewhat similar organizations chartered by the All-Canadian Congress of Labour are termed national labour councils and those identified with the National Catholic unions are called central councils. Trades and labour councils are designed chiefly to be the local medium of expression of opinion of organized labour on public affairs, and as such have often been given considerable prominence. These councils are usually formed in localities where a number of local branch unions are operating, delegates from the local units in a given city or district making up the representation. Trades and labour councils, referred to in this chapter are voluntary bodies, it not being compulsory for all local unions to affiliate, and it is therefore very seldom that all the unions in the locality join the council. As a result of efforts on the part of certain councils, many of the international organizations have urged the importance of their subordinate branches identifying themselves with the trades councils in their respective districts, while other international bodies are insisting on this being done. The local lodges of the railroad brotherhoods do not take much interest in trades and labour councils, affiliating in only very few instances. Trades councils have no power to issue charters to local branch unions which affiliate, but each branch is required to pay a per capita tax for the purpose of meeting the general expense. In certain localities in the past trades councils representative of the international trade union movement have endorsed the demands of certain affiliated bodies for improved working conditions, and not only have they given their moral support, but have been the agency through which appeals for funds to support strikes have been made, the amounts so collected being used mainly to augment the strike benefits allowed by the central organizations with which the local unions involved are connected. Some trades and labour councils, however, undertook to go further, usurping the functions of international organizations in issuing strike orders. To check this proceeding the American Federation of Labor, which has 804 councils under charter, some of which are located in Canada, in 1919 amended its constitution inhibiting trades councils which hold charters from the federation to order any local branch union affiliated to go on strike or to take a vote on the question of a strike until the proper authorities have agreed to such action. The Trades and Labour Congress of Canada at its 1920 convention took action to deal summarily with councils which violated the constitution of the congress or encouraged secession movements in the ranks of organized labour. The central councils operating under the auspices of the national Catholic unions are included in Chapter VII.

Fourteen of the councils in this chapter, operating respectively in Halifax, Moncton, Montreal, Quebec, Hamilton, Toronto, Windsor, Winnipeg, Regina, Saskatoon, Calgary, Edmonton, Prince Rupert and Vancouver, are connected with the All-Canadian Congress of Labour. Two labour councils, located in Fort William, Ont., and Winnipeg, Man. are chartered by the One Big Union. The remaining 36 councils are chartered by the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, seventeen of which also hold charters from the American Federation of Labor. Those under dual charters are located as follows: Belleville, Edmonton, Hamilton, Kingston, Kitchener, London, Montreal, Ottawa, Quebec, St. Catharines, Saint John, St. Thomas, Sudbury, Toronto, Vancouver, Windsor and Winnipeg.

During the year a National Labour Council was formed in Windsor, Ont., while Saint John National Labour Council ceased to function and was removed from the list. The South Waterloo District Trades and Labour Council and the Pine Falls Trades and Labour Council, also passed out of existence during 1933.

Twenty-five of the councils are located in Ontario cities, the remaining twenty-seven being divided between the other provinces as follows: Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia, 5 each; Quebec, 4; New Brunswick and Manitoba, 3 each, and Nova Scotia, 2.

The total number of trades councils included in this chapter is 52, two less than the number recorded in 1932. The fourteen labour councils chartered by the All-Canadian Congress of Labour are designated by the letters A.C.C.L. The list following gives the location of the trades and labour councils in the Dominion, arranged in provincial groups (those operating under dual charters being marked with an asterisk), with the names and addresses of the presidents and secretaries.

XIII. TRADE UNION LOCAL UNITS

The Basis of the Trade Union Movement—Source From Which Revenue is Derived—Number of Local Branch Unions in Each Group Operating in Canada—Numerical Standing of the Nine Provinces—Cities Having Not Less Than Twenty Local Branch Unions—List of Union Branches, With Names and Addresses of Presidents and Secretaries.

The fundamental part of the labour movement is that of the local branch unions, which are the basis of all the central organizations and delegate bodies which have been discussed in preceding chapters of this report, and are also the source from which most of the revenue is derived, in the form of per capita tax, to carry on trade union activities. Included in this chapter are the names and location of all branches of international and Canadian organizations, as well as of all independent units in the Dominion, exclusive of the National Catholic unions, whose names appear in a preceding chapter in which these unions are discussed. While in some instances local branch unions have been formed through the efforts of some trade unionists who have located in districts where no union of their specific crafts was operating, the majority of the trade unions in Canada have been established through the agency of representatives of labour organizations operating on the North American continent, and which include the Dominion in their respective jurisdictions. Local branch unions consist, as their names usually imply, of followers of a particular trade or calling, and their operations are mainly confined to a limited area, although in a few instances a much wider territory is allotted. Where two or more local branch unions of a particular craft hold charters from the same central body in the same locality, district councils are sometimes formed for the purpose of dealing with matters of general concern to the members of the organization. Federations are developed by local branches of certain closely allied trades, and trades and labour council are established in localities where the local branches are sufficiently numerous to maintain them. The finances necessary to support the work of the main organizations, as well as that of the several adjuncts in the scheme of organization, are, as above intimated, contributed by the local units, some of which are identified with each of the three classes of delegate bodies mentioned above.

The branches of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union of America are known as "system" divisions, which include the members employed on a certain class of work over a whole telegraph system. The Order of Railroad Telegraphers, besides having local lodges, have also "system" divisions, which cover the operators on a whole railroad system. In the present publication the names of the "system" divisions are printed under the heading of the locality in which the respective secretaries reside.

As for former reports, application was made to the secretaries of all central organizing bodies for lists of their local branches in Canada, as well as to the officers of local units of which the department had a record.

In all cases where the local officers failed to supply particulars on the first application a second request was made with the result that out of a total of 2,707 branches of all classes of unions in the Dominion, direct replies were received from 2,080.

Where particulars were not received from the local secretary, the names and addresses furnished by the general secretaries have been used. The information received in the Department indicates that at the close of the year 1933, there were 1,753 branch unions connected with 78 international craft organizations; the One Big Union and Industrial Workers of the World, two international industrial unions, which have Canadian affiliations, make 80 international organizations operating in the Dominion, the first named with 46 units and the I.W.W. with 8 branches, a grand total of 1,807 branches identified with international bodies. The Canadian central organizations have 748 local branches and the independent units number 42. In addition there are 110 National Catholic syndicates. These figures indicate, as previously mentioned, that there were in Canada at the close of the year 2,707 local branch unions of all classes of organizations operating in the Dominion, a loss of 18 for the year, with a total membership of 286,220.

The province of Ontario, as usual, occupied first place as to number of local branches of international organizations, having 721 of the total of 1,807; Quebec stands second with 273; British Columbia third with 179, and Alberta fourth with 178. The remaining five provinces rank as follows: Sackatchewan, 138; Manitoba, 133; Nova Scotia, 95; New Brunswick, 86. and Prince Edward Island, 4.

Ontario also stands first in the number of local branches of Canadian organizations, there being 289 in the province out of a total of 748; Alberta ranks second with 88; Quebec third with 87, and British Columbia fourth with 84. The standing of the other five provinces is as follows: Saskatchewan, 58; Nova Scotia, 55; Manitoba, 48; New Brunswick, 32; and Prince Edward Island, 7.

The four independent units of civic employees in Winnipeg are united in the Civic Employees' Federation, each unit having its own constitution and by-laws, the federation to which each unit sends three delegates and pays a per capita tax, being the executive of the consenting units. An independent unit whose name appears for the first time is the National Independent Longshoremen's Union of Montreal, Que. The six following independent units were dissolved during 1933: Bakery and Confectionery Workers' Union, Montreal, Que.; Grain Workers' Industrial Union, Port Arthur, Ont.; Granite Cutters' Union, Toronto, Ont.; Ideal Miners' Local Union, Wayne, Alta.; Mine Workers' Federal Labour Union, Lethbridge, Alta., and the Lumber Handlers' Association, Vancouver, B.C. The independent units now in existence number 42, a loss of 5, and are divided by provinces as follows: Quebec, 13, no change; British Columbia, 11, a loss of 1; Alberta, 6, a loss of 2; Manitoba, 5, no change; Ontario, 2, a loss of 2; Saskatchewan, 2, no change; Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island, 1 each, no change.

The United Clothing Workers' Union, Montreal, Que., an independent union referred to in the report for 1932, had, according to reliable information, ceased to function early in 1933, the majority of the members having identified themselves with other established unions.

The numerical standing of the nine provinces of the Dominion as to local branches of all classes of labour organizations, including the National Catholic, was as follows: Ontario, 1,014, a loss of 8; Quebec, 481, a loss of 3; British Columbia, 374, a gain of 1; Alberta, 272, a gain of 1; Saskatchewan, 198 a loss of 2; Manitoba, 186, a gain of 2; Nova Scotia, 151, a loss of 6; New Brunswick, 119, a loss of 2, and Prince Edward Island, 12, no change.

There were 28 cities in the Dominion having not less than 20 local branch unions of all classes, being one less than the number recorded in 1932, the city dropped being Kingston. Montreal as usual occupies first place with 198 (30 of which are National Catholic sydicates); Toronto ranks second with 158; Winnipeg stands third with 115; Vancouver being fourth with 106. The remaining 24 cities stand as follows: Edmonton, 75; Calgary, 72; Quebec, 64 (24 National Catholic syndicates); Ottawa, 59; Hamilton, 56; London, 51; Regina, 42; Saint John, 41; Victoria, 40; Saskatoon, 39; Halifax, 36; Sherbrooke, 32 (14 National Catholic syndicates); Port Arthur, Windsor and Moose Jaw, 31 each; Fort William, 30; Moncton, 27; Lethbridge, 26; St. Thomas, 25; Stratford, North Bay and Brandon, 24 each; Three Rivers, 23 (9 National Catholic syndicates); Brantford, 21.

During the interval between the dates at which reports were received from the central organizations and the preparation of this review some local branches have been established, their names are published under localities in which they were formed, and are marked with a asterisk (*).

The list here printed is arranged by provinces, proceeding from east to west, with cities and towns arranged in alphabetical order. Local unions under charters from the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada are designated by the letters T. and L. C. following the names; unions in Canada under charters direct from the American Federation of Labor have the letters A. F. of L. as an affix; branches of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour are denoted by the letters A.C.C.L., branches of the Workers' Unity League are indicated by the letters W. U. L., and the independent units are so described. When the information could be obtained, the names and addresses of the presidents and secretaries are given, the post office address of the respective officers being the same as the heading under which their names appear, unless otherwise specified.

XIV. BUSINESS AGENTS

Important Trade Union Office—Synopsis of the Duties—Method of Maintaining—Number Reported at the Close of the Year 1933—List of Localities and Trades Having Business Agents, With Their Names and Addresses.

An important position which has come into existence as a result of the growth of the trade union movement is that of the business agent, many of the better organized trades maintaining such an office. Matters formerly intrusted to committees, and frequently entailing a loss of time on the part of the members, are now as a rule referred to the business agent. The present duty of the business agent, who was at the inception of the position often preferred to as the "walking delegate" requires him, when permissible, to visit the various jobs on which members of his craft are employed to ascertain if all are in good standing with the organization, and to endeavour to secure applications for membership from all who are not members.

The agent is required to see that the fair wage clauses on governmental and municipal contracts (when there are such provisions) are observed, and where supposed violations are observed he is empowered to take the necessary steps to bring them to the attention of the proper authorities. Complaints concerning conditions of employment are referred by the employees to the business agent, it being his duty to adjust difficulties, provided the union considers them of sufficient importance to warrant such action being taken. An important feature of the business agent's duties is that of receiving applications for labour from employers and furnishing the men required so far as may be possible. Business agents are usually elected annually by the local branches concerned, their salaries being paid from local funds, either from the regular dues or by a weekly or monthly assessment, but in a few instances different methods prevail. In some localities, where a single union is not strong enough to maintain a business agent, two or more local unions of kindred trades sometimes combine to support such an official.

The following list contains the names of 157 business agents. When the position of business agent is combined with that of secretary, as it is in many cases, the name of the business agent is omitted from the list, but is published in the directory of secretaries of local unions.

The arrangement of the list printed below shows the localities, proceeding from east to west, in which business agents are at present maintained, together with the names of the trades, the business agents, and their addresses.

XV. REVOLUTIONARY LABOUR ORGANIZATIONS

Extracts From the Encyclopaedia of the Social Sciences Indicating the Nature and Operations of Organizations Connected With the Communist Movement—Third (Communist) International—Workers' Unity League of Canada—Membership—Chief Officers.

Information was given in previous issues of this report as to the Communist Party of Canada, the Canadian section of the Third (Communist) International, with headquarters in Russia at Moscow, and as to other organizations in Canada reported to be connected with the Communist movement, i.e., Canadian Labour Defence League; Young Communist League; Workers' Unity League of Canada; Farmers' Unity League, etc., each being a subsidiary or auxiliary organization for the promotion of the movement in a designated field.

The Encyclopaedia of the Social Sciences, compiled under the direction of a joint committee representing the American Economic Association and nine other learned societies, contains chapters on Communism and Communist parties. The following extracts indicate the nature and operations of the organizations connected with the communist movement:—

"Its (the term Communism) general use is to describe the practise of or belief in the desirability of the social control of economic life, including the social ownership of property. It is distinguished in a technical sense from socialism, which means the social ownership of productive goods, in that it generally includes ownership of some or all forms of consumers' goods as well. In addition to this historical and general meaning the term Communism in the years 1840-1872 came to imply revolutionary action for the violent overthrow of capitalist society. Socialism, on the other hand, was the term used to describe constitutional activities for the reform of the economic system in the direction of national control of the means of production. Between 1872 and 1917 the two terms were looked upon as synonymous, or rather the term Communism disappeared. With the rise to power in 1917 of Bolshevism in Russia the old distinction between the two terms was revived and sharply accentuated.

"Communist parties are the political organizations of the Communist movement and aim to realize the ideal of Communism by means of revolutionary action culminating in the dictatorship of the proletariat.

"Until the end of the war the Russian Communist Party was the only Communist party in the world. . . .

"The Russian Communists issued their invitation to an international conference in Moscow in March, 1919, which organized the Third or Communist International and which definitely inaugurated a Communist movement on an international scale, distinct from and in opposition to the Socialist movement.

"The Communist parties in the different countries are sections of the Third International. The relationship is not that of a federated association but of a united and centralized political combination.

"The supreme organ of the Third International is a world congress which meets at call. . . .

"Between congresses the Third International is governed by the E.C.C.I. (Executive Committee of the Communist International). The Communist parties of the different countries are arranged in groups and each group is allowed one or more delegates on this committee.

"(It) has the power to issue imperative instructions to its sections and to exercise control over their activities. It may annul or amend any decision adopted by the executive committee or by the national conference of any Communist party.

"In Spain, Italy, Hungary, the Balkans, Poland, China, Egypt, Latin America and in some of the colonies the communist parties are illegal or semi-illegal organizations and their work is carried on underground or in disguise, resembling in some ways the work of the Russian Bolsheviks under the Czar. They organize secret societies, have secret printing plants, publish leaflets and pamphlets illegally, maintain underground contacts with workers in factories and on the farms and prepare mass demonstrations and uprisings. In all countries where military institutions are strong the communists try to organize cells in the army and navy, while in the countries of Asia, Africa and Latin America they are active in organizing the extreme elements in the nationalist, agrarian and anti-imperialist movements.

"The Communist parties in all countries have a number of adjunct, allied and sympathetic organizations which they use either for special activities or for boring their way into the general economic and social institutions.

"The Communists in all countries have been especially active in their efforts to win over existing trade unions; . . .

"Where that is impossible they try. . . .to build up rival unions under their own leadership.

"Aside from the trade unions the Communist parties in the different countries have under their direction unemployed councils, communist youth leagues, children's leagues, Red sports societies, Red Front leagues and a number of other organizations. They are also connected with various farmers' and peasants' societies and with such organizations as workers' defence leagues and workers' relief societies. All these subsidiary and auxiliary organizations in the different countries are combined internationally and form respectively the organizations known as the Red International of Labour Unions, or the Profintern, a rival to the Amsterdam International Federation of Trade Unions, the International Peasants' Councils, the Communist Youth International, the International Children's Bureau, the Red Sports International, the International Workers' Relief, and the International Red Aid. All these international organizations work either directly under the control of the Communist International or in co-operation with it.

"The main task of the Communist parties is to watch developments in each country and to be ready, whenever a country reaches the breaking point, to step into the breach, seize power and establish a proletarian dictatorship. In view of the undermined condition of capitalism which characterizes the present stage of history, the social revolution may blaze up not only from a new war but also as a result of some large strike or some street demonstration, hunger riot, military revolt or colonial rebellion.

"Since 1921 Communist tactics have had a unifying feature in the advocacy of the 'United Front', United Front tactics consist in taking advantage of every economic or political situation in the daily life of a country for the purpose of putting forth concrete demands and slogans and for calling upon all workers to unite for attaining these demands."

THE THIRD INTERNATIONAL

The Third (Communist) International, a revolutionary political organization, was formed in Moscow, U.S.S.R., on March 6, 1919. In order to propagate its doctrine in the various labour organizations, the Communist International established in July, 1921, another body known as the Red International of Labour Unions. This organization proclaimed itself to be "an international which, together with the Communist International, will organize the working class for the overthrow of capitalism, the destruction of the bourgeois state and the setting up of the dictatorship of the proletariat; an international which will seize all the means of production and establish the communist commonwealth." The Canadian affiliate of the Communist International was the Communist Party of Canada (originally the Workers' Party), whose headquarters was in Toronto, and this organization recognized the Moscow body as the only real centre of world revolutionary activities. In 1931 the Communist Party of Canada was declared by an Ontario court to be an unlawful association. To assist in the propagation of the communist doctrine among Canadian youth, the Communist Party set up the Young Communist League, which later became an affiliate of the Young Communist International of Moscow, and for the younger children the party formed the Young Pioneers.

The original representative in North America of the Red International of Labour Unions is the Trade Union Unity League, originally known as the Trade Union Educational League. With the reorganization of this League in 1929 provision was made for the setting up of industrial unions on a dues-paying system, a plan altogether contrary to the original scheme of the organization. While the League "aggressively furthers the formation of new revoluntionary industrial unions in the industries where there are no unions and in industries where the existing unions are corrupt and impotent," it is proposed to organize the left wing in the old trade unions and fight for their revolutionization.

WORKERS' UNITY LEAGUE OF CANADA

In 1930 the Workers' Unity League of Canada was set up as the Canadian section of the Red International of Labour Unions for the purpose of organizing the Canadian workers into revolutionary industrial unions. The Workers Unity League of Canada, like the Trade Union Unity League, has not abandoned the practice of its predecessor—the Trade Union Educational League—of working within trade unions, the latest constitution providing for the organization of "militant rank and file groups in unions other than industrial unions affiliated to the W.U.L. of C.". During 1932 this affiliation is stated by the officials of the League to have terminated, but the amended constitution provides for fraternal relationship with the Red International of Labour Unions, the Minority Movement of Great Britain and the Trade Union Unity League of the U.S.A.

The constitution of the Workers' Unity League of Canada, which was adopted at a convention held in Toronto, September 7-12, 1933, while covering in detail the form of the organization, does not disclose its aims and objects.

AFFILIATES OF THE WORKERS' UNITY LEAGUE OF CANADA

In the Report for 1932, reference was made to three industrial unions in affiliation with the Workers' Unity League of Canada, viz., Industrial Union of Needle Trades Workers of Canada, the Mine Workers' Union of Canada, and the Lumber Workers' Industrial Union of Canada. During the year 1933, six additional central labour organizations, in affiliation with the League, were reported to have been formed, as follows: Furniture and Woodworkers' Industrial Union of Canada; Food Workers' Industrial Union of Canada; Railway Workers' Industrial League of Canada; Fishermen's and Cannery Workers' Industrial Union of Canada; Shoe and Leather Workers' Industrial Union; Cleaners and Dyers and Laundry Workers' Industrial Union of Canada. In addition to these nine central organizations, the League, according to the report of the secretary, had four district councils and twelve directly chartered local unions, as well as a considerable membership in isolated groups.

MEMBERSHIP OF THE WORKERS' UNITY LEAGUE OF CANADA

At the close of 1933 the memership reported by the Workers' Unity League of Canada for the affiliated organizations and the directly chartered unions was 21,253.

CHIEF OFFICERS

XVI. ORGANIZATIONS OF WORKERS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD

Trade Union Membership in Seventy-One Countries—Other Particulars Concerning the World Trade Union Movement—International Federation of Trade Unions—Meeting of General Council of I.F.T.U. at Zurich, Switzerland—Headquarters Moved to Paris, France—Trades and Labour Congress of Canada an Affiliate of the I.F.T.U.—Sixth Ordinary International Trade Union Congress—Membership—Affiliates and Their Membership—Chief Officers—Other International Organizations—Membership of Groups Comprising the British Trade Union Congress—Chief Officers of the Congress—Fifty-Third Annual Convention of the American Federation of Labor—Membership of the Federation—Affiliations—Officers—Fraternal Delegates—Secretaries of the Four Departments of the Federation.

As has been the custom, efforts were made to secure information as to the number of organized workers outside of Canada, but the latest figures were difficult to obtain. Where no report was received for 1933, the figures as published in the previous report are repeated. The total number of organized workers of all classes in the seventy-one countries whose names appear in the accompanying table is 46,825,757, the figures for Canada and the United States being as at the close of the year 1933. As has been mentioned in earlier issues of this report, in Great Britain, Canada and other British countries, as well as in the United States, there is a more clearly defined limitation to the scope of trade union organization than prevails in some of the European countries, where there are organized bodies which operate along political rather than industrial lines, and the membership of which is not confined strictly to wage-earners. With this exception, the figures for the various countries are given as follows:—

| Algeria | 11,500 | Italy | 3,662,000 |
| Argentine | 270,000 | Japan | 377,219 |

| India | 262,000 | Venezuela | 36,150 |
| Indo-China | 1,200 | Yugoslavia | 45,712 |
| Ireland | 146,361 | | |

The following table as taken from the Seventh Year Book of the International Federation of Trade Unions shows the trade union memberships of the various continents and their per centage share in the world trade union movement, for the years 1930, and 1931, the latest period for which particulars were received:—

| Tade Unions of | Membership on | | Percent. Share in World Trade Union Movement | |
| | 31-12-1930 | 21-12-1931 | 1930 | 1931 |
| Europe | 35,193,957 | 35,776,794 | 85·5 | 84·9 |
| America | 3,782,885 | 3,995,605 | 9·2 | 9·5 |
| Australasia | 48,934 | 319,000 | 0·1 | 0·8 |
| Asia | 2,101,560 | 1,952,920 | 5·1 | 4·6 |

The accompanying table shows the trade union membership of the world, as given in the preceding statement, classified according to the four chief groups, with the fifth group containing those for which no specific class was given:—

| Groups | Membership | | Percentual Share in the Total Movement | |
| | 1930 | 1931 | 1930 | 1931 |
| Free Trade Union | 17,985,477 | 18,223,382 | 43·7 | 43·3 |

INTERNATIONAL FEDERATION OF TRADE UNIONS

The International Federation of Trade Unions was originally formed at Berlin, Germany, in 1901. Regular conventions of the Federation were held but owing to the outbreak of the World War in 1914, the convention scheduled to be held in San Francisco, Calif., was cancelled. The American Federation of Labor, believing that it was incompatible with the then United States policy of neutrality to send per capita tax to Berlin, at that time the headquarters of the Federation, discontinued paying its contributions. Subsequent, efforts on the part of the trade union centres of Great Britain, United States and France to have the office of the International Federation transferred to a neutral country was without success. In July, 1919, following the close of the war there was convened in Amsterdam, Holland, a representative meeting at which delegates were present from eleven countries, including the United States. As a result of this meeting the affairs of the old international were closed out and a new federation formed, under its present title which was selected in 1913, the headquarters to be located in Amsterdam. The American Federation of Labor, though represented at the re-organization meeting, did not remain in affiliation, claiming that the rate of per capita tax charged by the Federation was too high, and also objecting to the issuance by the executive officers of declarations of policy with which the American Federation did not agree. At the convention which was convened in Stockholm, Sweden, July 1, 1931, it was decided to transfer the head office back to Berlin, Germany.

A meeting of the general council of the International Federation was convened at Zurich, Switzerland, on April 9, 1933, and at which it was unanimously decided to transfer immediately the seat of the international union to Paris, stating that "as it is no longer possible for the I.F.T.U. to carry on its work in Berlin with the freedom which is so absolutely necessary in the interest of the working class."

The Trades and Labour Congress of Canada is an affiliation with the International Federation, having been admitted to membership in June, 1920.

OBJECTS OF THE INTERNATIONAL FEDERATION

The objects of the International Federation of Trade Unions, as revised at the meeting in June, 1924, are as follows:—

(a) To bring about the unity of the international working-class by developing closer relations between the trade unions in all countries.
(b) The development of International Trade Secretariats accepting the International Federation of Trade Union's platform.
(c) To promote the interests and activities of the trade union movement, nationally and internationally.
(d) To carry on any activities of common interest to the trade unions.
(e) To promote the development of international social legislation.
(f) To promote workers' education.
(g) To avert war and combat reaction.

The methods by which the Federation seeks to achieve its object are:—

(b) Co-operation with other organizations, in so far as such co-operation appears useful in the interests of the trade union movement.
(c) Giving support to trade union activities in the affiliated countries, when requested by the national centres concerned.
(d) Giving support to trade union activities in countries not yet affiliated.
(e) Mediation in any cases of dispute within the trade union movement.
(f) The compilation of statistics.
(g) The collection and compilation of information concerning the trade union movement and social legislation.
(h) The issue of a periodical and other publications of interest to the trade union movement.
(i) The protection of the workers' interests in immigration and emigration.

SIXTH ORDINARY INTERNATIONAL TRADE UNION CONGRESS

The sixth ordinary International Trade Union Congress held at Brussels, Belgium, July 30-August 3, 1933, was attended by 123 delegates from affiliated national trade union centres in 18 countries, representing an aggregate membership of 8,963,677. The Congress was also attended by representatives of 24 International Trade Secretariats and from non-affiliated trade union centres in India, Japan, and Norway. The discussions of the Congress chiefly centred around the problem of a general boycott against German goods; relief for German refugees; fate of Mr. Leuschner, a member of the governing body of the International Labour Organization; action against war and for disarmament.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE FEDERATIONS

Among the organizations affiliated with the International Federation of Trade Unions are international trade federations of unions each of which comprises the members of a particular craft or class of labour. Twenty-eight out of the twenty-nine in existence are so affiliated. All of these federations have their headquarters in Europe, and include in their affiliations the trade unions of many countries, the combined membership in some instances reaching over the million mark. According to the latest information, nine of these international trade federations have in affiliation labour organizations which have local branches in Canada, their names and those of the affiliates with Canadian branches being: (1) International Federation of Radiotelegraphists, affiliate, Electrical Communication Workers of Canada; (2) International Clothing Workers' Federation, affiliates International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, Journeymen Tailors' Union, International Fur Workers' Union and the United Hatters, Cap and Millinery Workers' International Union; (3) International Miners' Federation, affiliate United Mine Workers of America; (4) International Transport Workers' Federation, affiliate the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees; (5) International Union of Federations of Workers in the Food and Drink Trades, affiliate Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union; (6) International Union of Woodworkers, affiliate the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America; (7) International Secretariat of Painters and Kindred Trades, affiliate Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America; (8) International Metal Workers' Federation, affiliate International Association of Machinists; (9) Postal International, affiliates Federated Association of Letter Carriers of Canada and the National Federation of Post Office Clerks of the United States. There is one international federation which has in affiliation an organization operating in the United States, but which has no branches in Canada, viz. the Universal Alliance of Diamond

Workers, affiliate Diamond Workers' Protective Union of America. All of the above-mentioned affiliates of the respective international trade federations, except the Electrical Communication Workers of Canada, the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees, and the Federated Association of Letter Carriers, are identified with the American Federation of Labor. The names of the remaining nineteen international trade secretariats are as follows: International Federation of Building Workers, International Federation of Bookbinders and Kindred Trades, International Typographical Secretariat, International Federation of General Factory Workers, International Union of Hairdressers, Intenational Federation of Glassworkers, International Union of Hotel, Restaurant and Bar Workers, International Landworkers' Federation, International Federation of Lithographers and Kindred Trades, International Federation of Workers in Public Services, International Federation of Commercial, Clerical and Technical Employees, International Secretariat of Stone Workers, International Secretariat of Tobacco Workers, International Federation of Textile Workers' Association, International Federation of Pottery Workers, International Federation of Teachers, International Federation of Boot and Shoe Operatives and Leather Workers, and the International Federation of Hatters.

MEMBERSHIP OF THE INTERNATIONAL FEDERATION

The International Federation of Trade Unions in 1904, the earliest year for which figures are available, comprised the national centres (chief labour organization of fourteen countries, with a combined membership of 2,372,975. In 1912 the affiliations increased to nineteen and the membership was 7,394,461. No further information as to numerical standing was published until the Amsterdam congress in July, 1919, when the affiliates numbered fourteen and the membership was given at 17,633,000; in 1921 there were 24 countries affiliated with a combined membership of 23,907,059; in 1922 there was the same number of affiliates, with an approximate membership of 22,000,000; from 1923 onward, although the affiliations indicated an increase, the membership showed a decline, the number of members in 1931 being 13,781,381, comprised in 27 national centres. The information for 1932 indicated 29 national centres identified with the federation, but no particulars were received as to the membership.

The accompanying table shows the 28 national centres in affiliation with the I.F.T.U., together with the membership of each, the total being 9,092,260.

CHIEF OFFICERS OF THE FEDERATION

OTHER INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS

There are certain organizations of socialist and labour parties in various countries throughout the world having for their objects the improvement of social and labour conditions through political action. The original organization of this kind and from which present organizations have developed was the International Workingmen's Association, known as the First International, founded in 1864 and dissolved in 1876. There are six main international organizations as follows: International Federation of Trade Unions, Paris, France (referred to previously); Christian (Roman Catholic) concentrated in the Christian International of Utrecht (referred to in Chapter VII, National Catholic Unions); Communist, concentrated in the Red International of Labour Unions of Moscow; Anarchist, concentrated in the International Working Men's Association, Madrid (formerly Berlin); Independent, concentrated in the International Federation of Neutral Trade Unions, Utrecht, and the trade union of the two Americas' concentrated in the Pan-American Federation of Labor, at Washington, D.C.

MEMBERSHIP OF GROUPS COMPRISING BRITISH TRADES UNION CONGRESS

According to the reports submitted to the 65th annual meeting of the British Trades Union Congress held at Brighton, England, September 4-8, 1933, the paid-up membership was 3,367,911, a decrease of 245,362 as compared with the membership in 1932, when the figures were 3,613,273. The representative of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada at the meeting of the British Congress was Mr. Humphrey Mitchell, M.P., of the International Union of Operating Engineers. The membership of the Congress is divided into 17 trade groups, each of which has representation on the general council according to its numerical standing, as follows: Mining and quarrying, 528,191; railways, 391,623; transportation (other than railways, 472,166; shipbuilding, 57,644; engineering, founding and vehicle building, 298,717; iron and steel and minor metal trades, 92,067; building, woodworking and furnishing, 299,828; printing and paper, 152,396; cotton, 244,935; textiles (other than cotton), 113,193; clothing, 70,199; leather and boot and shoe, 91,089; glass, pottery, chemicals, food, etc., 225,297; agriculture, 30,000; public employees, 28,323; non-manual workers, 50,085; general workers, 222,148. The glass, pottery, chemical, food, etc., group shows an increase of 3,185, and the printing and paper group an increase of 810. The agricultural group remains unchanged with 30,000 members; all of the other groups show a decrease, the heaviest loss being recorded by mining and quarrying, whose membership declined by 102,155, followed by the railway group with a decrease of 26,740. Other groups with considerable losses were: Building, 22,895; Engineering, 21,151; cotton, 20,389; general workers, 19,691, and textiles, 13,437.

The chief officers of the Congress are: Chairman, Andrew Conley; vice-chairman, A. G. Walkden; general secretary, Walter M. Citrine, Smith Square, London, S.W. 1, England.

As stated in previous reports in this series, for some years there were in Canada branches of organizations with headquarters in the United Kingdom affiliated with the British Trades Union Congress. The connection of the last of these was severed in 1925 when the Canadian locals of the Amalgamated Society of Carpenters and Joiners were granted complete self-government, becoming the Amalgamated Carpenters of Canada, which organization is now merged with the Amalgamated Building Workers of Canada.

AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR

The 53rd annual convention of the American Federation of Labor which was held at Washington, D.C., October 2-13, 1933, was attended by 596 delegates, the representation being divided as follows: 250 delegates represented 97 national and international organizations, while 4 departments, 34 state federations, 255 city central bodies (trades and labour councils), and 49 local trade and federal labour unions were represented by one delegate each. Of the three fraternal delegates present, one was from the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada and two from the British Trades Union Congress.

MEMBERSHIP OF THE FEDERATION

In 1881 when the American Federation of Labor was formed, the membership was less than 5,000. In 1913 it stood at 1,996,004. At the 1933 convention the secretary reported that the average paid-up reported membership at the close of the fiscal year, August 31, 1933, was 2,126,796, a decrease of 405,465 as compared with the number reported in 1932. The average paid-up membership for the past 20 years was as follows:—

| | | | |
| 1913 | 1,996,004 | 1924 | 2,865,979 |
| 1914 | 2,020,671 | 1925 | 2,877,297 |
| 1915 | 1,946,347 | 1926 | 2,803,966 |
| 1916 | 2,072,702 | 1927 | 2,812,407 |
| 1918 | 2,726,478 | 1929 | 2,933,545 |
| 1920 | 4,078,740 | 1931 | 2,889,550 |

In reporting on the membership of the Federation the secretary states that the "national and international organizations are required to pay the per capita tax upon their full paid-up membership, and therefore, the membership does not include all the members who were unemployed during the fiscal year. A survey of the membership of the national and international organizations and unions directly affiliated with the A.F. of L., indicates that the decrease in membership is due almost entirely to the unemployment of members of national and international unions and directly affiliated local unions."

The total affiliations at the end of the fiscal year included 108 national and international organizations representing 29,315 local branches and 673 local trade and federal labour unions, making in all 29,988 branches. Four trade departments, 49 state federations and 804 city central bodies are also under charters from the federation. The local branches which constitute the national and international organizations are the source from which nearly all funds are secured to carry on every activity in the labour movement; the local branches also constitute the state federations, city central bodies and local department councils. There were 710 of the last-named, the charters for which were derived from the federation departments.

XVII. REGISTRATION OF TRADE UNIONS AND UNION LABELS

Trade Unions Act Passed in 1872—List of Registered Trade Unions—Professional Syndicates Act—List of Unions Registered Under This Act—Registration of Union Labels Under the Trade Mark and Design Act.

In 1872 the Trade Unions Act was passed by the Parliament of Canada. This was brought about as a result of a strike of printers in Toronto and other cities to secure a nine-hour working day, a number of union members having been arrested on a charge of conspiracy in restraint of trade. Previous to 1872 the organization and activities of trade unions encountered difficulties as being in restraint of trade under English law still in force in some of the Canadian provinces. The act declared the purpose of a trade union not to be unlawful so as to render any person liable to prosecution merely on the ground that they were in restraint of trade. The Act also permitted the registration of unions in the office of the Secretary of State, such union thereby securing legal status in certain respects. The Criminal Law Amendment Act enacted during the same session contained provisions as to picketing, intimidation, etc. The present law on the subjects is found in the Criminal Code, Sections 496-502, Chapter 36. The provision in the Trade Unions Act as to criminal conspiracy is also now included in the Criminal Code. The province of Quebec, Manitoba and British Columbia also have legislation regarding trade unions.

Reference has been made in previous issues of this report to the adoption by the Dominion Parliament of amendments to the Trade Mark and Design Act to permit the registration of trade union labels.

REGISTERED TRADE UNIONS

Up to the close of 1933 the number of trade unions registered under this Act was 42, of which 33 have either dissolved or amalgamated with other unions. The following list gives the names of the existing registered unions, which include six central organizations, two National Catholic unions, and one local branch of an international organization, and indicates the date of registration:—

*L'Union Nationale des Ouvriers de la Rive Sud, March 29, 1918.
Brotherhood of Express Employees, April 27, 1918 (formerly Brotherhood of Dominion Express Employees).
Vancouver and District Waterfront Workers' Association, February 4, 1924.
Mine Workers' Union of Canada, March 19, 1926.

Association Catholique Ouvriere de Salaberry de Valleyfield, November 22, 1933.

PROFESSIONAL SYNDICATES ACT

The Quebec Legislature in 1924 passed the Professional Syndicates Act, under which statute, after the performance of certain formalities, a union is constituted a corporation enjoying civil rights, and which inter alia, authorizes the registered unions to "enter into contracts of agreements with all other syndicates, societies, undertakings of persons respecting the attainments of their objects, and particulars such as relate to the collective conditions of labour." Up to the close of 1932 seven delegate bodies and fifty-three local syndicates had been registered under the Act, and during 1933 one association was registered, making a total of sixty-one registrations. The full list of existing National Catholic bodies which have registered under the Professional Syndicates Act, in order of registration, is as follows, the last one being the 1933 registration:—

XVIII. STATISTICS OF TRADE UNIONISTS IN CANADA

Source of Statistical Information—International Craft Unions show a slight loss in Membership in Canada but a large gain in the United States—Standing of Some of the Largest Organizations in the Dominion—Canadian Bodies show a gain in locals and Membership—Independent Units and National Catholic Unions also show an increase—Grand Total of Trade Unionists in Canada—Reported Female Membership—Standing of Canadian Labour Bodies as compared with 1932—Trade Union Branches by Provinces —Trade Union Organizations with Chief Officers and Branches by Locality—Affiliation of Local Units with Federations, District Councils and Trades and Labour Councils—Trade Union Membership by Localities.

The information, from which the statistics as to numerical strength of the various central labour organizations and their affiliations have been prepared, was in the main furnished early in 1934 by officials of the unions, the figures supplied giving the standing at the close of 1933. Application was made by the department to every known central international and Canadian organization, and in most instances the information solicited was promptly supplied, very few failing to furnish any particulars. The figures recorded for the organizations which did not report, or only sent in partial information, have been secured from departmental records and other reliable sources, and in such cases where the figures for 1932 are repeated, they are printed in italics.

In table 1, giving the number of local unions and membership of international organizations in Canada, the figures have been arranged to show, respectively, (1) the number of branches, and (2) the membership of each organization in Canada and elsewhere. Defining the term "elsewhere" it may be mentioned that several internationals have local branches in countries other than the United States and Canada. Among these are the following: (1) The American Federation of Labor and the Brotherhood of Painters and Decorators, with branches in the Philippine Islands and Panama; (2) the International Brotherhood of Blacksmiths, Drop Forgers and Helpers, the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen and Helpers, and the United Association of Plumbers and Gas Fitters all have branches in the Panama Canal Zone; (3) the Cigarmakers' International Union and the Leather Workers' International Union, with branches in the Philippine Islands; (4) the Order of Railway Conductors, with a division in Mexico; (5) the International Seamen's Union, the Operative Plasterers' International Association, and the American Federation of Musicians, with branches in the Hawaiian Islands; (6) the International Typographical Union with branches in Newfoundland, the Hawaiian and Philippine Islands; (7) the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, with branches in Newfoundland, the Hawaiian and Philippine Islands and Panama; (8) the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers with branches in Panama and Newfoundland; (9) the International Association of Machinists, with branches in Panama, the Hawaiian and Philippine Islands; (10) the Journeymen Tailors' Union, the International Brotherhood of Paper Makers, the International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers, the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union, the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union, the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen and the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, with branches in Newfoundland.

The name of the Sheep Shearers' Union of North America is omitted from the accompanying table, having failed to make a return, while the last return showed only six members in Canada. The International Seamen's Union of America re-established a local branch in the Dominion and is therefore included in the accompanying list. With these changes, the number of international craft organizations operating in Canada is 78, which with the two industrial unions known as the One Big Union and the Industrial Workers of the World, make a total of 80 organizations with locals and members in the Dominion, the same number as recorded in 1932.

The figures in the accompanying table show that there were in Canada at the close of the year 1,753 local branches of what are classified as international craft organizations, a loss of 60 as compared with the year 1932. The One Big Union reported 46 local units, a loss of 1, and the Industrial Workers of the World reported 8 branches, the same as in the previous year. The total number of branches in Canada of all classes of international organizations is 1,807, a loss of 61. The reported membership and that secured from other reliable sources gives the international craft organization a total of 140,801, a loss of 8,328. The One Big Union reported 23,300 members, a loss of 40. The Industrial Workers of the World reported a Canadian membership of 3,618, the same as in the previous year. A computation of the figures indicates that the aggregate of members in the Dominion at the close of 1933, identified with the organizations whose names appear in the accompanying table was 167,719, a loss of 8,368. In 1932, the number of branches of international organizations was 1,868, with a combined membership of 176,087, a loss of 39,858. In 1931, the number of branches in Canada of international unions was 1,884, with a combined membership of 188,219, a decrease of 15,259 as compared with the membership of 1930. The largest membership in Canada of international organizations was recorded in 1920, when it stood at 267,247, comprised in 2,455 local branches.

The 78 international craft organizations, whose names appear in the appended table represent 28,811 branches under their respective jurisdictions, with a combined membership of 3,138,984. The One Big Union and the Industrial Workers of the World combined have 92 local branches with a reported membership of 55,331, making a grand total of 28,903 branches represented by the 80 organizations and an aggregate membership of 3,194,315. Only eight of the 80 international organizations having branches or members in Canada are not in affiliation with the American Federation of Labor, and between them they have 3,631 subordinate branches, with a combined membership of 330,741, of which 417 branches with 50,789 members are located in the Dominion. Of the remaining 2,863,574 members, comprised in 25,272 branches identified with the 72 international craft organizations affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, including the federal and trade unions of the Federation itself 116,930 belong to 1,390 Canadian branches. The total paid-up membership as at August 31, 1933 (end of fiscal year) of the American Federation of Labor with its 108 affiliated national and international organizations and directly chartered local unions was reported to be 2,126,846, but the secretary stated that "national and international organizations are required to pay the per capita tax upon fully paid-up membership, and therefore, the membership does not include all the members who were unemployed during the fiscal year."

The membership of the 340 local trade and federal labour unions chartered during the months of July and August in the fiscal year ending, August 31, 1933, is not shown in the total membership of the A. F. of L., but will be included in next year's total.

An analysis of the returns received from the officials of the organizations, whose names appear in the accompanying table, showed that 43 made gains, 33 had losses, and 4 had no change in their standing. The 1932 report showed 68 had losses, 8 made gains and 4 were unchanged. The Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employees heads the list as to Canadian membership of international craft organizations, having 13,867 comprised in 197 local branches, a loss of 1,445 members and 1 local branch. The Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen occupies second place, with a gain of 2,333 members but a loss of three locals, now having 12,898 of a membership comprised in 90 local branches. Ranking third is the United Mine Workers of America, with 42 branches, a gain of 4, and 10,950 members, an increase of 1,600. The Brotherhood of Railway Carmen, although having lost 1,052 members in Canada stands fourth with 6,691 members, comprised in 114 branches, a loss of 1. Fifth place is taken by the Order of Railroad Telegraphers, which reported 6,959, a gain of 2,959, comprising 6 system and 7 local divisions, the same number as recorded in 1932, followed by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America which reported 6,500 members, a gain of 1,500, in 15 branches, no change. Other international craft organizations with 5,000 or more members are: (1) Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway, Bus and Coach Employees of America, 6,000, a loss of 2,846; (2) International Association of Machinists, 5,920, a loss of 633; (3) United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, 5,916, a loss of 3,116.

In Table IA is recorded the number of local branches and membership of the Canadian organizations. At the close of 1933, the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, the greater part of whose membership is drawn from the international organizations, had 49 local unions under direct charters, an increase of 3, with a combined membership of 5,328, a gain of 516. The All-Canadian Congress of Labour, whose membership is comprised in Canadian bodies had 39 local unions under direct charters, a loss of 2 with a combined membership of 3,120, a loss of 953, as compared with 1932.

The Workers' Unity League, the membership of which is also comprised in Canadian bodies, had 12 local unions directly chartered, the membership, as reported from their headquarters, being 2,147. The remaining organizations in the Canadian section have between them 648 branches, making in all 748 subordinate local branch unions which are not affiliated with international organizations. The combined membership of the Canadian group at the close of 1933, according to information furnished by the various organizations or obtained from other reliable sources, stood at 76,062. These figures indicate that there were 47 more branch unions, with an increase in membership of 9,069 as compared with the figures recorded for 1932.

Besides the local branches affiliated with either the international or Canadian organizations there were 42 independent trade unions in the Dominion, a loss of five, the membership of 41 being 15,545, which compared with the membership recorded for 47 independent local units in 1932, shows an increase of 49.

The membership of the National Catholic unions as reported by the general secretary of the Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada is 26,894, an increase of 1,894 as compared with the membership in 1932, comprised in 110 local bodies, 9 of which are designated as study circles, a gain of 1.

The information furnished the department by the officers of labour organizations and that secured from other reliable sources indicates that there were in Canada at the close of the year 2,707 local branch unions of all classes, a decrease of 18, divided as follows: international, 1,807; Canadian, 748; National Catholic, 110; independent units, 42; with a combined membership of 286,220, apportioned among the various groups as follows: international, 167,719; Canadian, 76,062; National Catholic, 26,894; independent, 15,545. Subdividing the international group it will be found that the craft unions in Canada number 1,753, with a combined membership of 140,801; that the One Big Union has 46 units with 23,300 members and the Industrial Workers of the World, 8 branches with 3,618 members.

As in earlier reports, the Department has endeavoured to secure information as to what proportion of trade union membership is made up of female workers. These particulars are difficult to obtain, as many of the organizations do not keep separate records of male and female members. Of the 80 international organizations whose names appear in the appended table only 10 furnished the desired information, the total number of female members reported in their respective jurisdictions (outside of Canada), in which they have a combined membership of 3,026,596, being only 13,458. This female membership is known to be far short of the actual number of women workers indentified with organized labour, there being many other organizations besides those reporting which admit female members, but, as stated above, keep no separate records of male and female members and consequently made no report. The Canadian female membership of trade unions at the close of 1933, as reported by the local branch unions of all classes in the Dominion, was 5,047, divided as follows: Quebec, 1,697; Ontario, 1,381; British Columbia, 801; Alberta, 488; Manitoba, 453; Saskatchewan, 118; New Brunswick, 61; Nova Scotia, 31; localities not specified, 17.

The National Women's Trade Union League, which has the endorsation of the American Federation of Labor and the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada is a body designed to assist in the organization of women workers. The league, which has head offices in Washington, D.C., does not issue charters to trade unions of women, its efforts being directed towards encouraging the female workers to enter the existing labour organizations. The platform of the league embraces (1) organization of workers into trade unions, (2) equal pay for equal work, (3) eight-hour day and 44-hour week, (4) an American standard of living, (5) full citizenship for women, (6) the outlawry of war, and (7) closer affiliation of women workers of all countries. Miss Rose Schneiderman is the president and Miss Elizabeth Christman is secretary, their office being located in the Machinists' Building, Ninth St. and Mt. Vernon Place, N.W., Washington, D.C.

(b) Includes only the unions directly chartered, i.e., those unions not affiliated through any international organization. The American Federation of Labor at the close of the fiscal year August 31, 1933, had 108 national and international unions affiliated, representing 29,315 locals, as well as four departments, 49 state federations, 804 city central bodies and 673 local trade and federal labour unions, making a total of 1,638 charters, representing a fully paid-up membership of 2,126,796. Because of unemployment there were thousands of members for whom no per capita tax was paid by the affiliated unions, and who, therefore, are not included in the number of members reported.

(e) Indicates that although suspended from membership in the A. F. of L., the Canadian membership is still affiliated with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada.

*Indicates that union is affiliated with American Federation of Labor.

Indicate that union has also affiliated its Canadian membership with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada.

CANADIAN CENTRAL BODIES

The table following gives the reported membership of the Canadian Central labour bodies, included in which is the name of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, the bulk of whose membership, as previously pointed out, is drawn from international organizations, the standing of which has already been taken into account. The Congress, besides the affiliated membership of 61 international and 3 Canadian organizations, has 49 directly chartered unions, an increase of 3. The membership of the unions in direct affiliation which is recorded in the accompanying table, and not counted elsewhere, is 5,328, an increase of 516. The total membership of the Congress at the close of its fiscal year was reported at 105,546, a decrease of 16,583, comprised in 1,512 local branch unions.

The All-Canadian Congress of Labour has in affiliation the ten central bodies marked thus (†) in the accompanying table. The merging of the Amalgamated Carpenters of Canada, the Bridge, Structural, Ornamental, Re-informed Iron Workers, Pile Drivers and Riggers' Union of Canada and the National Union of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of Canada with the Amalgamated Building Workers of Canada accounts for the dropping from the list of these three organizations. Two other organizations affiliated with the Congress during the year, viz., Canadian Amalgamated Association of Seamen and the Canadian Bushmen's Union. These ten organizations, together with the One Big Union (referred to in Table I) and the 39 directly chartered unions, give the All-Canadian Congress of Labour a combined membership of 55,118, a gain of 4,762, comprised in 388 local unions, a loss of 14.

The Workers' Unity League of Canada has in affiliation the nine organizations marked thus (‡) in the appended table. During the year the following bodies have been organized and together with the Lumber Workers, Mine Workers, and Needle Trades Workers, reported in previous years, constitute the central organizations in affiliation with the League: Cleaners, Dyers and Laundry Workers' Industrial Union of Canada; Fishermen and Cannery Workers Industrial Union of Canada; Food Workers' Industrial Union of Canada; Furniture and Wood Workers' Industrial Union of Canada; Railway Workers' Industrial League of Canada; Shoe and Leather Workers' Industrial Union. In addition to these nine central organizations the League has 12 directly chartered unions and together they have a combined membership of 21,353, comprised in 99 local unions. The League claims an additional membership of 10,000 made up of small groups in other organized unions.

The Amalgamated Building Workers of Canada reported 31 local branches, a gain of 28, and 8,383 members, an increase of 7,960, which as previously explained is made up in part at least by the merging of the four organizations into one.

The Amalgamated Civil Servants of Canada, which has the largest following of the four organizations embracing employees of the Dominion Government whose names appear in the trade union group, has 42 local branches, a gain of 3, with a combined membership of 4,172, a loss of 263. The United Postal Employees of Canada is second in the group, having 33 local branches, a decrease of 3, with a membership of 1,472, a loss of 728. The Federated Association of Letter Carriers stands third in this group of organizations of Dominion Government employees, having 53 branches, a gain of 5, with a membership of 1,301, a loss of 96. The Dominion Railway Mail Clerks' Federation reported the same number of branches, viz., 16, with 902 members, a loss of 32.

The Amalgamated Mine Workers of Nova Scotia, which was formed in 1932, has 19 local branches, a loss of 2, with a combined membership of 5,363, a decrease of 2,438.

The Brotherhood of Express Employees has 27 branches, the same as in 1932, and the membership numbers 1,324, no change.

The Canadian Association of Railway Enginemen increased its local divisions by 6, now having 71, with a membership of 2,857, an increase of 487.

The Canadian Amalgamated Association of Seamen has now 1,200 members, a loss of 52, with 1 local union, the first to be formed by this organization.

The Canadian Association of Stationary Engineers reported 15 branches, a loss of 1, with 594 members, a gain of 194.

The Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees reported a membership of 13,392, a loss of 2,038, comprised in 171 local divisions, a decrease of 23.

The Canadian Bushmen's Union, a new organization to be formed during the year, is as its name implies, made up of men in the lumbering industry. At the close of the year the membership of 500 was comprised in one central body.

The Canadian Carpet Weavers' Beneficial Association, while retaining its 5 local branches, shows a loss of 12 in members, now having 140.

The Canadian Electrical Trades Union has 6 branches, 2 less than reported in 1932, with a loss in membership of 373, now having 550.

The Canadian Printers' Union reported a gain in membership of 49, now having 122, comprised in one general body.

The Civil Service Association of Alberta reported 10 branches, 2 less than in 1932, with 850 members, no change.

Cleaners, Dyers and Laundry Workers' Industrial Union of Canada, an organization formed during 1933, is reported to have 2 local unions and a membership of 396.

The Electrical Communication Workers of Canada consists of one division, with eastern, western and British Columbia sections, as well as 4 radio units, 2 marine and 2 shore, and a mixed unit, the membership reported being 200, a loss of 11.

The Fishermen and Cannery Workers' Industrial Union of Canada was formed during 1933 and has 600 members in one main organization.

The Food Workers' Industrial Union, another organization to be formed during 1933, has 1,070 members, comprised in 4 local branches.

Furniture and Woodworkers' Industrial Union of Canada was formed in 1933 and at the close of the year was reported to have 10 local branches and a membership of 2,010.

The Industrial Union of Needle Trades Workers, whose membership is comprised in 5 local branches, had a membership of 3,250, an increase of 750 over that reported for 1931, no report having been supplied for 1932.

The Lumber Workers' Industrial Union of Canada reported 33 branches, a gain of 3, with a membership of 7,500, a gain of 500.

The Mine Workers' Union of Canada lost a branch, leaving the number of local branches at 14, with a membership of 3,000, the same as in 1932.

The National Association of Marine Engineers showed a loss of 1 branch, now having 15 local lodges and 800 members, a decrease of 286.

The Native Brotherhood of British Columbia has 11 local branches, a gain of 3, with a combined membership of 500, an increase of 20.

The Provincial Federation of Ontario Fire Fighters retains its 32 affiliated branches with a membership of 1,832, but as 6 of the branches are also affiliates of the International Association of Fire Fighters, whose membership has been taken into account in table No. 1, only the membership of the 26 branches not under dual charters is recorded in the accompanying table, which indicates the same number of branches as in 1932, and with the same membership, 726.

The Railway Workers' Industrial League of Canada is another organization formed in 1933, with 16 local branches and a reported membership of 780.

The Saskatchewan Brotherhood of Steam and Operating Engineers has now only 1 branch, a loss of 1, with a decrease in membership of 15, now having 13.

The Shoe and Leather Workers' Industrial Union was also formed in 1933, with a reported membership of 600, comprised in 3 local branches.

The Vancouver and District Waterfront Workers' Association, which has only 1 branch, reports a membership of 900, an increase of 270.

The gain in the number of local branches of Canadian central organizations for the year 1933 was 47, now having a total of 748, and an increase in members of 9,069, making a total of 76,062. In 1932 the increases were 28 branches and 9,825 in members.

(a) Includes only the local branch unions under direct charters at the close of 1933. Besides these there are in affiliation the three Central Canadian bodies marked () with 78 branches and 2,951 members, and also two provincial federations of labour and 36 trades and labour councils. Per capita tax was also paid during the year by a number of local branches of international unions which had affiliated individually, as well as by sixty-one international organizations which had affiliated the whole of their Canadian membership, numbering 109,725, comprising 1,364 local branches. The whole directly chartered and affiliated paid-up membership of the Congress was reported at 105,546.

(b) Includes only the local unions under direct charters. In addition to these the All-Canadian Congress had in affiliation the 10 central bodies indicated thus (†), with 303 branches, and a combined membership of 28,698, as well as the One Big Union, with 47 branches and 23,640 members (one branch and 340 members being in the United States), and 14 trades and labour councils. The total membership of the All-Canadian Congress was reported at 55,118.

(c) Includes only the local branches directly chartered. In addition to these, the Workers' Unity League had in affiliation the 9 central bodies marked thus (‡), with 87 branches and a combined membership of 19,206. The total membership of the Workers' Unity League was reported at 21,353.

(d) The Federation of Ontario Fire Fighters also had in affiliation the six local branches of the International Association of Fire Fighters located respectively at Fort William, Hamilton, London, North Bay, Ottawa, and Toronto, making a total of 32 affiliates and a membership of 1,832.

TRADE UNION BRANCHES BY PROVINCES

The accompanying tables indicate the number of subordinate branches of the international and Canadian organizations located in the various provinces of the Dominion. The names of the different bodies are arranged, for the purpose of comparison, in the same order as they appear in Table No. 1 and No. 1A.

There were 1,807 branches of international organizations, including those of the two international industrial unions, in existence in the Dominion at the close of 1933, a decrease of 61 as compared with the number recorded in 1932. By provinces the local branches, according to numerical standing, are divided as follows: Ontario, 721, a loss of 36; Quebec, 273, a loss of 4; British Columbia, 179, a loss of 7; Alberta, 178, a loss of 4; Saskatchewan, 138, a loss of 2; Manitoba, 133, a loss of 5; Nova Scotia, 95, a loss of 4; New Brunswick, 86, a gain of 1; Prince Edward Island, 4, no change.

In table No. 2A, giving the standing of the Canadian organizations, the names of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, the All-Canadian Congress of Labour and the Workers' Unity League of Canada are included, the figures printed being only for their directly chartered branches, and which are not elsewhere taken into account. The local branches recorded for the Provincial Federation of Ontario Fire Fighters include only those which are chartered direct and which are not connected with any other organization. The number of branches of Canadian organizations at the close of 1933 was 748, an increase of 47 over 1932, divided by provinces as follows: Ontario, 289, an increase of 28; Quebec, 87, an increase of 2; Alberta, 88, an increase of 7; British Columbia, 84, an increase of 9; Saskatchewan, 58, a loss of 1; Nova Scotia, 55, a loss of 2; Manitoba, 48, an increase of 7; New Brunswick, 32, a loss of 3; Prince Edward Island, 7, no change.

FEDERATION OF TRADE UNIONS

The table following contains the name of every known federation of trade union branches in the Dominion, together with the number of affiliations and combined membership. The figures given in the table do not in any way affect the number of local branch unions or the total trade union membership of the Dominion, all of the local branch unions and membership having been included in the statements which appear in preceding sections.

The Alberta Federation of Labour reported 121 affiliations, the same as in 1932, with a combined membership of 7,136, no change. The New Brunswick Federation of Labour shows a gain of 314 in membership, now having 3,500, comprised in 41 local branches, a loss of 2.

Of the reporting councils in the building trades group, the Montreal body stands first with 17 affiliates, the same number as reported in 1932, with a membership of 9,500. Toronto council stands second with a membership of 4,500, the same as reported for the previous year, comprised in 23 local branches, a gain of 1. Winnipeg council ranks third with a membership of 3,000, comprised in 12 local branches, no change in either membership or affiliates. In fourth place is the Vancouver council, having 14 local branches, a loss of 4, and a membership of 1,214, a decrease of 660. Hamilton council has 10 affiliated unions, a loss of 1, and a combined membership of 1,100, a loss of 400.

In the group of allied printing councils, the two Toronto councils come first each having 8 local branches, no change from the previous year, and a membership of 3,000. This is a gain of 1,600 for the Toronto Joint Board and 899 of an increase for the Allied Printing Trades Council. Montreal Federation of Printing and Kindred Trades is next with 1,300 members, a loss of 300, comprised in 7 local unions, same as reported in 1932.

Division No. 4, Railway Employees Department, which is under charter from the Railway Employees' Department of the American Federation of Labor is the most important of the railway federations, and is composed of the internationally organized shop mechanics and car department employees of all Canadian railway lines. The department has in affiliation local branch unions of 10 international organizations and several railway system federations, and comprises a total membership of 34,857, a decrease of 1,167 members as compared with the number reported in 1932. The strongest system federation whose members are in the employ of a single railway company is the Canadian Pacific Railway System Federation, No. 125, which is also composed of the shop mechanics in affiliation with 9 international organizations comprising such workers, the total reported membership being 11,060, a gain of 20 as compared with the figures for 1932. Occupying third position is C.N.R. System Federation No. 11, which is sub-divided into Atlantic, Central and Western regions, and has the local branch unions of 7 international bodies in affiliation, the combined membership being 11,000, a gain of 137 as compared with the previous year. The strongest numerically of the local system federations is that comprising mechanics in the C.P.R. shops Montreal, which has 10 local unions in affiliation, a loss of 2, with 4,500 members, an increase of 1,500; next is the federation in Winnipeg with 7 local unions affiliated, a decrease of 2, with 712 members, a loss of 595. The third largest is the local federation in Calgary, comprising shop mechanics employed in the C.P.R. shops, and which has 7 affiliates, a loss of 1, with a membership of 450, a decrease of 70.

The federation of employees of public authorities which reported the strongest following is the Vancouver Civic Employees' Federation, with 4 affiliates, same as reported the previous year, with a membership of 1,600, an increase of 200. Standing second is the Edmonton federation, with a loss of 2 affiliates, now having 5, and a membership of 600, a decrease of 50. Calgary federation is third, with a membership of 453, a loss of 2, comprised in 11 affiliates, same number as recorded in 1932.

The Labour Educational Association of Ontario, whose name appears in the miscellaneous section, permits representation to those bodies which contribute a prescribed fee, irrespective of their numerical standing, and reports 101 affiliates with a membership of 4,144.

Of the 12 delegate bodies of National Catholic unions published in this section, one more than was recorded in 1932, 6 failed to make returns. The Federation of Catholic Building Trades Council has the largest membership of those which reported, having 26 affiliates with 10,908 members. Next is the Quebec Building Trades Council with 7 affiliates and 920 members, a decrease of 530. The Federation of Catholic Printing Trades Unions stands third, having 10 unions in affiliation, a gain of 1, with a membership of 537, a loss of 113. In fourth place is the Montreal Printing Trades Council with 4 affiliated unions and a membership of 360, a loss of 10.

The statement appended indicates that there were at the close of the year 50 federations composed of non-sectarian unions, 1 less than in 1932, divided by groups as follows: Provincial federations, 2; building trades councils, 12, printing trades councils, 15; railway employees' federations, 16; federations of employees of public authorities, 4; miscellaneous, 1.

The federations of national Catholic unions are divided as follows: Building, 7; printing, 2; boot and shoe workers, 2; pulp and paper, 1.

DISTRICT COUNCILS

The appended statement has been prepared with a view to indicate the extent to which branch unions of particular trades federate for conference and co-operation in trade and other matters. Although some of the councils have only a few affiliates, they comprise all the branches and members in their respective jurisdictions.

The Ontario Conference Board of the Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers' International Union has in affiliation the 30 branches of the organization located in the province, 1 less than the number reported in 1932, with a combined reported membership of 3,000, an increase of 1,094.

The Toronto District Management Committee of the Amalgamated Building Workers of Canada, which has replaced the same committee of the Amalgamated Carpenters, owing to the fact that the latter organization merged with the former, mention of which has been made previously, had 11 affiliates and a combined membership of 2,500. The Vancouver District Management Committee of the same organization had 559 members comprised in 3 local branches.

There are two provincial and four district councils of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, 2 less that the number recorded in 1932. The Quebec Provincial Council reported 15 branches of the Brotherhood in the province in affiliation, a loss of 1, with a combined reported membership of 1,300, a loss of 1,000.

The Ontario Provincial Council claims 36 branches in the province in affiliation, 4 more than in 1932, with a combined membership of 2,465, a loss of 402.

The jurisdiction of the four district councils is generally confined to a particular city, but in some instances extends to adjacent localities. The Montreal Council reported the largest following of the district bodies, having 7 affiliates, one less than recorded in 1932, with a membership of 1,185, a decrease of 115. In second place stands the Vancouver-New Westminster council with three affiliates, 1 less than recorded in 1932, with 513 members, a loss of 501.

The Ontario Provincial Council of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers reported that it was inactive during the year.

District council No. 5 of the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers, which comprises the 5 branches of the organization in the city of Montreal reported a membership of 530.

The Ontario Provincial Association of the United Association of Plumbers, Gas and Steam Fitters lost 2 affiliates, now having 9, with a membership of 1,200, a loss of 200.

The Alberta Provincial Conference of the Journeymen Stonecutters' Association has 3 affiliates, same as in 1932 but the membership has decreased by 8, now being 30.

District council No. 30 of the Brotherhood of Boilermakers, which has jurisdiction over lodges of the craft whose members are employed on railroads which have their greatest mileage in Canada, has 32 affiliated lodges, no change, and shows an increase in members of 2, now having 1,737.

The Montreal District Council of the International Association of Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Iron Workers reported a membership of 123, a decrease of 177, comprised in 2 local unions, the same number as recorded in 1932.

There are one provincial council and three district lodges of the International Association of Machinists in Canada. The provincial body, which has jurisdiction over Ontario, has 38 affiliates, a gain of 2, with a membership of 3,500. Of the district lodges, No. 2, which includes in its membership all local lodges of the association whose members are employed in Canadian railroad shops, reported 59 affiliated lodges, the same as in 1932, with a combined membership of 5,320, a gain of 320. The district lodge which stands second as to membership is No. 82 of Montreal, which reported 4 affiliates, 1 more than in 1932, with 1,336 members, a loss of 464.

The Conference Board of Ontario of the International Moulders' Union reported 19 affiliated branches, the same as in 1932, with a membership of 500, a decrease of 50.

The Montreal Joint Board of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, failed to report its membership or the number of its affiliates. The Toronto Board of this organization reported the same number of affiliates, viz. 7, but showed an increase of 45 in membership now having 1,720.

There are two joint boards of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, located respectively in Montreal and Toronto, that in the last named city having 5 affiliates, the same as in 1932, with a membership of 1,800, a gain of 625. The Montreal board lost 500 members, now having 1,000 comprised in 4 affiliated branches, a loss of 1.

The International Fur Workers' Union has a joint board in Toronto, having 4 affiliates, with 750 members, a decrease of 16 in membership.

The Headgear Workers' Central Bureau of Canada, a delegate body of the United Hatters, Cap and Millinery Workers' International Union has 2 Canadian branches in affiliation, 1 less than in 1932, with a combined membership of 200, a decrease of 250.

There is one council of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union, that for the province of Ontario. This body, though in a dormant condition, has not dissolved, and it is understood that it is to be revived, as soon as conditions in the trade warrant.

In the printing trades group, the Ontario and Quebec Conference of the International Typographical Union, the only delegate body of printers composed entirely of Canadian branches, reported 18 affiliates, no change, and the membership was reported at 2,050, a gain of 50. The Northwestern Conference contains members from British Columbia, but its jurisdiction also includes the States of Washington, Idaho and Oregon, and it has 51 affiliates with 4,500 members, a gain of 1,280.

There are six district councils of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees, the one with the largest following being that in Toronto, a new council formed during the year, with 6 affiliated local divisions and a membership of 950. The Winnipeg Council stands second with 8 affiliates and a membership of 750. In third place is the Halifax council with 7 affiliates and 442 members.

The only entirely Canadian district council of the International Longshoremen's Association is that embracing the 4 local branches in Saint John and vicinity, and which reported 1,590 members, an increase of 263 as compared with 1932. The largest district council of the longshoremen is that with jurisdiction over the entire North Atlantic coast, including Canadian ports, and numbers among its affiliates local branches in both Canada and the United States; the affiliations reported were 275 with a membership of 35,000. The Pacific Coast District, which includes British Columbia, failed to report.

District 26 of the United Mine Workers, with jurisdiction over the coal fields of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, has now 25 affiliations, the same number as in 1932, with a membership of 7,000, a gain of 1,000. The report from the provincial officers handling U.M.W. affairs in what is known as District 18 during the suspension of the district union, shows that 17 local unions are identified with the U.M.W. in that territory, 4 more than in 1932, the combined membership of which was reported at 3,950, a gain of 600.

There are two delegate bodies of the Journeymen Barbers' International Union—the Dominion Federation and the Ontario Federation—the last mentioned having 14 affiliates, a loss of 7, with 700 members, a decrease of 800; the Dominion Federation has 31 affiliates, a gain of 7, with 1,550 members, a loss of 1,426.

There are now two districts of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees. District No. 11, with jurisdiction over the provinces of Quebec and Ontario, reported 24 affiliates, the same as in 1932, the membership being 800, a loss of 20. No. 12, with jurisdiction over the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, failed to make any report.

Of the two delegate bodies made up of affiliates of the International Association of Fire Fighters, that operating in the province of British Columbia has 4 affiliates, and 470 members, a decrease of 5, while that for Alberta-Saskatchewan has 5 affiliates, with 600 members, a gain of 400. The affiliates for both bodies being the same as recorded for 1932.

The Ontario Executive Board of the International Union of Operating Engineers reported 17 affiliates, a gain of 1, but the membership was not supplied. There are two district councils of the International Brotherhood of Firemen and Oilers; No. 7 reported 16 affiliates, the same as in 1932, and 763 members, an increase of 13; No. 8 reported a membership of 8, a loss of 1, but did not state the number of affiliates.

There are 48 district councils in this group, 4 less than recorded for 1932, divided by trades as follows: Carpenters, 8; clothing workers, including ladies' garment workers, cap makers, and fur workers, 6; railway employees, 5; machinists, 4; longshoremen, 3; mine workers, printers, barbers, fire fighters, firemen and oilers, and theatrical stage employees, 2 each; bricklayers, electricians, painters, plumbers, stone cutters, boilermakers, bridge and structural iron workers, moulders, boot and shoe workers, and operating engineers, 1 each.

The table following gives, for comparative purposes, the affilates and membership of the respective councils for both 1932 and 1933.

TRADES AND LABOUR COUNCILS

The composition and functions of trades and labour councils have been discussed in a preceding chapter. The purpose of this statement is to show the extent to which these bodies represent the organized workers in the localities where they have been established. In some instances trades and labour councils have jurisdiction over a number of adjacent localities, but in the main they are confined to a particular city or town. Fourteen of the councils are operating under charters from the All-Canadian Congress of Labour, and are designated by the word "national" and the affix "A.C.C.L." Two labour councils are chartered by the One Big Union, and are shown with the affix "O.B.U.", while six are identified with the national Catholic unions. The remaining 36 councils are made up of delegates from local branches of international organizations and such Canadian bodies as are in harmony with the international trade union movement, and are operating under charters derived from the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada. Seventeen of the latter councils are also chartered by the American Federation of Labor, a proceeding to which the Canadian body does not object. The number of unions given for each locality includes the branches of all classes of organizations named in the report.

There are two trades and labour councils in the Province of Nova Scotia, both being located in Halifax, one of which represents the international trade union movement, being chartered by the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, and has in affiliation 17 local unions out of 36 in the district, representing a membership of 3,732; the other council is under charter from the All-Canadian Congress, and has 8 of the unions in affiliation, with a membership of 485.

Of the three councils in New Brunswick, two in Moncton and one in Saint John, the one representing the international labour movement in the first named city is the most representative, having 13 of the 27 local unions in the locality as affiliates, with a membership of 1,900; the Saint John council of the same class being second with 19 affiliates out of 41 unions in the city, with a membership of 2,470. The council of the All-Canadian Congress in Moncton has 6 affiliates with 475 members.

The Saint John council of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour passed out of existence during the year.

The Montreal council of the Trades and Labour Congress ranks first in the province of Quebec, having 83 of the 198 unions in the city in affiliation, with a membership of 43,900. The council operating under the auspices of the All-Canadian Congress has 17 affiliates, with a membership of 6,761. The Quebec and Levis council of the international movement has in affiliation 24 of the 71 local unions in the locality with a membership of 3,600. The national council reports 14 affiliates, and a membership of 700.

Of the 25 councils in Ontario, that in Toronto representing the international organizations stands first, having 70 of the 160 unions in affiliation with a membership of 25,000; the national council of the All-Canadian Congress has 15 affiliates with 6,000 members. Hamilton council representing the international trade unions is second with 42 of the 56 eligible unions, with a membership of 6,000. The national council in Hamilton failed to report. Ottawa council ranks third with 30 of the 70 local unions in the district in affiliation with a membership of 2,500. London Trades and Labour Council stands fourth with 26 unions affiliated out of 51, with a membership of 2,000. Essex County Trades and Labour Council comes next with 27 affiliated unions out of 34 in the district, and represents 1,900 organized workers. St. Thomas Council follows with 10 affiliated unions out of 25 in the city, and represents 1,500 organized workers. Windsor National Labour Council (A.C.C.L.) has been added to the list while South Waterloo District Trades and Labour Council has been dropped having passed out of existence.

There are 3 trades councils in Manitoba, the Winnipeg council representing the international labour movement having 24 of the 115 unions in the locality in affiliation, with a membership of 2,500. The council operating under the auspices of the All-Canadian Congress reported 4 affiliates with 3,500 members. The O.B.U. has a council at Winnipeg, but it failed to make any return. The Pine Falls council failed to report and has been removed from the list.

Of the five councils in Saskatchewan, three represent the internationally organized workers, the one with the largest following being the Saskatoon council, which has 13 affiliated unions out of 39 in the locality, with a membership of 1,428. Moose Jaw council representing the internationals is second with 22 affiliates out of 31 in the city and represents 818 members, while Regina council of the same class reported 16 affiliates out of 42 unions in the locality but failed to show membership. Of the two national councils of the All-Canadian Congress, Regina stands first with 4 affiliates and 230 members, while Saskatoon council has 4 affiliates with 125 members.

There are five councils in Alberta, three of which represent the international trade union movement, the most representative being that in Edmonton, which reported 46 unions in affiliation out of 75 in the locality, with 3,500 members. Calgary council representing the international movement has 1,208 members in 18 affiliated unions out of 72 in the locality. The larger of the two national councils of the All-Canadian Congress is in Edmonton, which has 12 affiliates, with 1,290 members.

There are also five councils in British Columbia, the largest of which is the Vancouver-New Westminster and District body, which represents the international movement, and has in affiliation 65 out of the 126 unions in the locality, with a membership of 8,000, the national council for the same district being second with 24 affiliates, with a membership of 6,940. Victoria council representing the international unions is third with 19 affiliated unions out of 40 in the locality, with a membership of 850.

Of the six central councils of the national Catholic unions, that in Quebec reporting 24 affiliated syndicates out of 71 in the locality, with a membership of 6,200, is the largest. The second reporting council is that in Chicoutimi, which has 10 unions reported in affiliation, with a membership of 1,300.

The names of the councils operating under dual charters are preceded by an asterisk, the reports published being for both 1932 and 1933, and show (1) the number of branch unions in affiliation, (2) members represented, and (3) total branch unions operating in the locality.

TRADE UNION MEMBERSHIP BY LOCALITIES

In this section is given the name of every locality in the Dominion in which exist one or more branches of the various classes of trade unions operating in Canada. Two tables are presented herewith, showing (1) the localities which have local branches of international unions (including the O.B.U., and I.W.W.), Canadian and independent units; and (2) the localities in which National Catholic unions are operating. The names of cities, towns, etc., are arranged alphabetically, and in order of provinces, proceeding from east to west. The number of branches reporting membership and the membership reported are also shown in this statement.

There are 2,707 trade union branches of all classes in Canada, 1,753 of which are affiliates of international craft organizations, 46 are units of the One Big Union, 8 are identified with the Industrial Workers of the World, 748 are branches of Canadian bodies, 42 are independent units and 110 are National Catholic unions. Fifty-five of the last named unions supplied information as to membership and similar particulars were received from 2,025 branches of the five other classes of organizations operating in the Dominion, making 2,080 reporting unions, representing appoximately 77 per cent of the total, although reports were received from 21 fewer unions than reported in 1932.

The membership reported from the head offices of all organizations with branches or members in Canada, or which has been secured from other sources, totals 286,220 comprised, as above stated, in 2,707 branches. The membership reported by the 2,080 local branches is 181,401, or an average of approximately 87 for each reporting branch. The remaining membership of 104,819 divided among the 627 non-reporting branches gives an appoximate average of 167 members. The membership of the system divisions of telegraphers cannot be recorded in any particular locality, and is therefore included under localities not specified. The 2,025 reporting branches of the non-sectarian bodies, i.e., those classed as international, Canadian and independent units, show a membership of 175,241, an average of close to 87; the total membership of 572 non-reporting branches is 84,085, an average of approximately 147. The 55 reporting national Catholic unions out of a total of 110 gives a membership of 6,160, an average of 112, the remaining membership of 20,734 divided among the 55 non-reporting unions indicates the high average of 377.

Where a local union has a large membership, or where a skilled craft is higly organized reports of numerical strength are invariably supplied. There are instances, however, where officers are not permitted to supply any information concerning the organization without first obtaining the sanction of the members, and this permission, it is known, has at times been refused, it being considered that the publication of such information might be injurious to their interests. The apathy of the local officers is very often responsible for the failure to furnish particulars, but for the present report the response to requests for membership was fairly generous, the reporting unions, as above mentioned, representing about 77 per cent of the total.

There are 14 branch unions in the Dominion which reported a membership of 1,000 or over, the same number as recorded in 1932, ten of which are connected with international craft organizations, one is identified with a Canadian body, and three are independent units.

The union reporting the largest membership is the Syndicated Longshoremen of Montreal, an independent unit which has 2,699 members.

Of the other local branch unions, whose jurisdiction is confined to a particular city, the Amalgamated Steel Workers of Nova Scotia, located at Sydney, has the largest following with 2,061 members; next comes Toronto branch No. 113 of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway, Bus and Coach Employees of America, which reported 2,000 members; it is followed by Montreal branch No. 790 of the same organization, with 1,821 members. The other branches, in order, are: Musicians local No. 149, Toronto, with 1,520 members; Montreal unit of the Industrial Union of Needle Trades Workers, with 1,400 members; Amalgamated Clothing Workers' local No. 209, Montreal, with 1,200; Springhill local No. 4514, United Mine Workers of America, with 1,200 members; local No. 101, Vancouver, of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway, Bus and Coach Employees of America with 1,141 members; Typographical Union No. 91, Toronto, with 1,090 members, and the Fishermen's Benevolent Society local (Independent), Steveston, with 1,025 members. Three of the system divisions of the Order of Railroad Telegraphers, whose members are stationed over a wide territory, reported large memberships, the strongest being System Division No. 7, covering the Canadian Pacific Railway, with 2,370 members; System Division No. 1 with jurisdiction over the Canadian National Railways (former G.T.R. System), has 2,343 members, and System Division No. 43, with jurisdiction over the Canadian National Railways, Western Lines, has 1,250 members.

TRADE UNION MEMBERSHIP IN CANADIAN CITIES

The appended table shows the names of 28 cities having not less than 20 trade union branches of all classes, and gives (1) number in each locality, (2) number of unions reporting membership, and (3) number of members reported.

| Localities | Number of Unions in locality | Number of Unions reporting membership | Number of Members reported | Localities | Number of Unions in locality | Number of Unions reporting membership | Number of Members reported |

The 28 cities enumerated in the above list with 1,501 branches, represent 55 per cent of local branches of all classes operating in Canada. Their 1,121 reporting branches represent approximately 54 per cent of all reporting branches, and they also contain about 42 per cent of the entire trade union membership in the Dominion. In 1932, there were 29 cities with not less than 20 branches each and between them they represented approximately 55 per cent of the branches of all classes and contained over 44 per cent of all union members in Canada.

TRADE UNION BRANCHES BY PROVINCES

The following table shows the number of local branches of international and Canadian organizations, independent units and National Catholic unions in each province, together with the number that reported their membership and the number of members reported:—

XIX. TRADE UNION BENEFITS

Payments for Benefits Made by Eight Canadian Central Labour Organizations and by Fifty-nine International Unions With Branches in Canada—Canadian Group Has an Increase—International Shows a Decrease—Largest Expenditures Are for Death Benefits—Large Disbursements Made by Four Railroad Brotherhoods—International Benefits in Detail—Amount Paid by Canadian Branch Unions to Their Own Members.

An important feature of labour organization is the provisions made by the majority of the trade unions for the payment of various classes of benefits, huge sums being expended annually, more especially by the railroad brotherhoods and some of the older international craft organizations. Of the 34 Canadian central labour bodies, 8 reported disbursements for benefits in 1933—five paid death benefits; strike benefits were paid by three; sick benefits by one, and other benefits by one. The total amount disbursed was reported at $75,034, an increase of $37,161.27 as compared with the reported disbursements of eleven organizations in 1932. The table following gives the names of the Canadian central bodies reporting payments for benefits, as well as the amount spent for the classes of benefits indicated.

Of the 80 international unions with branches or members in Canada, 59 reported from headquarters as to expenditures for benefits to their members. No report as to payments for benefits were supplied by the two industrial unions. The expenditures are for a one year period, and while in some instances are for the fiscal year of the respective organizations, are in the main for the calendar year 1933. Of the 59 organizations whose names appear in the accompanying table, death benefits were paid by 53, unemployed and travelling by 7, strike by 30, sick and accident by 15, and old age pensions by 8, viz.: Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers' International Union; International Association of Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Iron Workers; International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers; International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union; International Union of Quarry Workers; Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen; Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway, Bus and Coach Employees of America, and the International Typographical Union, the remaining amounts recorded in the column being for other purposes.

Some of the remaining 21 organizations having Canadian affiliations have benefit features, the administration of which in some instances is under the control of the local branches. This is mainly accounted for by the fact that many local unions existed independently prior to their affiliation with the international "central" and some of these "locals" provided for death, sick, and other benefits, for which a fund had been created. In this manner the benefit features have often become identified with the local branches, and their jurisdiction has been recognized. In other instances there is a division of control, sick benefits being administered by local branches, while death, strike, and pension funds are governed by the international body. Returns as to benefits furnished by the international organizations are for the whole membership. It is in rare cases that separate reports are received as to disbursements made by international organizations to their Canadian members, the general officers stating that to prepare such a statement would entail more work than they are in a position to undertake.

As in earlier reports in this series, the Department has endeavoured to ascertain what benefits in addition to those disbursed by the central organizations were paid during 1933, to their own members from the funds under the immediate control of the various Canadian branches of international organizations. Application for this information was forwarded to every known local union, and of these 736 reported having made payments on account of benefits, the aggregate of such disbursements being given in a separate table.

Of this number 109 local branch unions of Canadian organizations, 23 National Catholic unions and 17 independent units reported disbursements for benefits to their own members.

| Death benefits | $12,069,089 |
| Unemployed and Travelling Benefits | 795,353 |
| Strike benefits | 1,043,144 |
| Sick and accident benefits | 6,106,838 |
| Old age pensions and other benefits | 3,861,720 |

According to the total appearing in the above table, expenditures for the various classes of benefits disbursed in 1933 by international organizations with branches in Canada were $2,076,066 less than the disbursements for the same classes of benefits in 1932. The greater portion of this reduction in the payment of benefits is accounted for by reason of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners not supplying any particulars concerning benefit payments. This organization last year accounted for a total benefit payment of almost $2,000,000.

The expenditure for death benefits, though as usual, being responsible for the largest disbursement, is lower by $1,930,801 than the amount reported for the previous year. The amount spent for unemployment and travelling benefits was $365,057 more than in 1932; for strike benefits there was an increase, the expenditure being greater by $218,267. The disbursements for sick and accident benefits which in a number of cases included payments for disability benefits, were higher in 1933 by $4,295,221. Old age pensions amounted to $2,528,481. The total amount recorded in the old age and other benefit column shows a loss of $5,023,810 as compared with 1932.

The heaviest expenditure for death benefits was made by the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, the amount being $3,273,199; the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen spent $2,154,276, and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen had an expenditure of $1,029,230 for death benefits. Only seven organizations reported payments on account of unemployed and travelling benefits, the heaviest outlay being made by the Upholsterers, Carpet and Linoleum Mechanics' International Union, which organization spent $250,000, the International Moulders' Union of North America being second with $223,452, followed by the Amalgamated Lithographers of America with $200,000. Of the thirty organizations paying strike benefits, the International Typographical Union comes first with disbursements of $298,906, second being the International Photo Engravers' Union of North America, with expenditures of $181,410, and the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen and Helpers third with an outlay of $78,350. In the sick and accident benefit column the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen reported spending $4,267,179 which includes payments for disability. The Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen is second with disbursements of $1,074,224, but this amount also includes disability expenditures. For sick and accident only, the Order of Railway Conductors expended $206,022, the United Association of Plumbers, Gas Fitters, Steam Fitters and Steam Fitters' Helpers reporting the next largest sum, $163,805, with the International Moulders' Union of North America following with an expenditure of $103,656. The International Typographical Union reported the largest expenditure solely for old age pensions, the amount being $1,688,248; the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers paid $133,519 for old age claims, while the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union expended $101,451 for these pensions.

The Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen had the largest aggregate expenditure for benefits, having disbursed a total of $6,558,590; the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers stands second with an outlay of $3,553,405; the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen occupies third place with $2,650,497; the International Typographical Union takes fourth place with $2,469,286, followed by the Order of Railway Conductors with $1,384,303. The combined expenditure for benefits by the four brotherhoods, whose members are engaged in engine and train service, represent $14,146,795 of the total of $23,876,144 expended as benefits by the international labour bodies operating in the Dominion.

BENEFITS PAID BY LOCAL BRANCHES

Reports received from 736 local branch unions in Canada indicate that these bodies disbursed a total of $450,686 to their own members on account of the various benefits provided for by their respective laws. This expenditure is $189,564 less than that reported in 1932 by 830 local branches. The highest expenditure was for unemployed benefits, $198,490 being distributed, a decrease of $67,813 as compared with 1932; the next highest expenditure was for sick and accident benefits, $132,277 being disbursed, a decrease of $4,732. For death benefits $53,712 was paid out, a decrease of $25,367. Strike benefits amounted to $30,254, a smaller amount by $64,879 than expended in 1932. The expenditure for "other benefits" which represent disbursements for various purposes, including donations to other unions, amounted to $35,953, a decrease of $26,773. Of the total outlay for benefits by Canadian branch unions to their own members the 587 having international affiliation disbursed $383,982, a decrease of $134,724, the expenditure for each class of benefits being: Death, $29,183; unemployed, $193,624; strike, $26,197; sick and accident, $106.577; other benefits, $28,401. The 132 branches of Canadian organizations, including 23 National Catholic unions distributed $28,888, a decrease as compared with the outlay for 1932 of $50,933, divided as follows: Death, $5,271; unemployed, $4,811; strike, $3,767; sick and accident, $10,423; other benefits, $4,616. Seventeen independent units reported expenditures for benefits of $37,816, a decrease of $3,907, apportioned as follows: Death, $19,258; unemployed, $55; strike, $290; sick and accident, $15,277; other benefits, $2,936.

The following summary indicates the total amount disbursed by the local branch unions in Canada for the classes of benefits named:—

| Unemployed benefits | 198,490 |
| Strike benefits | 30,254 |
| Sick and accident benefits | 132,277 |
| Other benefits | 35,953 |

The expenditure of the above amounts by the local branch unions among their own members as previously explained, is in addition to the disbursements made for benefits by the central organizations.

The arrangements of the accompanying table is similar to the preceding one giving the disbursements by central international bodies, with the exception that the "other benefits" column does not include old age pension payments, but does embrace all gratuities, etc., which are not classed in other columns.

XX. NEW AND DISSOLVED LABOUR BODIES

New Unions Number 140, Dissolved 158, Showing a Loss of 18 Local Branches During 1933—New and Dissolved Unions by Trade Groups—Names and Locations of Labour Bodies Formed—Labour Bodies Dissolved.

During the year 1933 there was one independent unit formed, while six independent units passed out of existence. There were 140 local unions formed during 1933, and 158 dissolved or amalgamated with other unions, making a decrease, as stated in an earlier chapter, of 18. By trade groups the new and dissolved unions were as follows:—

| Mining and Quarrying | 10 | 13 |
| Lumbering | 5 | 2 |
| Building | 10 | 36 |
| Metal | 2 | 7 |
| Printing | 9 | 4 |
| Clothing | 13 | 8 |
| Steam Engineers and Firemen | 4 | 10 |
| Food and Tobacco | 6 | 4 |
| Railway Service | 30 | 38 |
| Navigation and General Transport | 6 | 2 |
| Communication | 1 | ..... |
| Personal Service | 8 | 12 |
| Employees of Public Authorities | 15 | 11 |
| Miscellaneous | 21 | 11 |

There were organized during 1933 two federations (national Catholic) and one district council. For the same period nine delegate bodies passed out of existence—2 federations (one national Catholic), 4 district councils and 3 trades and labour councils. As explained in an earlier chapter, the formation or dissolution of these delegate bodies does not affect the trade union membership of the Dominion, their establishment being made possible only by the existence of local branch unions, which are the foundation of the whole plan of labour organization.

LIST OF LABOUR BODIES FORMED IN 1933

The following statement contains the name of every federation, district council, trades and labour council and local branch union known to have been formed in Canada during the year 1933, as well as the names of branches whose names have been re-inserted. Where the locality is given for bodies covering a wide territory it designates the address of the secretary. This list of local branches is arranged in trade groups, the name of the organization from which charter was secured, the location of the branch and the total charters issued by the respective organizations being given.

XXI. THE LABOUR PRESS

Official Trade Union Journals—Method of Circulating—Names of Labour Journals and Papers Published in Canada—List of International Labour Journals—National Catholic Union Periodicals—Waterfront and Unemployed Workers' Publications—Communist Publications.

With the growth of the trade union movement on this continent, a labour press of no mean proportions has developed. All of the more important labour organizations have established official journals through which trade union activities and official business are reported to the membership. These publications, which are usually issued monthly, but sometimes semi-monthly or quarterly not only discuss matters peculiar to the respective organizations but also give space to subjects of general interest to organized labour. The office of editor is in some cases an elective one, but usually the secretary is charged with the editing and management. All official union journals have a regular subscription rate, but most of the organizations arrange to include the fee in the per capita tax so as to insure the publication reaching each member, whether residing in Canada, United States, or elsewhere.

There are seventeen labour periodicals printed in Canada, ten of which are known as official journals of central organizing bodies (two are issued by one organization), three are published by groups of branch unions connected with international organizations, and the remaining four in the list are journals of civil service employees' associations which are, or which claim to be, identical with trade unions. There are also The Civil Service Review, published by the Civil Service Federation of Canada, and The Civil Service News, official organ of the Civil Service Association of Ottawa, neither of which organization is affiliated with any trade union body.

Included in the list of trade union journals for the first time is The Needle Worker, official organ of the Industrial Union of Needle Trades, Workers of Canada. There are also two publications printed at Vancouver, The Heavy Lift, published in the interest of the Waterfront Workers, and The Unemployed Worker, organ of the Vancouver Unemployed Councils. One journal ceased publication during 1933, viz., The Canadian Miner, a semi-monthly publication issued at Calgary by the Mine Workers' Union of Canada. The name of the official journal of the International Union of the United Brewery, Flour, Cereal and Soft Drink Workers was changed to The Brewery Worker and is now printed weekly instead of fortnightly as heretofore.

At the close of 1933, there were nine Canadian papers published under the auspices of some labour or labour political organization, or which claimed to be issued in the interests of the trade union movement. Their names and place of publication are given in this chapter. There are upwards of 150 weekly papers published in the United States under the auspices or in the interests of the organized workers and recognized as a part of the labour press by the trade union movement as represented by the American Federation of Labor.

The following five Canadian labour publications devote some of their space to matter printed in the French language: (1) Canadian Congress Journal; (2) Canadian Unionist; (3) Canadian Railway Employees' Monthly; (4) The Federated Railwayman, and (5) The Labour World. The official journal of the United Mine Workers contains sections printed in several different languages.

With a view to stimulating the labour papers of the continent the International Labour Press was established some years ago, through the agency of which the editors of the various recognized labour publications are brought into conference annually at the same time and in the same city in which the American Federation of Labor is holding its convention, when matters relative to their work may be discussed and suggestions invited as to how the labour news service of the continent may be improved. The president of the International Labour Press is Matthew Woll, 105 A.F. of L. Bldg., Washington, D.C., and the secretary R. E. Woodmansee, Box 15, Springfield, Ill.

There are two other publications printed in Vancouver, B.C., which are appearing regularly. The Heavy Lift, a paper published in the interest of Waterfront Workers, and The Unemployed Worker, organ of the Vancouver Unemployed Councils.

COMMUNIST PUBLICATIONS

In addition to the recognized trade union periodicals the Communist Party published The Worker as its official organ until the party was declared illegal in December, 1931, following which the paper appeared under the auspices of the Worker Publishing Association. The Young Communist League publishes The Young Worker as its official monthly journal and the official paper of the Workers' Unity League is Workers' Unity, both of which are printed in Toronto. The Canadian Labour Defence League, which is known as a Communist organization, issues the Canadian Labour Defender.

The Workers' Party of America publishes in New York, N.Y., an official paper under the title of the Daily Worker, which is understood to be one of the two dailies published in the English language in the interests of communism; the other daily is published in London, England, under a similar name. The Labour Herald, which was the official journal of the Trade Union Educational League, was in 1924 consolidated with the Liberator and Soviet Russia Pictorial under the name of the Workers' Monthly, the name of which in 1927 was changed to The Communist, being published monthly by the Workers' (Communist) Party of America as a theoretical magazine for the discussion of revolutionary problems.

The Communist League of America, the opposition group to the Workers (Communist) Party of America, publishes a weekly organ in New York under the title of The Militant, and the National Youth Committee of the same group, in December, 1931, commenced the publication of a monthly paper under the name of the Young Spartican.

XXII. TRADE UNION CONVENTIONS

Fourteen Canadian Labour Organizations Convene in 1934—Trades and Labour Congress of Canada meets in Toronto and the Federation of Catholic Workers in Three Rivers, Que.—Names of Labour Bodies which will meet during 1934.

According to information received in the Department fourteen Canadian organizations will hold conventions during the year 1934. The Trades and Labour Congress of Canada meets in the Royal York Hotel, Toronto, Ont., September 10, and the Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada in Three Rivers, Que., July 9.

Twenty-two international labour bodies will meet during 1934, three of which meet in Canada. ## XXIII. NON-TRADE UNION ASSOCIATIONS

Important Organizations of Wage-Earners in the Dominion Not Identified with Organized Labour—Chief Organizations of School Teachers—Associations of Government Employees and Commercial Travellers—Objects of the Organizations in This Group, With Chief Officers—Affiliations and Membership.

Besides the labour organizations which make up the trade union movement of the Dominion, and whose memberships have been taken into consideration in preceding chapters of this report, there are a number of associations of wage earners not connected with organized labour, the importance of which warrant reference being made to them in the present volume.

Recorded for the first time in this chapter is the Rideau Canal Employees Civil Service Association, an affiliate of the Civil Service Federation of Canada. During the year the following three organizations ceased to function and are dropped from the list: Welland Ship Canal Civil Service Association; Nova Scotia Postmasters' Association and the Canadian Brotherhood of Chauffeurs and Mechanics.

Included in this group of non-trade union bodies are central associations of school teachers, chief of which is the Canadian Teachers' Federation, with its eleven affiliates. In addition to these there are three other associations, making in all a total of fifteen teachers' organizations. The advantages of membership in teachers' organizations are stated to be the efforts put forth to secure what are considered adequate salaries for the teaching profession, and below the schedules prepared by the association members are not supposed to accept positions. With a view to maintaining this principle members are enjoined in some instances from seeking a position where a vacancy has occurred through a school board refusing to pay the scheduled salary, a policy which is in accord with one of the fundamental principles of organized labour.

In the group of associations of Government Employees there are fifty organizations, of which number thirty-eight are in affiliation with the Civil Service Federation of Canada. Two other affiliates of the Federation are recorded in the Chapter "Canadian Central Bodies." They are the Federated Association of Letter Carriers and the United Postal Employees of Canada. The membership of the Amalgamated Civil Servants of Canada is not shown in the accompanying table, as it is included in the statistics of trade unions.

In addition to the various classes of employees in the service of the Dominion Government there are three organizations comprising employees of provincial governments.

Though there are in the Dominion a number of ex-soldier associations which were formed with a view to fostering the comradeship of the trenches, the only veterans' organizations which it is considered fitting to include in this report are (1) The Veterans' Service Guild, an association for ex-soldiers employed in the Government service, the activities of which are chiefly confined to Montreal where it was established in 1922, (2) Canadian Railways Veterans' Guild, organized in 1925, composed of men who are employed in the Departments of the Canadian National Railways, (3) Canadian Workers' Federation of Returned Soldiers and Sailors, which was formed in Montreal in 1919 to protect their members against alleged discrimination by labour unions.

Included also in this chapter are the names of six municipal employees associations, the same number as recorded in 1932, whose members are not connected with the trade union movement. In some instances, however, municipal employees are so identified.

Of the associations whose names are printed in this group the stronger numerically embrace commercial travellers. Some of these organizations, which have been in existence for many years, have as a result of their efforts secured numerous privileges for their members, and in addition have disbursed large sums for benefit purposes. The oldest of these organizations is the Commercial Travellers' Association of Canada, which has been actively functioning for over fifty-three years. Included among the organizations of commercial travellers is the Catholic Commercial Travellers' Association of Canada, a grouping of French-Canadian Roman Catholic commercial travellers' societies, which accepts as its principle "submission to the authority of the church and adherence to directions from the Holy See," and is designed to direct its members towards the religious and social apostolate.

A number of other associations are recorded in this chapter, particulars of which are given under their various headings:—

ASSOCIATION OF SCHOOL TEACHERS

With the exception of the trade unions the best organized group of wage-earners is perhaps that composed of school teachers. The teachers have local associations which are in most instances affiliated with the provincial bodies in their respective provinces. For the purpose of co-ordinating the activities of the provincial associations there is a Dominion organization known as the Canadian Teachers' Federation, with which eleven associations, including those of the four western provinces, three Ontario bodies, one Quebec association and the association of the Maritime Provinces are affiliated. The objects of the Canadian Teachers' Federation, which was organized in Calgary in July, 1920, are:—

(a) To obtain co-operation and co-ordination of all provincial teachers' organizations upon policies and activities of common interest.

(b) To provide machinery by which the various provincial organizations could be kept in touch with one another and through which mutual assistance could be quickly and readily given.

(c) The Dominion organization shall in no way interfere with the full liberties of the provincial organizations in dealing with matters concerning their own provinces.

The chief officers of the Canadian Teachers' Federation are: Pres., W. McL. Barker, M.A., 230 Highfield St., Moncton, N.B. Sec., C. N. Crutchfield, B.A., Shawinigan Falls, Que.

In addition to the organizations of government employees which are mentioned in an earlier chapter, there are many other associations of such workers which are in no way identified with the trade union movement, the names of which are given a place in the present chapter, and include both associations of Dominion and Provincial civil servants. The associations of Dominion Government employees in some instances cover definite branches of the civil service, while it is understood the provincial bodies embrace all classes in one general organization. The objects of the civil service associations are in the main to speak collectively for their respective members on matters affecting conditions of employment.

For the employees of the Dominion Government there is a Civil Service Federation, with which several group associations are affiliated, and which is designed to represent all branches of the service, and although itself not connected with organized labour, does not exclude membership to those bodies which are so affiliated. Among the names of associations of Dominion Government employees is included that of the Halcyon Club. This was originally intended as a social organization, but since the passing out of existence of the Women's Branch of the Civil Service Association of Ottawa, the Halycon Club has also become the medium of expression of the women in the Government service at Ottawa in regard to conditions of employment or other matters. The list of associations of Government employees, together with the names and addresses of the chief officers, are as follows:—

VETERANS' CIVIL SERVICE GUILD

An association in which active membership is confined to war veterans in the employ of the Federal or Provincial Governments was established in Montreal on March 29, 1921, under the name of Veterans' Civil Service Guild. Associate membership is permitted to returned men in the employ of municipalities, who have the right to attend meetings of the guild or any council thereof (provision being made for the formation of local councils where seven or more apply for membership), but are not eligible for office, nor have they the right to vote. Upon an associate member becoming an employee of the Federal or Provincial Govrnments he is permitted to apply for active membership. The application fee is not less than $1 and the dues not less than $4 per annum for active and $2 for associate members. The objects of the Veterans' Guild are in the main similar to other organized bodies of civil servants. Pres., Major W. J. Gerrard, 5382 Brodeur Ave., N.D.G., Montreal, Que. Sec., C. L. Robinson, Customs and Excise, 105 McGill St., Montreal, Que.

MUNICIPAL EMPLOYEES' ASSOCIATIONS

The Ottawa Municipal Service Association was formed on March 22, 1925, for the purpose of promoting the common interests of municipal employees, and to improve the efficiency of the civic service. Membership is open to all municipal employees, on either the inside or outside service, who have been regularly employed by the corporation of Ottawa for one year. Pres., F. B. Proctor, 131 Somerset St., Ottawa, Ont. Sec.-Treas., A. D. Stalker, 193 Sunnyside Ave., Ottawa, Ont.

The Hamilton Municipal Service Association, formerly known as the Hamilton City Hall Employees' Association, was organized in May, 1930. Pres., R. J. Menary, 110 Gladstone Ave., Hamilton, Ont. Sec., W. E. Griffin, 45 Barnesdale Ave. N., Hamilton, Ont.

The Toronto City Hall Employees' Association was organized in 1919. Pres., George Hurst, 95 Parkside Dr., Toronto, Ont. Sec., Nelson P. Talbot, 50 Earl Grey Rd., Toronto 6, Ont.

The Toronto Municipal Foremen's Association was organized in January, 1918. Pres., T. E. Matthews, 344 Beresford Ave., Toronto, Ont. Sec., W. Sangster, 590 Soudan Ave., Toronto, Ont.

The Mechanics and Mechanics' Helpers of the Board of Education of Toronto was organized September, 1924, as a social association for classes of employees named above. Pres., Art. Johnston, 56 Tilson Rd., Toronto, Ont. Sec., Allan Ford, 37 Erskine Ave., Toronto, Ont.

The Toronto Water Supply Association was formed in November, 1919, for the purpose of bringing together all employees of the Water Supply Section for their mutual benefit and welfare. The membership consists of the following classifications: stationary engineers, electricians, filter, electrical and chlorine operators, oilers, firemen and coal passers, etc. Pres., Jas. Wright, 24 Daulac Ave., Toronto, Ont. Sec., G. C. Brown, 264 Garden Ave., Toronto, Ont.

COMMERCIAL TRAVELLERS' ASSOCIATIONS

There are in the Dominion six associations of commercial travellers, with beneficial features, all of which have large memberships. The oldest organization is the Commercial Travellers' Association of Canada, which was established in Toronto in 1871 and incorporated by Act of Parliament on May 26, 1874, and by an amendment thereto granted further privileges in March, 1876. The Dominion Commercial Travellers' Association was formed in 1875 and incorporated in 1880; the Ontario Association was formed on December 23, 1876, and incorporated in Ontario on September 13, 1880; the Maritime Commercial Travellers' Association was formed in 1881 and incorporated by the Nova Scotia Legislature in 1886, the Northwest Association was incorporated in Manitoba on May 23, 1887, incorporation being confirmed by the Dominion Government on June 21, 1906; the Association of Commercial Travellers of Quebec was founded in 1902 and was incorporated September 22, 1922. The names of the associations and their chief officers are as follows:

Commercial Travellers' Association of Canada.—Pres., G. F. Campbell, 117 Oakwood Ave., Toronto, Ont. Sec., John A. Rutherford, 51 Yonge St., Toronto, Ont.

Another association is the Associated Canadian Travellers, which was incorporated in October, 1921, and which aims to advance and protect the interests of all commercial travellers and to promote the welfare of its members without any object of pecuniary gain. Pres., W. Cain, 332-22nd Ave. W., Calgary, Alta. Sec., J. T. Berrington, 316 P. Burns Bldg., Calgary, Alta.

CATHOLIC COMMERCIAL TRAVELLERS' ASSOCIATION OF CANADA

Besides the above organizations of commercial travellers, there is the Catholic Commercial Travellers' Association of Canada, which was formed in Montreal in 1917 as a result of the amalgamation of the Montreal Catholic Commercial Travellers' Club (organized September 20, 1914) with several clubs of a similar nature in the province of Quebec. The association membership in which is limited to Roman Catholics who speak the French language, has as its principle "submission to the authority of the church and adherence to directions from the Holy See." Its aim is to organize the scattered forces of the commercial travellers and to direct them towards the religious and social apostolate. Pres., N. R. Beaudet, 4006 Marlowe Ave., Montreal, Que. Sec., Elie Ducharme, 2982 Maplewood Ave., Outremont, Montreal, Que.

CANADIAN RAILWAYS VETERANS' GUILD

The Canadian Railways Veterans' Guild was originally organized during 1925, under the name of the Canadian National Veterans' Guild, membership being open to men who served in the late war and who are employed in any of the branches or departments of the Canadian Railways. Members are required to pay an entrance fee of two dollars, and a monthly contribution of not less than fifty cents, provision being also made for the levying of special assessments when such is necessary. Among the objects of the guild (the headquarters of which are in Montreal) are: (1) Securing recognition of the just claims of veterans; (2) establishing harmonious relations between the Railways and their employees by negotiation in the matter of wage schedules and working conditions; (3) furnishing to members such pecuniary or other aid as the circumstances require. Pres., F. H. Morgan, M.C., 472 Third Ave., Verdun, Que. Sec., P. J. Derrig, 4205 Messier St., Montreal, Que.

MARINE CHECKERS AND WEIGHERS' ASSOCIATION

Pres., Harry Newell, Room 505, Dominion Bldg., Vancouver, B.C. Hon. Sec., W. R. Stanton, Room 505, Dominion Bldg., Vancouver, B.C.

TORONTO WRITERS' CLUB

The Toronto Writers' Club was organized on April 9, 1923. The object of the organization is "to provide a club in which members of the writing fraternity may meet together and compare notes. Its aim is mutual helpfulness to the novelists, short story and feature article writers of Toronto. It is not a press club, as the average run of newspaper reporters are not admitted." Membership is limited to those who must have published copyrighted material of a worth while character. Pres., H. W. McManus, 73 Adelaide St. W., Toronto, Ont. Sec., J. G. Johnston, 1606 Northern Ontario Bldg., Toronto, Ont.

PRESS CLUBS

So far as information has been obtained, there are four press clubs operating in the Dominion, their objects including the advancement of journalism and the promotion of good fellowship among the members. Active membership is open to men and women of editorial staffs, associate membership being open to former newspaper editorial writers and other writers.

Canadian Women's Press Club.—Pres., Mrs. Elizabeth B. Price, 2135-37th Ave. W., Vancouver, B.C. Sec., Miss Bessie G. Ferguson, 26 Withrow Ave., Toronto, Ont.

The objects are to promote and increase, by all lawful means, the knowledge, skill and proficiency of its members. Pres., Basil P. Lake, 46 Latimer Ave., Toronto, Ont. Sec., Donald R. Butt, 43 Bertmount Ave., Toronto, Ont.

ONTARIO CHAUFFEURS' ASSOCIATION

The Ontario Chauffeurs' Association was organized in 1910 as the Toronto Chauffeurs' Protective Association, securing a provincial charter in 1913, and operating until the outbreak of the Great War in 1914, when owing to so many of its members enlisting, the association was compelled to cease operations. With the close of the war the organization was revived. The association, in addition to affording mutual protection to its members, seeks to eliminate the danger of injuries from motor vehicles by developing as far as possible a higher standard of efficiency of licensed drivers and to co-operate with those in authority in the suppression of reckless driving of automobiles by owners and careless and inexperienced chauffeurs. The benefits to members include the maintenance of an employment bureau and free medical service. Pres., J. W. Shepherd, 1 May St., Toronto, Ont. Sec., H. E. D. Mitchell, 80 Summerhill Ave., Toronto, Ont.

CANADIAN ASSOCIATION OF POWER ENGINEERS

The Canadian Association of Power Engineers was originally formed in June, 1927, as the Canadian Brotherhood of Stationary Engineers, and as such its name appeared in the list of Canadian central labour bodies as published in previous issues of this report. On August 25, 1927, the organization was registered under the provision of the Trade Unions Act. Certain changes were made in the constitution in 1929 and the name altered to the first mentioned. It is, however, considered appropriate to include the name of the association in this chapter. The objects set forth (1) It is the purpose of this association to promote engineering knowledge and improve the status of the power engineer in the Dominion of Canada; to secure for its members the latest developments and their application in the field of power engineering, and so enable the individual engineer to increase the efficiency of the power plant in which he may be employed; also, to foster a spirit of co-operation between employer and employee to the mutual benefit of all concerned; (2) To give its support to any beneficial legislative measure relating to safety in the installation and operation of power plants in the Dominion of Canada; (3) To investigate any grievance that may arise, whether of our members or their employers, and advise them of the best policy to be adopted in settlement of same, having in mind at all times the welfare of the association at large, so that it will in no way jeopardize the integrity and standing of the association in the business world of Canada; and (4) To adopt a policy in view of the fact, that, whereas the welfare and health of the public at large is dependent on the continuous and safe operation of the power plants entrusted to the care of its membership; therefore, this association will in no way consider affiliation with any labour organization, or take part in any labour disputes or strikes, which may in any way endanger or interfere with the public service rendered by its membership. Pres., M. W. Johnson, 93 Newton Ave., Winnipeg, Man. Sec., Jas. Cowie, 697 Banning St., Winnipeg, Man.

OTTAWA DENTAL ASSISTANTS' ASSOCIATION

The Ottawa Dental Assistants' Association was organized July 6, 1931, and has for its aims and objects the mutual benefit of the dental assistants and dental nurses. Pres., Miss Isobel Williams, 232 First Ave., Ottawa, Ont. Sec., Miss Hazel Brown, 143 Echo Drive, Ottawa, Ont.

CANADIAN DRILLERS' ASSOCIATION

The Canadian Drillers' Association was organized December 14, 1931, at Petrolia, Ont., with a view to furthering the interest of all those who may be interested in the production end of the industry. Membership is open to all oil producers in Canada, all Canadians who are associated with the oil industry in foreign fields and all Canadian drillers, although for the present the association will confine its efforts to the oil well drillers. Pres., A. E. Brownlee, 243 Kathleen Ave., Sarnia, Ont. Sec., C. N. Peat, Petrolia, Ont.

INTERNATIONAL GENEVA ASSOCIATION

The International Geneva Association is a beneficial and fraternal organization. Its membership is composed of men engaged in the hotel, restaurant, club and catering industry. In addition to its social and trade features (including an employment policy), the society maintains at Littleton, Colo., the Geneva Home, an institution for convalescent, aged and incapacitated members. The parent body was established at Geneva, Switzerland, on May 21, 1877. There are branches of the association throughout the world, and these maintain affiliated relations with each other and the parent body "for the benefit of members who may be compelled to travel or who choose to live in one of the countries where the various branches of the institution are situated, carrying on a policy of reciprocity with the Geneva Federation in the various branches thereof." The report of 1933 indicates that the association has 22,000 members comprised in 360 branches in various countries. The International head offices are located in Zurich, Switzerland. Prior to the war there were branches in Vancouver, Winnipeg and Montreal, but these lapsed. The Montreal branch was subsequently re-organized, and has 75 members. In 1927 a branch was formed in Ottawa, and in 1928 a branch was established in Toronto. In 1933 these branches reported 56 and 100 members respectively. The president and secretary respectively of the general administrative board are F. G. Walther and K. Englehardt, and these officers may be reached at 143 West 44th street, New York, N.Y. The chief officers of the Canadian branches are: Montreal—Pres., George Nowell, 7475 De l'Epee. Sec., Joseph Filippi, 3635 Park Ave.; Ottawa—Pres., John Adam, Chateau Laurier. Sec., W. F. Willan, Nova Scotia Hotel, Halifax, N.S.; Toronto—Pres., Franz Martiz, 248 Castlefield Rd. Sec., Charles Miller, Agincourt, Ont.

ASSOCIATION OF CANADIAN FIRE MARSHALS

The Association of Canadian Fire Marshals was formed in Vancouver on August 9, 1922, and has for its object the development of uniformity of action and legislation and generally to promote fire prevention work. Pres., Major J. A. Rudland, Halifax, N.S. Sec., J. E. Ritchie, Parliament Buildings, Toronto, Ont.

ASSOCIATIONS OF FIRE CHIEFS

The Dominion Association of Fire Chiefs was established in 1908, and affiliated with the International Fire Chiefs Association in 1927. The main object of the organization is educational, meeting annually for the purpose of discussing and exchanging views on the best means for the protection and the methods to be employed for fire prevention. Pres., Chief R. Day, Pembroke, Ont. Sec., Chief James Armstrong, Box 56, Kingston, Ont.

The Maritime Fire Chiefs' Association, which was formed May 26, 1915, has objects similar to the Dominion body. Pres., Thos. A. Armour, 50 Douglas Ave., Saint John, N.B. Sec., Capt. K. J MacRae, 108 Prince William St., Saint John, N.B.

The Saskatchewan Fire Chiefs' Association, organized in 1931, is another body similar to the Dominion organization, its membership taking in chiefs and assistant chiefs, whether paid or unpaid. Pres., A. E. Fisher, Superintendent of Insurance, Parliament Bldgs., Regina, Sask. Sec., W. J. Moncton, Insurance Branch, Parliament Bldgs, Regina, Sask.

FIREMEN'S ASSOCIATIONS

The Firemen's Association of Ontario was organized in Toronto on August 29, 1899, and was incorporated on July 23, 1910. The aims of the association are to improve not only the methods of fire fighting, but also, in more recent years, to direct efforts towards fire prevention. Pres., J. K. Williams, Humber Bay, Ont. Sec., W. J. Armstrong, 282 Indian Road Crescent, Toronto 9, Ont.

The Temiskaming Firemen's Association, with objects similar to those above mentioned for other firemen's associations, was formed October 25, 1916. Pres., A. M. Douglas, New Liskeard, Ont. Sec., F. E. Thompson, Box 686, New Liskeard, Ont.

The Niagara District Firemen's Association was organized on June 28, 1922, and is composed of the delegates of the volunteer, fully paid, partly paid, exempt and veteran fire companies, departments and associations in the Niagara district. This organization was formed for the purpose of an annual exchange of opinions regarding fire fighhting methods and appliances. Pres., H. E. Lighthart, Fort Erie, Ont.

CANADIAN YARDMASTERS' ASSOCIATION

The Canadian Yardmasters' Association was formed early in 1925, and is composed of yardmasters, assistant yardmasters and relieving yardmasters actively employed on Canadian railroads. There are ten branches within the association, and the membership is approximately 680, the grand division headquarters being in Toronto, Ont. According to the preamble to the constitution, each individual member is pledged "to work for and maintain an eight-hour day," and "no less wages than have prevailed for yardmasters on Canadian railroads during the year 1924." It is impressed upon members that they "must at all times encourage and maintain wholesome relations with the management, and keep their superior officials advised of irregularities that will affect the safe and efficient terminal operation." In addition, it is stated that "yardmasters shall not at any time feel obligated to make apologies to any other class of employees for any action taken by them, but should at all times maintain an attitude of freedom of thought and action." Pres., Robert Muirhead, 615 Yonge St., Toronto, Ont. Sec., Frank Wray, 102 Glenmore Rd., Toronto, Ont.

CANADIAN TICKET AGENTS' ASSOCIATION

The Canadian Ticket Agents' Association was organized in 1887, for educational, beneficial and social purposes. Membership is open to any ticket agent in charge of a coupon ticket office in Canada. ### UNITED WOMEN'S EDUCATIONAL FEDERATION

The United Women's Educational Federation of Ontario was formed in May, 1920, and includes in its objects the education of women on all social and political subjects affecting their interests. Membership is open to all women's organizations willing to subscribe to the principles of the federation (published in this report for 1920) and pay a per capita tax of $1 per annum. Pres., Mrs. M. Singer, 137 Fairview Ave., Toronto, Ont. Sec., Mrs. J. Laing, 6 Howard St., Toronto, Ont.

CANADIAN WORKERS' FEDERATION OF RETURNED SOLDIERS AND SAILORS

The Canadian Workers' Federation of Returned Soldiers and Sailors was formed in Montreal in 1919, during a strike in a local shipyard. The returned men, believing they were being discriminated against by the labour unions, organized the federation to protect their interests. The objects of the federation are as follows:—

(a) To assist all who are members to obtain employment.
(b) To obtain for those who are members such wages and working conditions as are essential to human well-being in accordance with present day standards.
(c) To secure promotion and advancement for members, who, by their ability, diligence and strict attention to duty, are entitled to favourable consideration.
(d) To aid members who are returned soldiers or sailors to acquire a knowledge of trades and occupations for which members and returned soldiers are adapted, and provide and create opportunities for members who engage in industry.
(e) To prevent and repudiate any discrimination open or covert against members of the Federation or any returned soldiers or sailors who may apply for a position as an apprentice, helper or assistant in any trade, occupation or calling.
(f) To suggest, recommend, promote and demand, such legislation as is likely to be an advantage to members of the Federation and returned soldiers or sailors, in so far as it may tend to promote the welfare of members and returned soldiers and sailors generally.
(g) To give members any pecuniary assistance as the circumstances of the member in person requiring same may demand.
(h) To do any and all things that will in any way contribute to the betterment and improvement of the social and economic position of the members and of persons and institutions that are deserving of such aid and support as the Federation can give.
Proviso. Each and every one of the hereinbefore mentioned objects shall be broadly interpreted.

The Canadian Workers' Federation of Returned Soldiers and Sailors may affiliate with any organization having similar or kindred objects, but only in so far as such affiliation will better permit the Federation to carry out its objects. Pres., David Stewart, 1661 Letourneau St., Montreal, Que. Sec., W. Smith, 2410 Bourbonniere Ave., Montreal, Que.

CANADIAN JAPANESE ASSOCIATION

The Canadian Japanese Association was formed on March 24, 1909, with the following objects: (1) To effect the progress and advancement of Japanese residents in Canada and assist in their assimilation; (2) to promote the social uplift of Japanese in Canada; (3) to encourage study by the giving, on such terms and conditions as may from time to time be prescribed, of a prize or reward; (4) to make donations to charitable institutions and hospitals wherever it is considered in the interests of the Japanese residents to do so; (5) to make provision for the benefit of its members, by means of subcriptions, against sickness, disability or death.

Pres., Toyozo Matsuyama, 1908 Venables St., Vancouver, B.C. Sec., Ryukichi Miyake, 899 Cordova St. E., Vancouver, B.C.

An organization composed of Chinese, which has its headquarters in Vancouver, is known as the Chinese Nationalist League. The league, which has been in existence for some years, has the following aims and objects:—

(a) To provide means for and assist in benevolent and charitable objects for education and social reform, and to develop, secure, maintain, encourage and extend a central control and organization to assist, utilize and co-ordinate the various public or private agencies, institutions and associations now carrying on similar work or operations, or which may hereafter be established, which shall be deemed advantageous in carrying on operations throughout Canada for the welfare of the society;

(b) To promote the higher education, profitable employment and social well-being of the Chinese resident in Canada, and other races, in every possible way;

(c) To purchase, take, have, hold, possess, retain and enjoy any property, real or personal, corporeal or incorporeal whatsoever, and for any or every estate or interest therein whatsoever, given, granted, devised or bequeathed to it or appropriated, purchased or acquired by it in any manner or way whatsoever to, for or in favour of the uses and purposes of this corporation;

(d) From time to time acquire, accept and receive by purchase, lease, contract, donation, legacy, transfer in trust or otherwise, any kind of real or personal property, and to use, apply and devote in whole or part the same or the income thereof for such public or private, religious, charitable, educational, patriotic or other objects as may be deemed best, or as may be required by the terms, conditions, trusts and objects of any such purchase, lease, contract, donation, legacy, transfer or otherwise, and to carry out, perform and comply with such terms, conditions, trusts and objects;

(e) To take or otherwise acquire and hold membership in any association or company having objects altogether or in part similar to those of this corporation or carrying on any business which may seem capable of being conducted so as directly or indirectly to benefit this corporation;

(f) To draw, make, accept, indorse, execute and issue promissory notes, bills of exchange, bills of lading, warrants and other negotiable or transferable instruments;

(g) To sell, exchange, lease, dispose of, turn to account or otherwise deal with or contract with reference to all or any part of the property and rights of this corporation;

(h) To do all other acts and things as are incidental or conducive to the attainment of the above objects, and generally in any way to do all such things as shall be calculated directly or indirectly to promote the best interests of the Chinese and other races throughout the Dominion of Canada;

(i) To advocate and secure possible remedies and assist in the enactment of ordinances and laws required to carry out the foregoing by means of bulletins, education or any other method of propaganda that may from time to time be considered advisable.

On two occasions application for incorporation of the league has been made, but both were refused. The latest application was made in August, 1921.

Pres., Y. S. Chan, 529 Gore Ave., Vancouver, B.C. Sec., Jin Yet Noo, 529 Gore Ave., Vancouver, B.C.

AFFILIATIONS AND MEMBERSHIP

There are 118 organizations included in the group embracing "Non-Trade Union Associations," two less than the number recorded for 1932. Divided by classes they are: School teachers, 15; government employees, 54; municipal employees, 6; commercial travellers, 9; all others, 34. In the list of school teachers appears the name of the Canadian Federation of Teachers, a Dominion-wide body with which the eleven associations marked with double asterisks in the accompanying table are affiliated and whose combined membership of 20,770, makes up the membership of the Federation, and indicates a loss of 2,892 as compared with the previous year. The three remaining unaffiliated associations have a combined membership of 1,908, a loss of 1,123 as compared with 1932, making an aggregate of organized school teachers of 22,678.

Of the 54 associations of government employees 50 comprise civil servants in the employ of the Dominion Government, one is made up of persons who may be employees of Dominion, provincial or municipal authorities, and the remaining three are composed of provincial civil servants. The 38 associations designated by an asterisk are in affiliation with the Civil Service Federation of Canada, whose numerical strength of 11,844 is the combined membership of the affiliated bodies whose names appear in this chapter and the membership of the Federated Association of Letter Carriers and the United Postal Employees of Canada (referred to in an earlier chapter).

Five of the unaffiliated associations reported a combined membership of 11,298, making a total of reported organized Dominion Government employees of 27,314. Included in this total is the membership of the Amalgamated Civil Servants of Canada (referred to in an earlier chapter).

Two of the three bodies of provincial civil servants reported a combined membership of 1,707.

The membership reported by five of the six associations of municipal employees was 1,687 and that of the nine commercial travellers associations 30,518, the latter, as usual, constituting the most numerous group in the non-trade union list. The combined membership of the 34 other associations is 13,860. The aggregate of membership of all classes of organizations as given in the appended table is 90,819, after deducting 2,773, the membership of the Federated Association of Letter Carriers and the United Postal Employees of Canada, affiliates of the Civil Service Federation of Canada which is included in Table 1A. This shows a decrease of 8,235 as compared with the figures for 1932. The statement following gives the reported membership of each association, together with the number of affiliations, where the organization has subordinate branches in affiliation.

Minister of Labour.

Sir,—I have the honour to submit the Twenty-fourth Annal Report on Labour Organization in Canada, being for the calendar year 1934. The volume was prepared in the Labour Intelligence Branch of the Department, and, like previous reports on the same subject, contains much information concerning the labour bodies with which the Canadian organized workers are identified, as well as giving statistics of organized labour in the Dominion.

I have the honour to be, sir,
Your obedient servant,
W. M. DICKSON,
Deputy Minister of Labour.

Ottawa, August, 1935.

INTRODUCTORY REMARKS

Labour Organizations in Canada Classified Under Two Main Headings—Percentage of Trade Union Members and Organized Wage Earners to Population—Trade Union Memberships and Local Branches—Division by Trade Groups—Unions Having Large Memberships—Character and Development of Trade Unions—Trade Unions Act—Labour in Politics—Labour Members of Parliament and Provincial Legislatures—Canadian Labour Defense League—Workers' Educational Association of Ontario.

Particulars concerning the trade union movement in the Dominion of Canada, as obtained from information supplied the department, are set forth in this the Twenty-fourth Annual Report on Labour Organization in Canada, covering the calendar year 1934. The numerous phases of trade unionism are covered rather fully in the various chapters of the present volume, and it also contains statistical data for each of the labour bodies having members in Canada. Mention is also made of other organizations which, though not connected with the trade union movement are considered of sufficient importance to be included in the report. In the main, the present volume adheres closely to the form of previous reports in this series.

Convention proceedings of the various labour organizations, as well as other trade union activities are published in the Labour Gazette, a monthly publication issued by the Department.

Labour organization in Canada is generally classified under two headings: (1) local branches of international unions, those having membership in Canada and the United States, and (2) unions whose members are wholly in Canada. Nearly all of the unions coming under the first heading are in affiliation with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada (referred to in a subsequent chapter), as well as a number of purely Canadian central organizations and directly chartered unions. In the second group will be found the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada; the All-Canadian Congress of Labour; the National Catholic Unions, affiliated with the Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada; Other Canadian Central Organizations, and various independent units.

There are two principal types of unions, craft and industrial. Craft unions include workmen in a single craft or a number of closely allied crafts or trades, such as bricklayers and stonemasons, while industrial unions have members in various occupations in a particular industry, for instance in coal mining. Some of the first mentioned class include several crafts with helpers and labourers so that they are quasi-industrial unions. Still another type of organization is one which organizes workers in all industries under one general union, centrally controlled, usually with sub-divisions by industries and localities. The development of these various types of labour unions in Canada is briefly outlined in subsequent sections of the report.

TRADE UNION MEMBERSHIP IN 1934

The first report on Labour Organization in Canada, which was for the calendar year 1911, showed a trade union membership in the Dominion of 133,132 comprised in 1,722 branches. The membership had reached its peak in 1919, when there were 378,047 organized workers reported to the Department. Owing to the fact that union members, through being out of employment, were unable to pay their monthly dues and as a consequence they became suspended and their names removed from the records. Some organizations exempt from the payment of dues for certain periods those members who are out of employment, but it is, however, contingent upon the regular payment of the prescribed fees that membership in the union is maintained. Notwithstanding the improved conditions throughout the country the trade union membership is somewhat lower than in 1933.

From information furnished by officers of central organizations, and that secured from departmental records, the international craft union group, which consists of the Canadian members of 79 organizations, one more than the number recorded in 1933, had 1,750 branches in Canada, a decrease of 3, with a combined membership of 133,669. The One Big Union reported 48 local units in the Dominion, a gain of 2, with 23,580 members, an increase of 280. The Industrial Workers of the World reported 11 branches, 3 more than in 1933, with a membership of 4,155, a gain of 537. The group of Canadian central organizations, which number 24, had 662 branches, with a combined membership of 55,486. The National Catholic group consisted of 122 unions, a gain of 12, with a membership of 30,346, an increase of 3,452. There were 42 independent units, the same number as recorded in 1933, with a combined membership of 10,452. The local unions of organizations affiliated with the Workers' Unity League of Canada, together with the directly chartered unions of the League itself was given by the secretary as 105, with a combined reported membership of 24,086.

A computation of these figures indicates that there were in Canada at the close of 1934, a total of 2,740 trade union branches, a gain of 33, with a combined reported membership of 281,774, a loss of 4,446. According to the census figure as at June 1, 1934, trade unionists represented 2·6 per cent of the population, adding 100,390, the number of members comprised in the non-trade union associations, the organized wage-earners in Canada, at the close of 1934, was 3·5 per cent of the population.

The number of branches and the membership reported or that obtained from other reliable sources, of the various classes of labour organizations operating in Canada at the close of 1934, with the number of members of each group affiliated, are indicated in the accompanying table:—

TRADE UNION MEMBERSHIP AND LOCAL BRANCHES

| —— | Branches | Membership | —— | Branches | Membership |
| 1911 | 1,741 | 133,132 | 1923 | 2,487 | 278,092 |
| 1912 | 1,883 | 160,120 | 1924 | 2,429 | 260,643 |
| 1913 | 2,017 | 175,799 | 1925 | 2,494 | 271,064 |
| 1915 | 1,883 | 143,343 | 1927 | 2,604 | 290,282 |
| 1916 | 1,842 | 160,407 | 1928 | 2,653 | 300,602 |
| 1917 | 1,974 | 204,630 | 1929 | 2,778 | 319,476 |
| 1918 | 2,274 | 248,887 | 1930 | 2,809 | 322,449 |
| 1919 | 2,847 | 378,047 | 1931 | 2,772 | 310,544 |
| 1920 | 2,918 | 373,842 | 1932 | 2,725 | 283,576 |

UNION MEMBERSHIP BY INDUSTRIAL AND TRADE GROUPS

The division of union membership among the various industries and trade groups is indicated in the accompanying table and chart. The membership of each central body is included in the trade group in which most of its members are employed, as for instance the membership of the various carpenters' unions are classified under building trades. The membership of each of the central bodies is given in Table 1 and 1A, Chapter XVIII.

It will be seen from the appended table and chart that the railroad group again contains the largest number of members, namely, 67,346, or 23·9 per cent of the total.

| Mining and Quarrying | 23,614 | 8·4 |
| Building | 22,038 | 7·8 |
| Metal | 12,149 | 4·3 |
| Printing and Paper Making | 14,224 | 5·1 |
| Clothing, Boot and Shoes | 22,253 | 7·9 |
| Railroad Employees | 67,346 | 23·9 |
| Other Transportation and Navigation | 19,523 | 6·9 |
| Public Employees, Personal Service and Amusement | 26,398 | 9·4 |

Mining and Quarrying.—Organizations in these industries are chiefly among coal miners. The United Mine Workers of America, which has considerable membership in Alberta and Nova Scotia, District 18 and 26 respectively, as well as the Amalgamated Mine Workers of Nova Scotia, include all classes of workers in coal mines, mechanics, engineers, etc., as well as miners. These unions, however, do not organize metal miners. The Mine Workers' Union of Canada with nearly all of its membership among coal miners in Alberta has a small number of its members in other mining, having organized some copper miners as well as coal miners in British Columbia and some metal miners in Northern Ontario. A number of independent local coal miners' unions in Alberta and British Columbia in the Crow's Nest Pass District had a total membership of over 1,236.

Building Trades.—This group includes the various unions whose members are engaged chiefly in building and construction with some exceptions, such as carpenters in wood working establishments and electrical workers on electric railways, in railway shops and in electric light and power plants. In the larger cities these have Building Trades Councils. The carpenters, bricklayers and masons, electrical workers and plumbers together make up over 82 per cent of the total membership.

Metal Trades.—The members of the unions in this group work chiefly in metal working establishments and in railway shops but elevator constructors and bridge, structural and ornamental iron workers are included. The machinists and moulders' unions had about 67 per cent of the membership in the group, the blacksmiths and boilermakers having 800 and 1,900 respectively.

Printing and Paper Making Trades.—This group includes workmen in printing and publishing and in pulp and paper mills. The carpenters, electricians, etc., as well as the engineers and firemen in the pulp and paper mills belong, however, to the building, metal trades and engineering unions. The printing pressmen, the paper makers and the pulp, sulphite and paper mill workers had over half the total membership but the typographical union had a membership of over 4,000.

Clothing, Boot and Shoe Trades.—The Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, an international union of employees in men's and boys' ready-made clothing factories, was the largest in this industry but the International Ladies' Garment Workers, composed of employees in cloak, suit and dressmaking establishments, and the Industrial Union of Needle Trades Workers had considerable memberships. This last organization affiliated with the Workers' Unity League, organizes workers in fur shops as well as in clothing factories. The membership of all of these unions is chiefly in Montreal, Toronto and Winnipeg. The

TWENTY-FOUR YEARS OF TRADE UNIONISM IN CANADA

Boot and Shoe Workers' Union had a membership of over 1,400, while the International Fur Workers' Union and the United Garment Workers, the latter with members in overall and work clothing factories, had over 700 members each.

Railroad Employees.—This group of organizations of steam railway employees includes four of the independent international unions, namely, the Locomotive Enginers, the Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, the Railway Conductors and Railroad Trainmen, the membership of each ranging from about four thousand to over nine thousand. A number of the other unions with considerable membership are affiliated with the American Federation of Labor and the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada. The Brotherhood of Maintenance-of-Way Employees consists of section men and the mechanics in the bridge and building departments and had one of the largest union memberships in Canada, being over 11,000. The Railway Carmen which includes car repairers and car building trades such as carpenters, upholsterers, etc., has a membership of nearly ten thousand. This organizatior along with certain locals of the machinists, boilermakers, blacksmiths, moulders, sheet metal workers, and electrical workers' unions which have members chiefly in railway shops, constitutes Division No. 4 of the Railway Employees' Department of the American Federation of Labor and represents these classes of employees in negotiations with the railway companies. The Railroad Telegraphers and the Railway and Steamship Clerks also have considerable memberships. The latter includes clerks, freight handlers and station employees not only on steam railways but employed by steamship companies, most of its members however, are employed on the Canadian Pacific Railway.

Among the wholly Canadian unions the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees is outstanding, having in fact the largest membership of any union in Canada. While membership is open to nearly all classes of railway employees, its organization is chiefly among clerks, freight handlers, station employees, shop labourers, dining and sleeping car employees on the Canadian National Railways and among employees of the Canadian National Express Company. It has also some members in car shops and among steamship clerks and freight handlers. This union as well as the Canadian Association of Railwaymen is affiliated with the All-Canadian Congress of Labour.

Other Transportation and Navigation Trades.—The Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employees, having a large membership in Canada, includes motormen and conductors and miscellaneous classes of electric railway employees as well as bus and coach drivers. Electrical workers, machinists, etc., usually belong to the unions of their respective crafts but in some few instances by arrangement with these unions are in the street railway organization. The One Big Union has a considerable membership among the employees of the Winnipeg Street Railway and its suburban lines. The Teamsters' union has a membership of over 1,400. For longshoremen there are several unions. The International Longshoremen's Association has in its organization the employees of this class in Halifax and Saint John but in Montreal as well as in Vancouver, Victoria, etc., they belong to independent unions. The National Association of Marine Engineers, affiliated with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, has members throughout Canada. A seamen's union has members on the Pacific coast. Two Masters' and Mates' associations, not classed as labour organizations, are referred to in Chapter XXIII, Non-Trade Union Associations. The National Catholic Unions and a number of ship labourers' unions, independent, in Quebec, have several hundred members in these industries.

Public Employment, Personal Service and Amusement.—Those organizations of federal government employees which are classed as unions, include postal clerks, letter carriers, railway mail clerks and the Amalgamated Civil Servants of Canada, membership in which is open to all classes of federal government employees. The total membership of these is approximately 8,000. The only union of provincial government employees is the Civil Service Association of Alberta with a membership of 900. Among civic employees the local unions chartered by the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada have a total membership of nearly 4,000. The International Association of Fire Fighters has a membership of about 2,400. There are also a number of unions chartered by the All-Canadian Congress of Labour and a number of independent unions. In personal service, the barbers' union and the hotel and restaurant employees each have over 500 members. The musicians' union and the stage employees' organization, which includes moving picture operators, have about five thousand members.

All Other Trades and General Labour.—The largest organizations in this group are the Lumber Workers' Industrial Union with 8,000 members, mostly in British Columbia and the northern part of Ontario, and the Industrial Workers of the World with 4,155, most of these also lumbermen in the same districts. The Commercial Telegraphers and the Firemen and Oilers organizations have over 1,400 and over 400 respectively, while the International Operating Engineers' Union has over 500, and the Brewery Workers' Union, including various classes of such employees, has 1,000. An item of interest is the existence of the only remaining Canadian unit of the Knights of Labour, namely the Papineau Assembly in Quebec with a membership of 120. The membership of the National Catholic Unions in this group, including employees in various classes of employment, chiefly in factories, is 21,715.

UNIONS HAVING LARGE MEMBERSHIPS IN CANADA

Of the 79 international craft unions with branches or members in Canada, there are 8 with 5,000 or more members, 4 of which are composed of employees who are identified with railway operation.

In the Canadian group are 5 bodies with over 5,000, one of which is also a railway organization. The names of the 13 organizations appear in the following table, being arranged according to numerical strength and among them they represent a total Canadian trade union membership of 106,753, comprised in 897 local branches; approximately 38 per cent of the total membership and about 33 per cent of the total trade union branches.

| Name of Organization | Number of Canadian Local Units | Reported Canadian Membership |
| Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees | 167 | 13,478 |

UNEMPLOYED WORKERS' ORGANIZATIONS

From information received in the Department it would appear that there are in existence throughout Canada various organizations of unemployed workers, but no information as to the number of locals or membership has been furnished for inclusion in this report.

CHARACTER AND DEVELOPMENT OF TRADE UNIONS

It was about the middle of the nineteenth century that trade union associations first came into existence, and these were independent in character. Usually these bodies consisted of workmen in a single craft in one locality, but as time went by, more associations came into being and as a natural consequence a movement started for a wider organization of workers. Some of the central bodies which resulted were fashioned along the lines of those already in existence in Great Britain and the United States and were general in character, including workingmen of all occupations in a particular industry. Other unions, however, were formed of workers in a single craft, or a number of related crafts, having one or more local branches in each locality and by the close of the century this type of union predominated.

In 1869 the Knights of Labour, an organization of the general type with local and trade assemblies, was formed in the United States. Later assemblies were organized in Canada and about the year 1885 had reached their greatest strength with a total membership in Canada and the United States of about one million. Shortly after this the membership of the organization began to decline and early in the twentieth century only a small number remained. A similar type of organization, but for a smaller area, was the Provincial Workmen's Association formed in 1879 among coal miners of Nova Scotia. This body attempted to organize all classes of workmen in the province but when this failed, it became a purely miners' union. In the meantime, most of the Craft organizations (chiefly international, that is having local branches in Canada as well as in the United States) had become united through affiliation with the American Federation of Labor. This body was formed in 1881 to promote the common interest of the union in legislation, etc., and to charter city central bodies (trades and Labour councils), state federations, etc., for similar purposes. The Federation has in affiliation a number of unions, each of which comprises all the classes of labour in a single industry, as for instance, the United Mine Workers of America. In Canada, the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, which was formed in 1873, functions similarly in promoting the common interest of the various organizations represented by it, chartering also local unions, trades and labour councils and provincial federations.

In 1902, when the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada decided in future to deny representation to local assemblies of the Knights of Labour and other unions conflicting in jurisdiction with the international unions, the Canadian Federation of Labour was formed under the name National Trades and Labour Congress. The unions in affiliation with the Federation, as well as other central bodies later organized, merged in the All-Canadian Congress of Labour in 1927.

The Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada was formed in 1921, following conferences of National Catholic unions in 1918 and succeeding years.

Other organizations to which separate chapters are devoted are: Industrial Workers of the World; the One Big Union, and the Amalgamated Mine Workers of Nova Scotia. In the chapter dealing with revolutionary labour organizations, reference is made to the Workers' Unity League of Canada formed in 1930.

TRADE UNIONS ACT, 1872

Previous to the year 1872, trade unionists in Canada encountered difficulties in connection with organization and other activities, as under English law still in force in some of the Canadian provinces this was considered as being in restraint of trade. In that year printers in Toronto and other cities went on strike to secure a nine-hour day and some of these were arrested on a charge of conspiracy in restraint of trade. As a result of these arrests the Dominion Parliament passed the Trade Unions Act which declared the purposes of a trade union not to be unlawful so as to render any person liable to prosecution merely on the ground that they were in restraint of trade. The Act also permitted the registration of unions in the office of the Secretary of State, such unions thereby securing legal status in certain respects. The Criminal Law Amendment Act enacted during the same session contained provisions as to picketing, intimidation, etc. An amendment to section 501 of the Criminal Code, passed at the fifth session of the seventeenth Parliament added a clause with reference to picketing as follows:—

> Attending at or near or approaching to such house or other place as aforesaid, in order merely to obtain or communicate information, shall not be deemed a watching or besetting within the meaning of this Section.

The law as to picketing, etc., is found in the Criminal Code, Sections 496-502, Chapter 36. The provisions in the Trade Unions Act as to criminal conspiracy is also now included in the Criminal Code.

Legislation regarding trade unions is also in effect in the provinces of Quebec, Manitoba and British Columbia.

Quebec.—The Professional Syndicates Act which was passed by the Quebec Legislature in 1924, constitutes a union, after certain formalities are complied with, a corporation enjoying civil rights. It also provides for collective labour agreements between employees and employers. The unions registered under this Act are shown in a subsequent Chapter on Registration of Trade Unions and Union Labels.

Manitoba.—By an act of the Manitoba Legislature passed in 1920, employers and employees have the right to organize and also the right to bargain with one another individually or collectively through their organizations or representatives. In the event of a dispute such dispute shall be submitted to a Joint Council of Industry composed of five members, two representing employers and two the employees, the fifth to be chairman and this council shall make an investigation and report its findings.

British Columbia.—In 1911 the Legislature of British Columbia passed an act setting forth the liability of trade unions in respect to strikes, lockouts or trade or labour disputes. The law further stipulated that trade unions were not liable for communicating certain information and employing fair arguments to induce workmen not to renew contracts, nor for the publishing of certain information respecting strikes.

LABOUR IN POLITICS

As early as 1887 delegates to the anual conventions of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada have advocated the participation of the Congress in politics. In that year a resolution was adopted by the Congress which declared "that in the opinion of this Congress the working classes of Canada will never be properly represented in Parliament or receive justice in the legislation of the country, until they are represented by men of their own class, and members of this Congress pledge themselves to use their utmost endeavours, wherever practicable, to bring out candidates for local and Dominion elections in the constituencies in which they reside."

As a result of the constant agitation for political action, the Congress, at its convention in 1900, gave approval of independent political action on the part of its members, and in 1906, provincial autonomy in the establishing of labour political parties was sanctioned

It was not until 1917 that further action along these lines was taken, when the Congress approved of a suggestion that trade unionists in Canada adopt the British plan and organize a labour party on a basis which would permit of united action on the part of organized workers, socialists, fabians, co-operators and farmers. This resulted in the formation in 1921 of the Canadian Labour Party. During the next six years, as a result of the endeavours of members of this Party some success was achieved in co-ordinating the activities of the various political bodies, and the establishment of branches in a number of the provinces. In 1927 the general secretary resigned, and as a result the main organization ceased to function, and only the Quebec and Alberta sections continued active. In addition to these two branches of the Canadian Labour Party, there were a number of independent labour parties functioning throughout the Dominion. These labour parties more or less disappeared with the establishment in 1932 of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation. At the inauguration meeting of this body which was held in Calgary, Alberta, delegates were present who were said to represent labour, farmer and socialist groups in five provinces—Ontario, Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia. Since then branches have been established in the Province of Quebec and the Maritimes.

Among the stated purposes of this body is the establishment in the Dominion of a co-operative commonwealth by which production, distribution and exchange would be regulated to supply human needs and not for profit, and the taking over by the state of the public utilities and major industries.

As mentioned in the previous report, representatives of the Federation were elected to the provincial legislature of British Columbia, and at the last Provincial elections in Ontario and Saskatchewan were successful in electing one or more candidates. In the Nova Scotia provincial elections none of the candidates endorsed by the Federation were elected.

In 1931, a National Labour Party was formed according to an announcement appearing in the Canadian Unionist, official organ of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour. In a manifesto, the aim of this party was declared to be "to organize the workers politically for the purpose of establishing, by constitutional means, an equitable economic and social order." While not very active, it is understood this party is still in existence.

LABOUR MEMBERS OF PARLIAMENT AND PROVINCIAL LEGISLATURES

Federal Parliament: James S. Woodsworth (Party Leader), Winnipeg, North Centre (Manitoba); Humphrey Mitchell, Hamilton East (Ontario); Abraham A. Heaps, Winnipeg North (Manitoba); Angus MacInnis, Vancouver South (British Columbia).

Provincial Legislatures: Alberta—Fred. J. White (Party Leader), Calgary; C. L. Gibbs, Edmonton; Chris. Pattison, Edson; Andrew Smeaton, Lethbridge. British Columbia—Thomas A. Uphill, Fernie. Manitoba—S. J. Farmer, Winnipeg; W. Ivens, Winnipeg; J. Queen, Winnipeg; Marcus Hyman, Winnipeg; F. H. Lawrence, St. Boniface.

In addition to the political parties mentioned previously, there are other organizations, also, which nominate labour candidates for municipal councils, school boards, commissions, etc., such labour candidate being, in many instances, endorsed by trades and labour councils and similar non-political labour bodies.

Reference is made, in a subsequent chapter to the Communist Party of Canada, the political organization of the Communist movement. After the Communist Party of Canada by court decisions in 1931, was declared an unlawful organization under Section 98 of the Criminal Code, candidates advocating similar radical, social and political policies have been nominated under the name "United Front." In recent provincial elections some of these candidates were nominated but none were elected.

CANADIAN LABOUR DEFENSE LEAGUE

The Canadian Labour Defense League was established in Toronto, Ont., in September, 1925. The League "aims to fraternally unite all forces willing to co-operate in the work of labour defense into a broad national organization based upon individual and collective membership that will stand as an ever-willing and ever-ready champion for the defense and support of the industrial and agricultural workers, regardless of their political or industrial affiliations, race, colour, or nationality, who are persecuted on account of their activity in the struggle for the class interests of the industrial and agricultural workers." Among the objects of the organization, as stated, are the following: (1) to provide legal defense for all workers arrested and prosecuted for any form of working class activity; (2) to provide support for the families of prisoners; (3) to stand for freedom of speech, assembly and organization for the working class.

Representatives of the league, on several occasions have interviewed the Prime Minister and members of the Cabinet with a view of having Section 98 of the Criminal Code repealed.

On January 30, 1934, Rev. A. E. Smith, general secretary of the league, was charged with seditious utterances when the Grand Jury under Mr. Justice Kingstone returned a true bill on an indictment presented by Peter White, K.C., special Crown prosecutor. The speech, in which the utterances complained of were alleged to have been made, was delivered in Toronto, January 17. The trial, which lasted four days and ended on March 8, resulted in acquittal, when a jury under Chief Justice Rose brought in a verdict of " not guilty."

The headquarters of the League is at 331 Bay St., Toronto 2, Ont.

THE WORKERS' EDUCATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF ONTARIO

This organization, which has branches in various cities in the province, is an association of workingmen and others established to provide higher non-technical education, such as that available to students at the universities. Financial assistance and other support is obtained from labour organizations and universities, and it is from these bodies that the officers are elected.

The movement originated in the Workers' Educational Association of Great Britain, established in 1903, and has since spread to various countries throughout the world. In 1919 at Toronto, Ont., the first branch of the Association was organized. Since then other branches have been formed throughout the Dominion. In each centre where branches have been established classes are formed and lectures given on social and economic problems, literature, etc.

In Chapter IX (Federations of Trade Unions) of this report reference is made to the Labour Educational Association of Ontario.

I. INTERNATIONAL LABOUR ORGANIZATIONS IN CANADA

American Federation of Labor—Functions of the Federation—Plan of Organization—Change in Constitution Made at 1934 Convention—Certain Railroad Brotherhoods not Affiliated—Objects and Principles of the Federation—Departments—International Craft Organizations—Those in Affiliation With the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada.

The majority of trade unionists in Canada being identified with international organizations and thus associated with the American Federation of Labor, it is considered appropriate to make reference to some of the more important features of this organization. The American Federation of Labor, in addition to issuing charters of affiliation to central organizing bodies, grants certificates of membership to certain classes of wage-earners over whom no existing organization claims jurisdiction. When the membership of such bodies becomes sufficiently numerous a central organization may be established, the members of the craft concerned being directly transferred, and the new main organization so formed becomes an affiliate of the Federation. The Federation, through its staff of organizers is constantly assisting in establishing new unions, either as branches of an affiliated central organization or as units under its own control. During the past fiscal year of the Federation, 370 of the last named local units were established. The plan of organization of the Federation which is a voluntary grouping of self-governing organizations, all having complete autonomy over the craftsmen covered by their respective charters, is founded on a scale which its affiliates consider to be adequate to meet the present requirements of the organized workers. While the American Federation of Labor is an exponent of organization on trade lines, it does not oppose the amalgamation of those unions composed of closely allied crafts, such action being given approval when the organizations concerned voluntarily desire to amalgamate. At certain conventions of the Federation, resolutions have been introduced seeking support for a system of industrial unionism, whereby the workers in a particular industry would be grouped in one organization, but such proposals have heretofore met with defeat.

However, at the 1934 convention, the committee on resolutions, having had fourteen resolutions presented to it dealing with the form of organization in the A. F. of L. brought in the following recommendation, after reviewing the condition prevailing in mass production industries:—

To meet this new condition, the executive council is directed to issue charters for national or international unions in the automotive, cement, aluminum and such other mass production and miscellaneous industries as in the judgment of the executive council may be necessary to meet the situation.

That the executive council shall at the earliest practical date inaugurate, manage, promote and conduct a campaign or organization in the iron and steel industry.

That in order to protect and safeguard the members of such national and international unions as are chartered, the American Federation of Labor shall for a provisional period direct the policies, administer the business and designate the administrative and financial officers of such newly organized unions.

After considerable discussion the convention adopted the recommendation of the committee.

Provision is made in the constitution of the Federation for the establishment of departments, through which organizations of kindred trades are brought together to deal with matters pertaining to their respective industries, charters being issued also to state federations and local trades and labour councils. The American Federation of Labor has always been most active in promoting legislation intended for the improvement of working conditions of that part of its affiliated membership located in the United States, constituting the great majority of the organized workers, and has on many occasions rendered both moral and financial assistance to affiliated organizations in their efforts to secure improvement in trade conditions. The Federation and its various departments endeavour to adjust differences which arise between the affiliated organizations on the question of trade jurisdiction, and in most instances the decisions arrived at are respected.

The American Federation of Labor exchanges fraternal delegates with the British Trades Union Congress and the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada (which is referred to in Chapter II) and acknowledges the last-named as head of the international trade unionism in Canada so far as legislative matters are concerned, paying a per capita tax to the Congress on the members of its directly chartered federal and trades unions (those bodies over which no international craft organizations claims jurisdiction) located in the Dominion. The authority of the American Federation of Labor to deal with trade matters as they affect international organizations on the North American continent is fully conceded by the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, which body usually accepts the decisions rendered by the Federation. That such judgments be respected, has been assisted materially by the Congress refusing to accept per capita tax or to seat at annual conventions delegates from organizations which had refused to obey the instructions of the Federation. The Congress has on occasions, however, permitted the affiliation of Canadian membership of international organizations, notwithstanding that they had been suspended by the American Federation of Labor.

The more important international labour organizations, including the railroad brotherhoods whose members are employed in engine and train service, have local branches in Canada. The railroad brotherhoods, unlike the majority of the other organizations with branches in Canada, are not affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. Most of the central organizations are what are known as craft unions, although some of them, such as miners and street railway employees, are industrial in character, embracing in their memberships nearly if not all of the workmen employed in the respective industries. The stronger of the international organizations maintain in Canada resident vice-presidents or other officials for the purpose of looking after the interest of the Canadian membership and of reporting to their respective headquarters on trade conditions and the operations of their local branch unions in the Dominion. These officials keep in close touch with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, which body renders assistance when required in promoting the cause of the various international labour bodies operating in Canada. Some of the international organizations have in Canada dues collecting agencies, the moneys so collected being deposited in a bank in the locality where the agency is operating and by whom disbursements are made to the Canadian membership.

AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR

The American Federation of Labor was founded in Pittsburg, Pa., in September, 1881, its original name being Organized Trades and Labour Unions of the United States and Canada. In 1886 the present name was chosen. The organization, as its name implies, is a federated body and includes in its membership most of the important international unions. Besides granting charters to national and international organizations and trade departments, charters are also issued to state federations, city central councils, and such local trade and federal unions as do not fall within the jurisdiction of any existing international bodies.

The aims and objects of the American Federation of Labor as set forth in the constitution, are as follows:—

1. The object of this federation shall be the encouragement and formation of local trade and labour unions, and closer federation of such societies through the organization of central trade and labour unions in every city, and the further combinations of such bodies into state, territorial or provincial organizations to secure legislation in the interest of the working masses.
2. The establishment of national and international trade unions, based upon a strict recognition of the autonomy of each trade, and the promotion and advancement of such bodies.
3. The establishment of departments composed of national or international unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, of the same industry, and which departments shall be governed in conformity with the laws of the American Federation of Labor.
4. An American federation of all national and international trade unions to aid and assist each other; to aid and encourage the sale of union-label goods, and to secure legislation in the interest of the working people, and influence public opinion by peaceful and legal methods in favour of organized labour.
5. To aid and encourage the labour press of America.

PRINCIPLES OF THE FEDERATION

1. The abolition of all forms of involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime.
2. Free schools, free text books and compulsory education.
3. Unrelenting protest against the issuance and abuse of injunction process in labour disputes.
4. A work day of not more than eight hours in the twenty-four hour day.
5. A strict recognition of not over eight hours per day on all federal, state or municipal work, and not less than the prevailing per diem wage rate of the class of employment in the vicinity where the work is performed.

6. Release from employment one day in seven.
7. The abolition of the contract system of public work.
8. The municipal ownership of public utilities.
9. The abolition of the sweat-shop system.
10. Sanitary inspection of factory, workshop, mine and home.
11. Liability of employers for injury to body or loss of life.
12. The nationalization of telegraph and telephone.
13. The passage of anti-child labour laws in states where they do not exist and rigid defence of them where they have been enacted into law.
14. Woman suffrage co-equal with man suffrage.
15. Suitable and plentiful playgrounds, for children in all cities.
16. The initiative and referendum and the imperative mandate and right of recall.
17. Continued agitation for the public bath system in all cities.
18. Qualification in permits to build of all cities and towns that there shall be bathrooms and bathroom attachments in all houses or compartments used for habitation.
19. We favour a system of finance whereby money shall be issued exclusively by the Government, with such regulations and restrictions as will protect it from manipulation by the banking interests for their own private gain.

For organization purposes the American Federation of Labor has divided the various states of the United States and the provinces of the Dominion of Canada into districts, the boundary lines of the two countries being entirely disregarded. Of the staff of regular organizers one is resident in Canada, where also there are a number of volunteer organizers.

Under the constitution only one central organization of a particular trade or calling is granted a charter of affiliation, no recognition being given to dual national or international unions, i.e., bodies covering the same calling, unless the written consent is given of the existing affiliated unions whose jurisdiction is involved.

The revenue of the Federation is derived from a per capita tax upon the fully paid-up membership of all affiliated bodies, and on a varying scale, as follows: (a) from international or national trade unions, one cent per month; (b) from local trade unions and federal labour unions chartered direct by the Federation, 35 cents per month (12½ cents of which must be set aside to be used only in case of strike or lockout involving such local or federal union); (c) from city central and state bodies, $10 per year, payable quarterly. Levies of one cent per member per week may be made on all affiliated unions for a period not exceeding ten weeks in any one year to assist in the support of an affiliated national or international union engaged in a protracted strike or lockout. Local trade unions and federal labour unions, chartered direct, are also required to forward to the Federation 25 per cent of the total initiation fee received by the local union, which in no case shall be less than $1.

As a result of the development of its organization, the American Federation of Labor has established departments covering four leading groups of industries, viz., building trades, metal trades, railroad employees, and union label trades. Each department, which comprises organizations affiliated with the Federation, has power to manage and finance its own business. These departments are charged with watching the interest of the workers in the industries represented and may initiate or assist movements, the aim of which is to promote the welfare of such workers.

Local councils of the departments are in operation in various cities, and the union branches of these respective trades are thus brought together for joint action, their conduct of course must be in conformity with the general policy of the American Federation of Labor. Each department is entitled to send a delegate to the annual conventions of the Federation. The mining trades department, which came into existence on July 8, 1912, was dissolved on July 1, 1922.

According to information received in the Department, the Building Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor had 16 organizations in affiliation in 1933. During 1934, three other organizations, the Carpenters, Bricklayers and Masons and the Electrical Workers, made application for affiliation but the Building Trades Department convention, held just previous to the convention of the A. F. of L. refused to seat representatives of these bodies. The dispute was taken to the convention of the American Federation of Labor and after a lengthy discussion occupying several sessions, the convention of the Building Trades Department was declared illegal and in the event of a subsequent settlement not being reached, a new convention of the Department was to be called within forty-five days by President Green of the A. F. of L. No settlement being reached the official convention was called on November 8, to meet in Washington, November 26, 1934. According to the report of the credential committee, the official call had been issued to the presidents of nineteen organizations, eight of which responded but only seven were represented. These were: Bricklayers and Masons; Carpenters; Electrical Workers; Engineers;

Hod Carriers; Marble Polishers, and Teamsters, the combined membership of these organizations at the close of 1934, being 596,176, comprised in 4,723 local branches. There are also affiliated with the department 399 state and local building trades councils, of which number, 18 are reported to be located in the Dominion.

At the close of the year the Metal Trades Department had in affiliation 17 international unions, whose total membership was approximately 600,000. In addition to the central organization in affiliation, the department had 42 state and local metal trades councils, none of these, however, are located in Canada.

In affiliation with the Railway Employees' Department of the Federation there are nine international organizations, made up, to a large extent, of railway shop employees, and having an approximate membership of 400,000. In addition, there are a number of railroad system federations or departments under charter, seven of which cover employees on the following Canadian railways: Canadian National Railways, comprising Atlantic, central and western regions; Canadian Pacific; Dominion Atlantic; Northern Alberta Railways; Temiskaming and Northern Ontario and Toronto, Hamilton and Buffalo. Division No. 4, embracing the shop mechanics employed on all Canadian lines, also operates under charter from the Railway Employees' Department.

The Union Label Trades Department had as affiliates 38 of the international trade unions with an approximate combined membership of 230,000. This department had also 151 local label leagues under charter, of which six are located in Canada as follows: Cap de la Madeleine, Que.; Montreal, Que.; Hamilton, Ont.; Kitchener, Ont.; Toronto, Ont., and Vancouver, B.C.

The American Federation of Labor has a staff of regular organizers on salary, one of whom is resident in Canada.

At each convention, in addition to others, a committee on adjustment is appointed for the purpose of investigating and endeavouring to bring about settlements of jurisdictional disputes between unions which have not been adjusted through other agencies, and in the majority of cases amicable adjustments are reached.

Particulars as to membership together with the names of the chief officers of the American Federation of Labor are recorded in Chapter XVI.—Organizations of Workers Throughout the World.

INTERNATIONAL CRAFT ORGANIZATIONS

Besides the American Federation and its 109 affiliates, there are various other labour organizations, including the railroad brotherhoods, operating on the North American continent. In the list which appears in Chapter XVIII, Table 3, are the names of those bodies identified with the A.F. of L., as well as those of other organizations of which information has been received in the department, numbering 123. The railroad brotherhoods, workers in engine and train service, comprise one of the strongest labour groups on the North American continent.

During the year the American Federation of Labor issued a charter to the Federation of Flat Glass Workers of America, an organization with a reported membership of 12,000.

The only branch of the International Pocketbook Workers' Union (an affiliate of the United Leather Workers' International Union) located in Montreal, Que., ceased to function during the year, and as a result the organization has been dropped from the list.

In addition to the organizations referred to in this chapter there are a number of labour bodies operating on this continent, but as they did not make returns to the Department, and because they are not considered important factors in the labour movement, owing to the fact that their activity is confined to a very small area, their names are not included in this report.

With but few exceptions the organizations operating in Canada and the United States are what are commonly known as craft unions, 109 of which are in direct affiliation with the American Federation of Labor. The American Federation of Full-Fashioned Hosiery Workers, the American Federation of Silk Workers, and the International Pocket Book Workers' Union, which though not directly chartered by the American Federation of Labor, are indirectly affiliates by reason of holding charters from organizations which are in direct affiliation, and are therefore designated as affiliates of the Federation, making 112 bodies so identified.

Of the 123 organizations whose names appear in Chapter XVIII, Table 3, 80 have extended their jurisdiction into Canada by establishing one or more branches or having members resident in the Dominion. The American Federation of Labor has also granted charters to 10 local unions in Canada, there being no central organization covering the work people so organized, making 81 international unions with Canadian affiliations, one more than recorded in 1933. Of the international labour bodies operating in the Dominion 73 are affiliated with the American Federation of Labor.

The Industrial Workers of the World and the One Big Union, international central organizing industrial unions but having no connection with the labour movement as represented by the A.F. of L. are discussed in subsequent chapters.

Fifty-eight of the affiliates of the American Federation of Labor, as well as the Federation itself, have given recognition to the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada (as head of the internationally organized labour movement of the Dominion) by affiliating the whole of their Canadian membership with that body. The Brotherhood of Railroad Signalmen, which, though having been suspended from the A.F. of L. in 1928 over a question of jurisdiction, maintains its affiliation with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada for its Canadian members, which makes 60 international organizations identified with the Canadian body.

II. TRADES AND LABOUR CONGRESS OF CANADA

Established in 1873—Objects and Principles—Basis of Representation and Membership—Representatives at the International Labour Conference, Geneva—Attendance at 1934 Convention—Receipts and Expenditures—Numerical and Financial Standing for Twenty Years—Officers of the Congress—Provincial Executive Committees—Fraternal Delegates.

The Trades and Labour Congress of Canada was originally formed in 1873, but it was not until 1883 that the first thoroughly representative Congress of trade unions in the Dominion of Canada was held. This was held in Toronto, at the call of the Toronto Trades and Labour Council, twenty-seven labour bodies being represented by 47 delegates. There was a lapse of three years between the first and second meeting of the Congress but since that time conventions have been held regularly each year, the fiftieth anniversary being fittingly observed in Toronto, September 10-15, 1934. The main function of the Congress is to protect the interest of the workers in legislative matters, but it has on occasion rendered financial and other assistance to organized workers identified with the international trade union movement. At the annual conventions of the Congress affiliated trade unions have the privilege of presenting resolutions seeking desired legislation. If these demands are approved, the method of presenting them to the Federal Parliament or Provincial Legislatures provides (1) that the executive council submit those pertaining to matters under the control of the Dominion Government; (2) that provincial federations (of which there are two operating under charters from the Congress) and provincial executive committees deal with legislative demands coming within the jurisdiction of the respective legislatures. Heretofore the Congress issued charters to provincial federations and trades and labour councils, as well as to unions which are not eligible for membership in any of the existing recognized international or national organizations but at the 1934 convention the constitution was amended so as to permit the issuing of two classes of charters in the latter class, viz.; (a) Those issued as federal units covering employees engaged in industrial activities, and such charters will only be issued when application for same has been approved by the local trades and labour council, if one in existence; (b) Civic employees units. The Canadian Congress concedes to the American Federation of Labour the right to deal with trade and jurisdictional controversies and it also respects the jurisdiction of existing international bodies.

OBJECTS OF THE CONGRESS

(a) To encourage and form such organizations of workers as conform to its rules and regulations;

(b) To establish city or district central councils based upon the strict recognition of the autonomy of each affiliated organization and the promotion and advancement of such bodies;

(c) To establish and maintain a congress with suitable headquarters at Ottawa and subsidiary Executive Committees or Federations of Labour in each of the provinces of Canada for the purpose of assisting each other;

(d) To aid and encourage the sale of union labelled goods.

(e) To influence public opinion by peaceful and legal methods in favour of organized labour and to secure legislation in the interests of the working people;

(f) To further the spirit of international trade unionism;

(g) Generally for such purposes as may best advance the interests of working people.

PLATFORM OF PRINCIPLES

The platform of principles, as revised by the executive council following the 1931 convention, is as follows:—

1. Free education and compulsory school attendance.
2. Maximum legal working day of eight hours and establishment of five-day week.
3. Holidays with pay.
4. Insertion and enforcement of fair wage regulations (based on established union conditions) in all government work direct and indirect.
5. Public ownership and democratic management of all public utilities.
6. Government control and fullest development of all natural resources.
7. Establishment of a Tariff Board on which labour will be fully represented.
8. Revenue by direct taxation.
9. Abolition of non-elective legislative bodies.

10. Exclusion of all races that cannot be properly assimilated into the national life of Canada.
11. The demand for, and use of, the union label.
12. Prevention of employment of children under sixteen years of age.
13. Equal pay for equal work for men and women.
14. Voluntary arbitration in labour disputes.
15. Proportional representation with group constituencies.
16. The encouragement of the establishment of Consumers' Co-operative Societies.
17. Unemployment insurance.
18. Old age pensions, state insurance for sickness and disability.
19. Uniformity of labour laws throughout the Dominion.
20. Disarmament.
21. Establishment of a Colonization and Immigration Council on which labour will be fully represented.

REPRESENTATION AND MEMBERSHIP

The basis of representation of affiliated bodies at annual or other conventions is: From local branch unions in Canada of international and national organizations and trade unions directly chartered by the Congress: One delegate for the first 100 members or less, and one for each additional 100 members or the majority fraction thereof; international and national organizations which have affiliated their entire membership in the Dominion are entitled to one additional delegate, who must be elected from their Canadian membership. Trades and labour councils and provincial federations of labour are entitled to three delegates each. Article III of the constitution of the Trades and Labour Congress governing membership and charters is as follows:—

Sec. 1.—The membership of the Trades and Labour Congress shall consist of such trades and labour bodies as are hereinafter defined and conform to its rules and regulations.

Sec. 2.—Any international union holding a charter from the American Federation of Labor shall be entitled to affiliate its entire Canadian membership; and any local unit in Canada of an international union, chartered by the American Federation of Labor, which is not so affiliated, shall be entitled to direct membership in this Congress.

Sec. 3.—Charters or certificates of affiliation, bearing the signature of the president and secretary-treasurer of the Congress and its seal, may be granted by the executive council of the Congress to any body of workers in Canada who are not eligible for membership in a recognized international or national union.

Sec. 4.—The Congress shall form and charter Trades and Labour Councils and Provincial Federations of Labour, composed of such organizations as are entitled to membership in the Congress.

Sec. 5.—No international or national union other than those already enumerated in sections 2, 3, and 4 shall be admitted to membership except by two-thirds vote of the annual convention of this Congress, but in no case shall any organization be admitted to membership whose jurisdiction conflicts with that of an international or national union already affiliated to this Congress.

Sec. 6.—The fee for a charter and supplies for Provincial Federations of Labour, Trades and Labour Councils and such labour unions as may be performed and chartered direct by this Congress shall be $10, and each organization so chartered shall be supplied with an official seal.

Sec. 7.—The executive council shall have power, apart from any other power enumerated in this constitution, by a majority vote of its members, given either at a meeting of the council, or otherwise, to suspend from membership any affiliated or chartered body which in the opinion of the executive has violated either the letter or spirit of the constitution, or which has, or the officers of which have (a) encouraged or advocated secession from international unions or assisted in forming independent or dual organizations; (b) refused to join or affiliate with an international union of its trade or calling when so ordered by the executive. Such suspension shall debar any organization from all rights and benefits of membership in this Congress until the next annual convention, when the suspension may be made permanent and the charter revoked or affiliation cancelled by majority of the delegates present on a roll call vote. Any organization may also be suspended from membership or its charter revoked or its membership cancelled upon a motion introduced at any regular convention and adopted by majority of the delegates present on a roll call vote.

The revenue of the Congress, besides the fee charged for charters supplied to such bodies as are entitled to them, is derived from a tax of 18 cents per member per year from international and national organizations and from unions chartered direct by the Congress, 36 cents per member from trades and labour councils, and a lump payment of $10 per annum from provincial federations of labour. The Congress owns the building in Ottawa in which the head office is located, and which is valued at $40,000, the management being vested in a board of trustees composed of the executive council.

REPRESENTATIVES AT THE INTERNATIONAL LABOUR CONFERENCE

At the eighteenth regular session of the International Labour Conference held at Geneva, Switzerland, Mr. Tom Moore, president, and Mr. P. R. Bengough, vice-president of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, being appointed by the Dominion Government on the nomination of the Congress, were present as Canadian Workers' delegate and adviser respectively.

ATTENDANCE AT THE 1934 CONVENTION

The fiftieth (Golden Jubilee) convention of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada was held at Toronto, Ont., September 10-15, 1934. Credentials were received for 373 delegates, 42 of whom represented international organizations which had affiliated the whole of their Canadian membership with the Congress; 274 represented local unions, 43 represented trades and labour councils, 11 represented divisions of railroad telegraphers, 1 represented a provincial federation and the 2 fraternal delegates present represented respectively the British Trades Union Congress and the American Federation of Labor.

The report of the secretary-treasurer named the 60 international organizations which had paid per capita on the whole of their Canadian membership, as well the 2 national unions, federations, trades and labour councils, and showed that the total membership for which per capita tax had been paid up to the close of the fiscal year was 103,424, a decrease of 2,122, comprised in 1,523 local branch unions, a gain of 11. In reporting the membership, the secretary-treasurer explained that in normal years about twenty-five per cent should be added to the reported membership to include those relieved from fees because of unemployment and other causes. He further explained that in the present abnormal times, it would be a conservative estimate to raise that to at least fifty per cent.

The international and national organizations in affiliation with the Congress are indicated thus () in the tables in a subsequent chapter giving the membership of the respective unions.

The total receipts for the fiscal year, including the balance on hand, amounted to $25,228.54; expenditure, $22,167.50, leaving a balance of $3,061.04.

The secretary-treasurer also submitted a report of the trustees of Congress headquarters, the figures for which were included in the above totals, and which showed receipts of $3,531.70, and expenses for maintenance, etc., of $2,410.19.

The following table shows the paid-up membership and receipts and expenditures for the past twenty years:—

| Year | Membership | Total receipts | Expenditure | Year | Membership | Total receipts | Expenditure |
| | | $ cts. | $ cts. | | | $ cts. | $ cts |
| 1915 | 71,419 | 13,557 12 | 11,542 87 | 1925 | 105,912 | 23,274 41 | 20,950 35 |
| 1922 | 132,071 | 25,157 02 | 22,877 11 | 1932 | 122,129 | 39,260 64 | 23,128 86 |

The figures for the membership of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada are 17,305 greater than that claimed by that organization, the explanation being that the respective affiliated bodies in reporting to the Department included all members who were in good standing, while the Congress only reports the number of members for whom per capita tax had been received. Besides the affiliated membership of central organizations the Trades and Labour Congress had 65 directly chartered local unions with a combined membership of 6,151 which figure is included in the total membership of 120,729.

III. ALL-CANADIAN CONGRESS OF LABOUR

Formed as the Representative of National and Independent Unions in the Dominion—Preamble to Constitution—Purposes—Membership and Representation—No Convention in 1934—Affiliated Central Organizations—Officers of the Congress.

The All-Canadian Congress of Labour came into existence at a conference of trade union representatives held in March, 1927. Following several conferences between representatives of the Canadian Federation of Labour (a body formed in 1902) and some of the other national unions, a preliminary meeting of representatives of such bodies was held in Toronto, Ont., on November, 22-23, 1926, at which conference it was arranged to hold a convention in Montreal on March 16, 1927. Committees were appointed to call the convention and to draft a constitution. On February 4, 1927, an invitation was extended to all national and independent unions in Canada to send delegates to the proposed meeting, the call being signed by C. J. Whitley, secretary of the Canadian Federation of Labour, and M. M. MacLean, secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees. The convention, which opened in Montreal on March 16, 1927, was attended by 107 delegates representing the following eight organizations: Canadian Federation of Labour; Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees; One Big Union; Mine Workers' Union of Canada; Electrical Communication Workers of Canada; Canadian Electrical Trades Union; Amalgamated Carpenters of Canada, and the Canadian Federation of Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers. The meeting was presided over by two chairmen—D. Giroux (of the Canadian Federation of Labour) and A. R. Mosher (of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees).

The conference adopted a resolution establishing the All-Canadian Congress of Labour, which is embodied in the preamble to the constitution, as follows:—

Whereas, we the representatives of national and independent unions in Canada, meeting in convention in the City of Montreal, Quebec, on the 16th to the 19th of March, 1927, are convinced that—

(a) the Canadian labour movement must be freed from the reactionary influence of United States-controlled unions;

(b) Canadian workers require a new organization through which they may collectively promote their general welfare and raise their economic and social standard;

(c) while the workers, under the present system cannot obtain the full value of their labour, it is nevertheless necessary to strive at all times to procure higher real wages and better conditions of labour;

(d) it is necessary to promote among the workers a thorough understanding of working-class economics;

Therefore, be it resolved, that a central body composed of the national and independent unions of Canada be here established to give expression to these aims and objects.

The Canadian Federation of Labour, having decided to merge its identity with the new congress, a committee was appointed to wind up its affairs, and in due course passed out of existence.

PURPOSES OF THE CONGRESS

The purposes of the All-Canadian Congress, as set forth in Article II of the constitution, are as follows:—

Article II.—PURPOSES.—The congress shall promote the interests of its affiliated organizations and strive to improve the economic and social conditions of the workers by:

(a) That organization of the workers in autonomous bodies for economic action, i.e., organization in the industrial field.

(b) Assisting the workers, through education, to realize the necessity of working-class political action.

(c) Furthering such legislation as shall be of immediate benefit to the workers, and which tends to increase their social and political power.

The head office of the Congress is in Ottawa, where in 1930 the organization opened new offices in the building of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees.

MEMBERSHIP AND REPRESENTATION

The membership is derived from (a) affiliated national unions and (b) chartered independent local unions. Charters are also issued to central councils composed of delegates from national or independent unions identified with the Congress, but such bodies have no representation at conventions of the Congress, neither are they required to pay per capita tax. The representation at annual or special conventions is as follows: (a) Affiliated national unions, two delegates representing the general executive board and one delegate from each local unit, (b) independent local unions, one delegate each.

The revenue of the Congress is derived as follows: (a) From affiliated national unions two cents per member per month, (b) Local unions directly chartered by the congress, 15 cents per member per month, and 50 cents of each initiation fee.

ACCEPTS INDUSTRIAL UNIONISM

NO CONVENTION HELD IN 1934

The Executive Board of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour decided, after consulting the affiliated national unions, to postpone the convention which should have taken place at Montreal in November, 1934.

It was stated that "as in 1931 and subsequent depression years, many of the local units, with a large proportion of their members out of work, were unable to meet the expense of sending delegates. It was apparent that, while a fair attendance could have been expected from units in Eastern Canada, any convention that could be held would not be representative of the workers in the greater part of the country."

Since the inception of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour in 1927, conventions have been held in Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg and Vancouver.

The fifth convention will be held at Montreal on May 7, 1935.

AFFILIATED CENTRAL ORGANIZATIONS

According to the report of the secretary, the affiliates of the Congress are as follows: Amalgamated Building Workers of Canada; Canadian Association of Railwaymen; Canadian Amalgamated Association of Seamen; Canadian Association of Stationary Engineers; Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees; Canadian Bushmen's Union; Canadian Electrical Trades Union; Canadian Printers' Union; Electrical Communication Workers of Canada; Vancouver and District Waterfront Workers, and the One Big Union. In addition to the above mentioned organizations, there were 48 directly chartered unions, an increase of 9, with a combined membership of 4,491, a gain of 1,371.

The total reported membership of the Congress at the close of the year 1934, was 52,355, a loss of 2,763, as compared with the year 1933. There are thirteen national labour councils under charters from the All-Canadian Congress of Labour, their location being given in Chapter XII.

OFFICERS OF THE CONGRESS

President—A. R. Mosher (president of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees), Box 395, Ottawa, Ont.

Vice-Presidents—Z. David (of the Canadian Association of Railwaymen), 365 Cartier Park, Montreal, Que.; Johnston McKinley (of the Amalgamated Building Workers of Canada), 607-50th St. E., Vancouver, B.C.

Secretary-Treasurer—W. T. Burford (of the Electrical Communication Workers of Canada), 230 Laurier Ave. W., Ottawa, Ont.

Other Members of the Executive Board—G. W. McCollum (of the Canadian Electrical Trades Union), 109 Sherwood Ave., Toronto, Ont.; M. M. Maclean (of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees), 230 Laurier Ave. W., Ottawa, Ont.; A. Meikle, (of the One Big Union), 245 Martin St., Winnipeg, Man.

IV. ONE BIG UNION

Formed in 1919 With a View to Displacing the Old-Established Plan of Craft Unions—Preamble to the Constitution—Numerical Standing of the Organization at the Close of the Year—Executive Board Members.

The One Big Union, or as it is more commonly called the O.B.U., came into existence at a meeting held in Calgary, Alberta, in March, 1919. At the 1918 convention of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada held in the city of Quebec, a number of delegates from labour bodies located in the four western provinces, feeling that their proposals had not received proper consideration by the representatives present, decided that they would recommend to the trade unions in Western Canada the desirability of holding a delegate conference previous to the next convention of the Trades Congress for the purpose of allowing the western membership of the Congress to formulate a policy which they might consider would be progressive, and which by such united action it was believed would secure support from the eastern delegates. The proposal for this western conference was later sponsored by the British Columbia Federation of Labour, a body then under charter from the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, but which has since lapsed. The conference, which met in March, 1919, was attended by 237 delegates from western labour bodies and two from Ontario, and although it had been previously stated that the meeting was not intended as a secessionist movement, the second resolution adopted favoured the immediate re-organization of the workers along industrial lines. It was further resolved that the conference recommend that the existing branches of the international organizations should sever their connections with such bodies. It was also decided that a referendum on the question be submitted to the entire Canadian trade union membership, and also that a proposed plan of the new organization, which, on the report of the policy committee, became known as the One Big Union, be presented at the same time. A meeting of the advocates of the One Big Union was held in Calgary on June 11, 1919, when the constitution tentatively agreed to in March, with certain amendments, was ratified, the preamble to which, setting forth the desire "to organize the wage-earners according to class and class needs," is as follows:—

Modern industrial society is divided into two classes, those who possess and not produce, and those who produce and not possess. Alongside this main division all other classifications fade into insignificance. Between these two classes a continual struggle takes place. As with buyers and sellers of any commodity, there exists a struggle on the one hand of the buyer to buy as cheaply as possible, and on the other, of the seller to sell for as much as possible, so with the buyers and sellers of labour power. In the struggle over the purchase and sale of labour power the buyers are always masters—the sellers always workers. From this fact arises the inevitable class struggle.

As industry develops and ownership becomes concentrated more and more into fewer hands; as the control of the economic forces of society become more and more the sole property of imperialistic finance, it becomes apparent that the workers, in order to sell their labour power with any degree of success, must extend their forms of organization in accordance with changing industrial methods. Compelled to organize for self-defence, they are further compelled to educate themselves in preparation for the social change which economic developments will produce whether they seek it or not.

The One Big Union, therefore, seeks to organize the wage-earners according to class and class needs and calls upon all workers to organize irrespective of nationality, sex, or craft into a workers' organization, so that they may be enabled to more successfully carry on the everyday fight over wages, hours of work, etc., and prepare ourselves for the day when production for profit shall be replaced by producton for use.

Fuller details concerning the One Big Union will be found in the issues of this report for the years 1919 and 1920.

MEMBERSHIP

The membership of the organization as reported to the Department at the close of 1919, the year in which it was established, was 41,150, comprised in 101 local units. For 1933 the general secretary reported a membership of 23,640, comprised in 47 local units, one of which with 340 members being located in the United States.

According to the report received for 1934, the organization had 48 local units in Canada, a gain of two, and a rank and file unit in the United States with a membership of 285, the Canadian membership being given at 23,580, a gain of 280.

The two central councils of the O.B.U. are listed in Chapter XII (Trades and Labour Councils).

OFFICERS OF THE ONE BIG UNION

The officers of the general executive board of the One Big Union are as follows: Chairman, J. Duff, Winnipeg, Man.; Secretary-treasurer, R. B. Russell, Winnipeg, Man.; T. H. Dunn, Winnipeg, Man.; A. Meikle, Winnipeg, Man.; W. McCallum, Winnipeg, Man., and T. Roberts, Sandon, B.C. Headquarters, 54 Adelaide St., Winnipeg, Man.

V. AMALGAMATED MINE WORKERS OF NOVA SCOTIA

Instituted at Glace Bay, N.S. on June 19, 1932—Provisional Officers Elected—First Convention of New Union—Preamble to the Constitution—Jurisdiction—Membership—Chief Officers.

The Amalgamated Mine Workers of Nova Scotia was established provisionally on June 19, 1932, by coal miners who had seceded from the United Mine Workers of America. A constitution for the organization was adopted at the first annual convention which was held at Glace Bay from September 19 to 24. The name adopted by the new body was that of an earlier union formed in 1917 for the purpose of uniting rival organizations of coal miners, and continued until 1919 when it became District 26 of the United Mine Workers of Nova Scotia.

The movement for another coal miners' union in Nova Scotia had become more intensified during the negotiations between the United Mine Workers of America, District 26, and the Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation Limited regarding a reduction in wages on the expiration of the existing agreement on January 31, 1932. A commission, which had been appointed to investigate the coal mining situation in Nova Scotia, recommended a reduction of ten per cent subject to certain limitations and the permanent closing down of certain mines employing a large number of miners. This reduction was put into effect by the mining companies notwithstanding that the miners had voted against agreeing to any such proposal. After further negotiations with the company, the miners called a special convention of the district, at which another vote was taken and resulted in the members voting in favour of accepting the reduction. Following this an agreement was signed. At this special convention three locals in the Glace Bay sub-district were debarred from voting, under the constitution of the union, being in arrears of dues. Subsequently another sub-district convention was held and four locals voted in favour of a provincial organization. Forthwith a new union was formed and provisional officers elected. Following the formation of the Amalgamated Mine Workers of Nova Scotia, the executive officers assisted by the local unions at No. 1 B, Reserve, Dominion No. 11 and Phalen Mines, which were in the main the basis of the organization, undertook to organize the miners of the district into the new union. Votes were taken in some of the United Mine Workers' local unions on the question of joining the Amalgamated, and in the instances made public the majority favoured the new union, although in one case there was a dispute as to the result of the vote both sides claiming a majority.

FIRST CONVENTION OF NEW UNION

At the first convention held in Glace Bay on September 19-24, 1932, there were delegates present from sixteen local unions.

Modern society is divided into two classes: those who produce and do not possess and those who possess and do not produce. Alongside of this main division all other classifications fade into insignificance. Between these two classes a continual struggle always exists.

The capitalistic class now owns and controls the means of production and raw material together with the finished product, and is using the same solely in the interest of their own class, and therefore must be diametrically opposed to the interest of the non-owning working or producing class. We therefore, call upon all workers engaged in the production of all industries, employed or unemployed, regardless of race, colour, creed, or occupation, to organize into industrial affiliated organizations for the purpose of protecting their interests against the encroachments of the capitalistic exploiting class, having the abolition of the wage system as their ultimate goal, by taking over the raw material, the machinery of production, and the means of distribution and convert same to render service to all humanity, instead of the present economic system of production for profits only, for the non-producing owning class and the exploitation of the producing non-owning class.

We firmly believe that the capitalistic system can no more function efficiently, and that we can expect only intensified exploitation and unemployment with all the misery and privation that follow in its wake until a new system is ushered in which will economically emancipate the workers from wage slavery which robs them at the point of production.

The following are the objects of the Amalgamated Mine Workers as set forth in the constitution:—

standards, wages, working hours, and enact legislation for the benefit and protection of all workers generally; (3) To educate the workers as to their class position in society and show them the way out from capitalistic exploitation to their economic emancipation; (4) To assist all workers during labour disputes or lockouts by financial contributions and our economic strength when necessary; (5) To insist upon all workers having committees of themselves to inspect mines and workshops.

Article III of the constitution reads as follows:—

(1) The supreme power of the organization lies in the referendum vote of the rank and file membership; (2) The district shall pay all expenses incurred in the conducting of all district elections; (3) That no lawyer be ever consulted or engaged in connection with any agreement, settlement of grievances or internal work of the union. Consultation with a lawyer to be only in purely criminal or legal cases. In all union work such as agreements, settlement of grievances or internal work of the union we will rely always on the advice, guidance, and counsel of members of our own organization; (4) This organization shall always remain a purely workers' organization and shall as far as possible be kept from all political influences, or anything which tends to disrupt the ranks of our organization. The business of the organization shall be confined to looking after the individual business of its members; (5) That May 1st (May day) and June 11th (Davis day) be recognized as constitutional holidays by this organization.

JURISDICTION

The jurisdiction of the union consists of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, and is divided into sub-districts as follows: No. 1, Glace Bay; No. 2, Sydney Mines; No. 3, New Waterford; No. 4, Pictou and Antigonish counties; No. 5, Cumberland county and New Brunswick; No. 6, Inverness and other localities which may be added by the executive board. Other sections of the constitution set out the duties of officers, sub-district councils, district conventions, etc.

MEMBERSHIP

The membership of the Amalgamated Mine Workers of Nova Scotia at the close of 1932, as reported by the general secretary was 7,801, comprised in 21 local unions. At the close of 1934 the membership reported was 5,262 comprised in 11 local unions, a loss of 8 locals and 101 members as compared with the figures supplied for the previous year.

CHIEF OFFICERS

VI. INDUSTRIAL WORKERS OF THE WORLD

Formed in 1905 as an Advocate of Abolition of the Wage System—Preamble to the Constitution—The I.W.W. in Canada—First Canadian I.W.W. Conference—Powers Conferred on Conference—Canadian Officers—Membership—Chief Officer.

This organization stands in direct contrast to the majority of central labour bodies operating on the North American continent. The Industrial Workers of the World, which was formed in 1905, proclaims itself to be the advocate of what it terms revolutionary industrial unionism, and has as its objective the abolition of the wage system. Among the founders of the organization were Eugene V. Debs, William D. Haywood and Daniel DeLeon, leader of the Socialist Labour Party. These three promoters are now deceased. The original members besides metal miners consisted chiefly of unskilled and migratory workers, the membership at the end of the first year being reported at 400,000. In 1906 a split occurred in the organization and at the fourth convention held in 1908, DeLeon and his socialist following were expelled. These expelled members subsequently formed what for some years was known as the Detroit faction of the I.W.W., the original platform of the parent body being adhered to. In 1915 this section became known as the Workers' International Industrial Union, but in 1924, by a vote of the members, the organization was dissolved.

PRINCIPLES OF THE I.W.W.

The principles of the I.W.W., as set forth in the preamble to the constitution which was adopted in 1908, are as follows:—

The working class and the employing class have nothing in common. There can be no peace so long as hunger and want are found among the millions of working people, and the few who make up the employing class have all the good things of life.

Between these two classes a struggle must go on until the workers of the world organize as a class, take possession of the earth and the machinery of production, and abolish the wage system.

We find that the centering of the management of industries into fewer and fewer hands makes the trade unions unable to cope with the ever-growing power of the employing class. The trade unions foster a state of affairs which allows one set of workers to be pitted against another set of workers in the same industry, thereby helping defeat one another in wage wars. Moreover, the trade unions aid the employing class to mislead the workers into the belief that the working class have interests in common with their employers.

These conditions can be changed and the interest of the working class upheld only by an organization formed in such a way that all its members in any one industry, or in all industries, if necessary, cease work whenever a strike or lockout is on in any department thereof, thus making an injury to one an injury to all.

Instead of the conservative motto: "A fair day's wage for a fair day's work," we must inscribe on our banner the revolutionary watchword, "Abolition of the wage system."

It is the historic mission of the working class to do away with capitalism. The army of production must be organized, not only for the everyday struggle with capitalists, but also to carry on production when capitalism shall have been overthrown. By organizing industrially we are forming the structure of the new society within the shell of the old.

The early history of the organization was recorded in previous issues of this report.

THE I.W.W. IN CANADA

One of the first organizations in Canada to affiliate with the Industrial Workers of the World was the Western Federation of Miners. Local Branches of the I.W.W. comprising workers other than miners were also established in certain localities in Western Canada. In 1910 the Federation of Miners withdrew and was granted affiliation in the American Federation of Labor. The other local branches of the I.W.W. continued to operate but gradually they passed out of existence, the last remaining Canadian branch disappearing in 1915. For a short time nearing the close of the world war the I.W.W. was declared unlawful by the Dominion Government but this ban was removed on April 2, 1919. No further move appears to have been made to re-establish branches in Canada until 1922, when the Vancouver branch of the Lumber Workers' Industrial Union, No. 120, was formed. The establishment of this branch of the I.W.W. was brought about through the Lumber Workers' Industrial Union of Canada, an independent body, becoming an affiliate of the Red International of Labour Unions. To this proceeding certain members objected; some of them subsequently became identified with the I.W.W., and these were responsible for the formation of the Vancouver Branch.

FIRST CANADIAN I.W.W. CONFERENCE

For some time there had been an agitating for a Canadian administration for the I.W.W., and as a result a referendum vote of the membership was taken on the question early in 1932. By this vote a Canadian administration was established, the powers conferred being as follows:

(a) The officials of the Canadian administration of the I.W.W., shall be a secretary-treasurer, who shall be officially designated "Canadian secretary-treasurer," and an executive board which shall be officially designated "Canadian Executive Board." The duties and powers of the above-named officials shall bear the same relation to the Canadian membership as the present general officials of the I.W.W. under the present constitution, with such exceptions as may be hereafter designated or adopted by general conventions of the I.W.W., or emergency rulings of the general administration of the I.W.W.

(b) The Canadian administration shall have the power to determine all initiation fees, dues and assessments under its jurisdiction.

(c) The Canadian administration shall be empowered to publish literature and establish a press. All literature and press policies shall be sanctioned by the general administration of the I.W.W.

The Canadian administration is under the supervision of the general administration, whose head office is in Chicago, and from whom the Canadian administration shall purchase all supplies, due books and due stamps and shall pay 2 cents per due stamp and 15 cents for cash due book, plus duty and shipping charges, but the general administration may at its discretion authorize the Canadian section to manufacture such supplies as are needed.

With the object of bringing back into the organization unemployed members and of retaining the present out-of-work members, it was decided to reduce the initiation fee to twenty cents and the monthly dues to five cents, and those who are employed to pay the initiation fee of $1 and monthly dues of twenty-five cents. For the purpose of raising funds to conduct organization work, a twenty-five cent stamp was decided upon which may be sold to all persons whether or not they are members of the I.W.W.

CANADIAN OFFICERS

The chief officers of the Canadian Administration, the headquarters of which are located at Port Arthur, Ont., are: Executive board chairman, George Hellman, 314 Bay St., Port Arthur, Ont.; Secretary, William McPhee, 314 Bay St., Port Arthur, Ont.

MEMBERSHIP OF THE I.W.W.

At the close of 1905, the year of its inception, the Industrial Workers of the World claimed a membership of 400,000. The return received from the headquarters of the organization for the year ending December 31, 1934, showed a total of 104 local branches with a membership of 37,715 of whom 4,155 comprised in 11 locals were located in Canada.

The general secretary-treasurer of the central organization is Joseph Wagner, 2422 North Halsted St., Chicago, Ill.

VII. NATIONAL CATHOLIC UNIONS

Origin—Plan of Organization—Formation of Federation—Aim of Federation—A Chaplain for Each Catholic Body—Canada Only British Country Having Catholic Unions—International Federation of Christian Trade Unions—Numerical Strength of Federation—Chief Officers—List of National Catholic Bodies with Names and Addresses of Officers.

Besides the organizations discussed in the preceding chapters there is another group known as National Catholic Syndicates. These unions are formed on the principle of craft unionism and their operations are confined almost entirely to the province of Quebec. The origin of the National Catholic Unions dates back to 1901. In that year a union composed of shoe workers accepted the social doctrine of the Roman Catholic Church by admitting a chaplain (a member of the clergy), this course being adopted following the adjustment of a dispute in the shoe industry by the archbishop of the diocese. In the years following many other national unions were formed in the province of Quebec, all of which accepted for their guidance the declarations of Pope Leo XIII, who on May 15, 1891, issued an encyclical on "The Conditions of the Working Classes," the provisions of which were subsequently proclaimed by Pope Pius X as fundamental rules for workingmen's associations. The increase in the number of National Catholic Unions in the province of Quebec created a demand for a central organization to co-ordinate the activities of the various units. Accordingly a meeting of delegates from national unions was held in the city of Quebec in September, 1918, there being 27 unions represented. A report submitted to this meeting stated that there were in existence 41 National Catholic Unions (bodies to which none but adherents of the Roman Catholic faith are admitted) and 17 other national unions, which were termed neutral, membership being open to workers of all denominations. These latter unions, it is understood, have not been in existence for some years, their disappearance possibly being accounted for in part by the fact that National Catholic Unions are designed ostensibly for adherents of the Roman Catholic faith, although provision is made for the admittance of non-Catholics as associate members who may vote, but are not eligible for office. When non-Catholic membership of a union reaches fifty they may form a non-Catholic section of the National Catholic body and elect their own officers.

FEDERATION OF CATHOLIC WORKERS

Following the meeting of delegates in 1918, other conventions of representatives of National Catholic unions were held regularly each year, and in 1921, at the meeting held in Hull, with 220 delegates in attendance, a central organization was established under the name of Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada, and a set of rules adopted (these rules were published in this report for 1921). The preparation of the principles of the Federation was referred to the religious authorities, for incorporation in the constitution.

AIM OF THE FEDERATION

The purpose of the federation and the means to secure its fulfilment are set forth in the following sections of the constitution:—

Article 3.—The Federation has for its aim to promote and safeguard the general interests of Catholic syndicalism in Canada.

In order to reach this end, the F.C.W.C. proposes:—

1. To definitely establish a general plan according to which Catholic syndicalism in Canada shall be developed, and to pursue the methodical application of the same;

2. To create and maintain in this country a concerted movement of Catholic syndicalism which, while allowing the various groups their autonomy, would bind them by federative bonds, permitting to defend and develop in common the professional, economic, patriotic and religious interests of Catholic workers in Canada;

3. To organize a general propaganda in favour of Catholic syndicalism. This propaganda will be made especially through labour newspapers, salaried organizers and workingmen's research clubs;

4. To work out the legislation asked for by the mass of Catholic workers in Canada;

5. To be used as an intermediate agent between the federated groups, whether it is a question of mutual aid or of dispute to be terminated;

6. To represent the federated organizations whenever and in whatever manner the general interest may demand it;

(a) before the public powers;

(b) before such institutions or organizations, whether Canadian or foreign, with which it may seem proper to maintain relations;

7. To create as they are needed all services recognized to be necessary to the federated organizations;

8. To organize or favour all institutions of general interest likely to defend the Catholic workers or to help them;

9. The F.C.W.C. can affiliate with no political party whatever.

A CHAPLAIN FOR EACH CATHOLIC BODY

The constitution of the Federation of Catholic Workers provides for the appointment of a general chaplain, selected by the religious authorities. The section governing the powers of the chaplain reads as follows:—

The general chaplain is by right a member of all congresses of the federation and of the federal bureau. He may attend the meeting of all committees formed by the federation or send a representative. He exercises, in deliberations, the same rights as those exercised by delegates or members belonging to the congress whereat such discussions take place, and is subject, like them, to the usual rules of procedure.

The chaplain does not vote. The general chaplain may attend the meetings and take part in the proceedings of any organization affiliated with the federation.

The chaplain depends solely, in the exercise of his functions, on the religious authorities by which he was appointed.

The general chaplain has the right to give his personal opinion on any question, like all delegates; but his proper function is to represent the church among the Catholic syndicated workmen. It is for him to state and recall, whenever it is needed, the Catholic principles and doctrines, and he only fills his mission when he asks the congress and the committees to make their resolutions and conduct conform to the Catholic principles and doctrine.

The general chaplain may demand that a resolution which, in his judgment, would affect Catholic morals or the teachings of the church, be submitted to the religious authorities and approved by them before being put in force.

The general chaplain of the federation has charge of the superior interests of the souls, of society and of religion. He is entitled, on the part of the delegates, to all the consideration and respect which are due to the religious authorities which he represents.

Each delegate body and local national Catholic syndicate also has a chaplain, appointed by the religious authorities, whose powers are similar to those of the general chaplain for the Federation of Catholic Workers.

FEDERATIONS AND SECRETARIATS

The national Catholic unions of closely allied and particular trades have, like the non-secretarian trade unions, established federations (delegate bodies referred to in a later chapter of this report). In the city of Quebec in 1920 there was formed the secretariat of Catholic syndicates, which is designed to have charge of the various matters affecting the activities and development of the local organizations. In the secretariat in Quebec city are located the headquarters of the Federation of Catholic Workers and of the Catholic Federation of Pulp and Paper Factory Employees, as well as the offices of a number of business agents. There are also secretariats in Montreal, Three Rivers, Chicoutimi, Sherbrooke. St. Hyacinthe, and the diocese of Ottawa, that in the first-named place being the headquarters of the federations of the building and printing trades. The Montreal secretariat publishes an official organ for the national Catholic unions in its jurisdiction, the title of the publication being La Vie Syndicale. The Catholic union movement, as previously stated, has city central councils, bodies similar to trades and labour councils, a chapter concerning which appears in this report.

ANNUAL CONVENTIONS OF THE FEDERATION

The Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada has met annually since its formation in 1921, the convention for 1934 being held in Three Rivers, commencing July 9, at which 110 delegates, as well as 16 chaplains, were present.

Mr. Georges Gagnon, vice-president of the Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada, attended the session of the International Labour Conference held at Geneva, Switzerland, June 4-23, 1934, as one of the advisers to the delegates representing the Dominion Government.

REVENUE

The total revenue of the Federation for the last fiscal year amounted to $7,245.36, expenditures totalled $6,837.12, leaving a balance of $408.24.

CANADA ONLY BRITISH COUNTRY HAVING CATHOLIC UNIONS

Canada, according to information available, is the only British country in which there are trade unions designed exclusively for adherents of the Roman Catholic Church. With but two exceptions all such syndicates are located in the province of Quebec. In Great Britain there was at one time an organization known as the Catholic Federation which was composed of Roman Catholics generally for particular Catholic purposes, and included in its membership adherents of the faith who were trade unionists. Besides this body there was also in England the National Conference of Catholic Trade Unionists which was composed exclusively of Catholic members of trade unions, but in both cases these trades unionists were supposed to confine their activities to defending Roman Catholic interests inside the existing non-secretarian trade unions. According to information received in the department in 1930, both of the above-mentioned organizations have made several attempts to function, but the Roman Catholics in Great Britain would not sever their connection with the regular trade unions and no religious difficulty is experienced. As a result, it was reported, the two English organizations gradually died out.

INTERNATIONAL FEDERATION OF CHRISTIAN TRADE UNIONS

The original Catholic Trade Unions (or Christian unions as they are called in Europe) were formed in Germany about 60 years ago. Since that time many such unions have been established, there now being central federated bodies in Germany, Austria, Belgium, Spain, France, Hungary, Luxemburg, Netherlands, Switzerland, Czecho-Slovakia, and Jugo-Slavia. The various Christian trade unions which have a membership of over 2,300,000 are brought together in the International Federation of Christian Trade Unions, a body established at The Hague in June, 1920. There are also a number of Christian trade internationals operating in Europe, embracing the following classes of workers: General employees; building workers; factory and transport workers; printing workers; wood workers; clothing workers; agricultural workers; metal workers; mining workers; postal, telegraph and telephone workers; railway workers; tobacco workers; textile workers; food workers, and public employees.

Article II of the statutes of the International Federation of Christian Trade Unions sets forth that—"The confederation adopts as a basis Christian principles. It therefore affirms that economic and social life implies the collaboration of all children of the same people It therefore repudiates violence and class strife on the part of the employers as well as on that of the workers. The confederation reckons the present economical and social order is on essential points in contradiction with the Christian spirit. It endeavours to thoroughly modify society in accordance with these principles by following a process of evolution organic and legal. The confederation has above all for its objects the defence of the interests of the workers and employees from a viewpoint of the economic, social and public order conditions through general collaboration."

(a) Defend the workers' interests on the basis of the principles set forth in Article II, in the economic field, and specially in the field of international organizations of labour, wages, working conditions and labour legislation;

(b) Favour the interests of the organizations of affiliated confederations;

(c) Carry on propaganda in favour of the Christian syndicalist movement in the various countries where it does not yet exist, and promote the affiliation of organizations on a Christian basis which are not yet affiliated;

(d) Encourage mutual financial support between the affiliated confederations.

Besides the syndicates of Catholic workpeople affiliated with the Christian Federation of Trade Unions there are also identified with it unions composed of Protestants. The German Christian Syndicates are in great part composed of Protestant workers jointly with Catholic workers. In the Netherlands and in Switzerland there are both federations of Catholic workers and of Protestant workers, each of which is in affiliation with the International Federation.

The president of the International Federation of Christian Trade Unions is Bernard Otte, Kaiseralle 25, Berlin, Wilmersdorf, Germany, and the secretary, P. J. S. Serrarens, Drift 12, Utrecht, Holland.

NUMERICAL STRENGTH OF THE FEDERATION OF CATHOLIC WORKERS OF CANADA

In 1919, the earliest date for which information was supplied, the approximate membership of the National Catholic Unions was 31,000. The reported membership of the Federation at the close of 1933 was 26,894 comprised in 101 syndicates and 9 study circles. During the year 1934, 28 National Catholic Unions were formed, while 16 unions ceased to function, making a total of 114 syndicates and 8 study circles, with a combined membership of 30,346.

VIII. CANADIAN CENTRAL LABOUR BODIES

Group of Trade Union Organizations Operating Exclusively in the Dominion—Four Associations of Government Employees in This Group—Outline of the Inception of the Canadian Organizations.

Recorded in this Chapter is another important group of Canadian labour bodies whose jurisdiction is confined exclusively to the Dominion.

Fifteen of the central bodies in this group are operating in direct opposition to the international unions, the latter claiming jurisdiction over the classes of workpeople making up their respective memberships. Four of the organizations under this heading are composed of employees in the service of the Dominion Government, and one comprises provincial government employees, the latter and one of the first named being affiliates of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada (referred to in an earlier chapter). The remaining two organizations—National Association of Marine Engineers and the Provincial Federation of Ontario Fire Fighters—are not in conflict with any international body. Besides the five associations of government employees referred to above, there are a large number of other bodies of civil servants but as no claim is made that they should be classed as trade unions, their names are not included in this group. They are, however, given a place in a subsequent chapter entitled "Non-Trade Union Associations." Ten of the organizations in this chapter are affiliated with the All-Canadian Congress of Labour, three are connected with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, and the remaining 9 are not affiliated with any organization. The statement following gives certain information concerning the inception and the objects of each of the twenty-four Canadian labour organizations.

The Amalgamated Building Workers of Canada was established in Montreal on March 17, 1929, by representatives of national and local unions of building construction workers affiliated with or chartered by the All-Canadian Congress of Labour. The conference declared that (a) the Canadian workers in the building construction industry require a new organization through which they may collectively promote their general welfare and raise their economic and social standard; (b) the rapid gathering of wealth and the centering of the management of the industry into fewer and fewer hands make craft unions unable to cope with the ever-growing power of the employers, because craft unions permit one set of workers to be pitted against another set of workers in the same industry, thereby facilitating their own defeat; (c) these conditions must be changed, the interests of the working class upheld and all possible relief for the workers must be secured; (d) this can be done only by an organization aiming steadily at the complete stoppage of exploitation and formed in such a way that all its members in the industry may make common cause whenever any dispute as to conditions of work or wages occurs in any section of the industry. The Amalgamated Building Workers is affiliated with the All-Canadian Congress of Labour.

The Canadian Bushmen's Union was organized in December, 1933, and registered under the Trade Unions Act on January 30, 1934. Membership in the union is open to those actually engaged in bush work or some branch of the timber industry. The preamble of the constitution reads as follows:—

Experience has proven that so-called labour unions operating in the timber industry have failed to represent the bush workers on the basis of collective bargaining. Therefore these workers, whose labour interests have been adversely affected by these so-called unions' activities, have established a trade union for the purpose of bargaining collectively with their employers on a strictly trade union basis.

This union recognizes no labour authority except that which its membership may create or accept. It respects at all time Canadian laws and ideals.

The Canadian Bushmen's Union is an affiliate of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour.

The Canadian Brussels Carpet Weavers' Beneficial Association came into existence in November, 1919, as a result of the Brussels carpet weavers in Guelph, Peterborough and Toronto desiring to have a uniform scale of wages for the trade in Canada. The Guelph weavers were the only ones organized, being local No. 277 of the United Textile Workers of America. As it was claimed that there was no other method by which the trade in Canada could be organized, the Guelph weavers severed their connection with the United Textile Workers and joined with the weavers in Peterborough and Toronto and formed the Canadian association.

The Amalgamated Civil Servants developed from the Amalgamated Postal Workers, which came into existence in September, 1918, as a result of dissatisfaction with the manner in which the strike of the postal employees was conducted in the east and the settlement accepted by the general officers. The original jurisdiction of the Postal Workers, membership in which was open to all post office employees under the rating of a first-class clerk, was from Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., to Victoria, B.C., and the intention of the promoters was to amalgamate the association of postal clerks, railway mail clerks and letter carriers in the territory named. An application for a charter from the Trades and Labour Congress was not entertained by the last-named body on account of the organization admitting to membership certain local branches of the Federated Association of Letter Carriers, an organization already affiliated with the Congress. At the annual convention of the Amalgamated Postal Workers, held in August, 1921, the name was changed to Amalgamated Civil Servants of Canada, membership being extended to all employees of the Dominion Government.

The Civil Service Association of Alberta, which is composed of employees of the Provincial Government, was formed on March 19, 1919, with a view, among other things, "to bring about united action and to act on any matter or issue of common interest to the members of the association." In 1923 a vote was taken on the question of the association affiliating with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, but the proposal was defeated by a vote of 316 in favour to 426 against. In 1925 another vote was taken on the same proposition, with the result that 227 were in favour and 214 against—not a sufficient majority, however, to permit affiliation. In October, 1927, the question of affiliating with the Trades and Labour Congress was again submitted to the membership with the following result: for affiliation, 396; against, 142; spoiled ballots, 2, giving a majority of 36 in excess of the required two-thirds. The convention of the Civil Service Association held subsequently ratified the decision and a charter was duly issued by the Trades Congress. The association also decided to affiliate with the Alberta Federation of Labour.

The Electrical Communication Workers of Canada was organized in Toronto on January 4, 1926. The organization, which declared its jurisdiction to cover all land telegraph, radiotelegraph, telephone and allied workers in Canada and Newfoundland, in 1927 became identified with the All-Canadian Congress of Labour. On February 1, 1928, at a meeting in Toronto, the commercial telegraphers of the Canadian National Telegraphs decided to go over in a body to the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees. Later the same class of telegraphers in the employ of the Canadian Pacific did similarly. Subsequently a reorganization of the Electrical Communication Workers took place, the former Broker and Leased Wire Divisions forming an independent association, which, as above mentioned, in 1931 ceased to function. The preamble to the constitution of the Electrical Communication Workers sets forth (a) the Canadian workers in the electrical communication industry require a new organization through which they may collectively promote their general welfare and raise their economic and social standards; (b) the rapid gathering of wealth and the centering of the management of the industry into fewer and fewer hands make craft unions unable to cope with the ever-growing power of the employers, because craft unions permit one set of workers to be pitted against another set of workers in the same industry, thereby facilitating their own defeat; (c) these conditions must be changed, the interests of the working class upheld and all possible relief for the workers must be secured; (d) this can be done only by an organization aiming steadily at the complete stoppage of exploitation and formed in such a way that all its members in the industry may make common cause whenever any dispute as to conditions of work or wages occurs in any section of the industry. The main organization consists of an Eastern, Western and British Columbia District, the latter as well as the first named district each having two radio units. The Electrical Communication Workers is also affiliated with the International Federation of Radiotelegraphists (London, England).

The Canadian Electrical Trades Union developed from a branch of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers located in Toronto, which in 1920 seceded because it was alleged (a) that the per capita tax was excessive in comparison with benefits received; (b) that a closer form of organization in the electrical industry was necessary, and (c) that the International Brotherhood had been lax in its efforts to organize the trade in the Dominion. Included in the objects of the Canadian Electrical Trades Union are: (1) to organize all workers in the electrical industry; (2) by mutual effort to place the members on a foundation sufficiently strong to prevent any encroachment on trade rights and privileges; (3) to establish an apprentice system and a higher standard of skill; (4) to encourage the formation of schools of instruction for teaching the practical application of electricity and trade education generally; (5) to cultivate feelings of friendship among the men of the craft; (6) to settle all disputes and grievances between employers and employees by arbitration or otherwise; (7) to assist each other in sickness and distress and to secure employment and adequate pay; (8) to regulate the relations between employers and employed; (9) to promote friendly relations with all electrical workers of the world, and by legal and proper means to elevate the moral, intellectual and social conditions of all members. The union is affiliated with the All-Canadian Congress of Labour.

The Canadian Association of Stationary Engineers is a craft organization, the object of which is mainly educational. The name of the association appeared in earlier issues of this report, but in 1926 it was changed to Mutual Engineers' Beneficial Fund, the new body retaining in the constitution some of the features of the former organization. In 1927 the name was omitted, it being stated that the association was then a purely mutual benefit organization. Some of the former branches of the original association which did not become a part of the beneficial scheme at a conference in London, Ont., on June 28-29, 1929, revived the Canadian Association of Stationary Engineers and adopted an amended constitution. The objects of the association, which was incorporated in May, 1887, are "the elevation and maintenance of the rights of stationary engineers and the recognition of all other business matters in which the engineers in its jurisdiction may be interested or involved." In 1931 the association affiliated with the All-Canadian Congress of Labour.

The Brotherhood of Express Employees was formed in Toronto under the title "Brotherhood of Canadian Pacific Express Employees," on March 25, 1918, by a number of the employees of the Dominion Express Company. The Brotherhood was registered on May 23, 1918, by the Department of the Secretary of State, under the provisions of the Trade Unions Act. The object of the Brotherhood is contained in the following section of the rules:—

> The object of the Brotherhood shall be to unite in one body, for their mutual protection and benefit, all employees of the Canadian Pacific Express Company, and the membership shall include no one but males of good moral character, 18 years of age and over, exclusively employed by the Canadian Pacific Express Company, except officials. Provided, that no general foreman or chief clerk, although eligible for membership, shall hold office. An agent or master of transportation shall be classed as an official.

The Provincial Federation of Ontario Fire Fighters was organized on August 26, 1920, at a conference held in Toronto. The objects of the federation are (1) to organize all fire fighters in the province; (2) to place its members on a higher plane of skill and efficiency; (3) to encourage the formation of local federations; (4) to secure legislation beneficial to firemen; (5) to establish sick and death benefit funds; and (6) to encourage the establishment of schools of instruction for fire fighting. Among other things which the federation favours are (a) voluntary arbitration of all labour disputes; (b) all civic employees to come under the provisions of the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act, and (c) the granting of charters to firemen's unions by the Trades and Labour Congress instead of international charters. The revenue of the federation is derived from a monthly per capita tax. In addition to the twenty-six directly chartered local branches of the Provincial Federation of Ontario Fire Fighters its affiliates include seven local branches of the International Association of Fire Fighters.

The Federated Association of Letter Carriers, which was formed on September 15, 1891, is an organization of public servants of the class indicated formed for the purpose of protecting their interests in regard to salaries and working conditions, etc. Until the summer of 1918 the jurisdiction of the association over letter carriers had not been interfered with, but certain members of the association in the West, who were not in accord with the settlement of the strike of the letter carriers which took place in July, 1918, launched a new body of postal employees, reference to which has already been made. The Federated Association of Letter Carriers is registered under the Friendly Societies' Act of Ontario for the transaction of life insurance in the province, and is also affiliated with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada.

The Native Brotherhood of British Columbia, which is composed of Indian fishermen, came into existence at a conference held in Port Simpson, B.C., on December 15-18, 1931. The organization was formed for the betterment of the conditions of the Indians socially, mentally and physically, and is designed to be legislative, executive and judicial, and may establish branches in all native villages. Conventions are to be held annually and delegates shall be appointed from each branch. The officers of the brotherhood consist of president, vice-president, general secretary, general treasurer, general recording secretary and an executive committee consisting of two from each village branch of the brotherhood. The membership fee for 1932 was 50 cents.

The National Association of Marine Engineers of Canada is composed of marine engineers holding certificates granted by either the Dominion Government or the British Board of Trade, and was established in 1893 to promote the interests of those employed as marine engineers in the Dominion. The association claims authority to establish subordinate councils and to make regulations for their governance. The preface to the constitution sets forth that it is essential for the progress of marine engineers that they should combine for the purpose of raising their status and to guard their certificates of qualification. In 1922 the association secured a charter from the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, and on August 27, 1926, was incorporated under The Companies Act of the Dominion.

The Amalgamated Mine Workers of Nova Scotia (discussed in Chapter V).

The United Postal Employees of Canada was formerly known as the Dominion Postal Clerks' Association, and came into existence in 1913 at a convention of representatives of a number of scattered independent lodges and postal workers. The unauthorized strike in the postal service west of the Great Lakes in 1918 resulted in the secession of a number of clerks in the western offices who, with dissatisfied letter carriers, subsequently became members of the Amalgamated Postal Workers, now known as the Amalgamated Civil Servants. In May, 1920, the Dominion Postal Clerks' Association secured a charter from the Trades and Labour Cougress, but for some reason the affiliation has not been maintained. The aim of the association is to secure by co-operation with the Post Office Department the classification of post office clerks with a view to getting more equitable salary rates, regulation of hours of labour, the improvement of the public service and such other objects as may arise. The new name was chosen at the convention held in September, 1928, when a reorganization of the society was effected, the Dominion Mail Porters and Chauffeurs' Association being merged with the postal clerks under the name of United Postal Employees of Canada. At the last convention held in Toronto in September, 1934, the name of the organization was changed to the "Canadian Postal Employees."

The Canadian Printers' Union came into existence during 1930, and, according to the secretary of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour, who is also the secretary of the Canadian Printers' Union, "was formed in response to a demand from a number of individual printers at several points in the Dominion for a union of their crafts not under alien control." The secretary further stated that "these workers found it impossible to establish local unions in the ordinary way, and the Congress therefore grouped them in the Canadian Printers' Union as members at large.

The Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees, which under its charter of incorporation is an international organization, at one time had branches in Newfoundland and the United States, as well as in Canada, but in 1926 it was reported that the last remaining local division outside of the Dominion had passed out of existence. In 1920 the name of the brotherhood, with the consent of the chief officers, appeared in the international group of labour organizations, but at their request the name was in 1927 reinserted in the list of Canadian unions. The Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees was formed in October, 1908, was registered under the Trade Unions Act in July, 1909, and in 1923 affiliation was effected with the International Transport Workers' Federation, an organization with headquarters in Holland, and which embraces many European bodies of transport workers. The Canadian Brotherhood was originally designed to include such railway employees as clerks of all departments, freight handlers, foremen, checkers and porters, car checkers, baggage masters, parlour, sleeping and dining car service employees, locomotive wipers, ash pitmen, cranemen, labourers and express company employees, but in December, 1925, it was announced that the brotherhood was definitely in the field to accept into membership all railway shopmen, both skilled and unskilled. In November, 1917, the brotherhood became affiliated with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, but was expelled from membership by the 1921 convention over a question of jurisdiction between the Canadian Brotherhood and the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers, Express and Station Employees, an organization with headquarters in the United States, and which claims jurisdiction over certain of the classes of workers comprising the membership of the Canadian body of railroad employees. Previous to the expulsion of the Canadian Brotherhood the Trades Congress had endeavoured to bring about an amalgamation of the two organizations involved, but the efforts proved futile. The executive of the Congress, whose action was upheld by the 1921 convention, took the attitude that a continuance of the dual operation of the two bodies claiming jurisdiction over the same class of workers, and being in affiliation with the Congress, was not in the best interests of the men directly involved, nor of the international trade union movement as represented by the Congress. The Brotherhood is an affiliate of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour.

The Canadian Association of Railwaymen (formerly the Canadian Association of Railway Enginemen, Conductors, Trainmen, Yardmen, Operators and Dispatchers) was formed during the summer of 1921 in opposition to the old-established Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, an international organization with headquarters in Cleveland, Ohio, with which the organized locomotive engineers in Canada have for many years been identified. During 1920 a number of the Canadian lodges of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers were suspended for violation by their members of what was termed the Chicago joint agreement, a pact entered into on May 17, 1913, with the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen for the purpose of jointly regulating the mileage of locomotive engineers and firemen in order to benefit the spare men. (In 1927 the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers by an almost unanimous vote decided to abrogate the agreement.) At the 1921 convention of the brotherhood the charters of three lodges, viz., No. 516 at Humboldt, No. 825 at Kamsack, and No. 837 at Trenton, which persisted in ignoring the joint agreement, were cancelled. Subsequently the new Canadian organization of enginemen came into existence. Another reason advanced for the organization of a purely Canadian body was the small return received by the members in proportion to the money sent as dues and assessments to the headquarters of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers in the United States. The Canadian Association of Railway Enginemen established branches in the localities where the charters were cancelled by the international, as well as at some other points. On March 1, 1923, the Canadian Association was registered under the Trade Unions Act of Canada, in 1927 became identified with the All-Canadian Congress of Labour, and in 1931, when the association absorbed the Canadian Association of Operators and Dispatchers, extended its jurisdiction to conductors, trainmen, yardmen, telegraphers and dispatchers and changed its name accordingly. During the past year the name was again changed to "Canadian Association of Railwaymen."

The Dominion Railway Mail Clerks' Federation is a body composed of employees of a branch of the postal service which its promoters claim to be in all intents and purposes a labour organization. Among the objects of the Railway Mail Clerks' Federation is the advancement of the service and the interests of its members.

The Canadian Association of Seamen was formed at Vancouver on April 24, 1931, by seamen employed in the deck, catering and engine room departments of ships under Canadian registry. The objects of the Association are: (1) To promote generally the interests of seamen employed on ships of Canadian registry; (2) To promote and maintain amicable relations between members and their employers and to assist in arranging and maintaining mutually advantageous terms and conditions of employment; (3) To provide sick and other benefits for its members and their families; (4) To promote educational and recreational advantages and facilities for members, and (5) To co-operate with other societies having objects of a similar nature. No applicant for membership will be considered unless he can show proof of Canadian citizenship, or proof of legality in Canada, and proof of previous sea service. It is the expressed intention of the Association to extend their jurisdiction by opening a branch in Eastern Canada, where already there are members in affiliation. The organization is affiliated with the All-Canadian Congress of Labour.

The Saskatchewan Brotherhood of Steam and Operating Engineers was organized June 1, 1914. Previous to this date the organization was known as local branch No. 366 of the International Union of Steam and Operating Engineers. The original intention was to have a provincial union with local branches and to be affiliated with the International Union of Steam and Operating Engineers, now known as the International Union of Operating Engineers, but it was subsequently decided at a meeting held in Regina to sever all connection with the International Union and become affiliated with a Canadian body, which, however, has not been done. The officers of the Grand Lodge, as the central body is named, were instructed to fully organize the engineers of the province under the Saskatchewan Brotherhood with the object of securing better conditions for final certificated engineers, but the organization has not made much progress, the number of local branches never exceeding three, and now stands at one.

The Vancouver and District Waterfront Workers' Association was formed in November, 1923, as an independent local association, following the strike of longshoremen who were identified with the International Longshoremen's Association. The organization continued as a local independent body until 1928 when it assumed the position of a central organization and became affiliated as such with the All-Canadian Congress of Labour. The Vancouver body has a working understanding with a similar association in New Westminster, and has one branch. Among the objects of the association are: (1) To advance and protect the interests and welfare of longshoremen employed on the lower mainland of British Columbia, (2) to negotiate and enter into arrangements and contracts with employers, to take such action as shall be practicable by way of negotiation, arbitration, litigation or otherwise to secure or to enforce the terms of any such arrangement or contract, (3) to promote harmony between the members and their employers, (4) to maintain and administer a sick benefit and accident fund, if it shall be deemed advisable, (5) to support the existing form of government for Canada and resist all revolutionary movements. The association had a signed agreement with the Shipping Federation of British Columbia.

The complete list of the Canadian central organizing bodies with the names and addresses of the presidents and secretaries will be found in Table 3, Chapter XVIII.

IX. FEDERATIONS OF TRADE UNIONS

Important Delegate Bodies, Including Provincial Federations of Labour, Building and Printing Trades Councils, Federations of Shop Mechanics, Theatrical and Municipal Employees—Synopsis of Their Composition and Functions—Division by Groups—List of Federations, with Names and Addresses of Presidents and Secretaries.

With the object of co-ordinating the activities of various local branch unions of closely allied trades, and of permitting them to deal collectively with craft, and sometimes other matters, provision is made in the plan of labour organization for the establishment of federated bodies, the consenting affiliates electing delegates to represent their views on the questions which come within the purview of such organizations. While the jurisdiction of most of these delegate bodies, all of which are supported by a per capita tax from the affiliated unions, are confined to a particular locality, some of them include the shop mechanics on a railway system, others cover a whole province, and in two instances are organized on a Dominion wide basis. Some of the federations meet annually, but those of a local character meet more frequently.

There are two provincial federations of labour working under charters derived from the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, with jurisdiction covering their respective provinces. Membership in provincial federations include (1) trades and labour councils; (2) international and national local branch unions, and (3) federal labour unions, bodies usually representing trades over which no existing central organizing union claims jurisdiction. At the annual meetings legislative and other matters of concern to wage earners are considered. The legislative demands which have been adopted at the conventions are presented to the respective Provincial Governments by the executive officers, who may be accompanied by representatives of affiliated local unions.

Other groups of delegate bodies representing kindred occupations include building trades, printing trades, theatrical employees and employees of public authorities.

All of the building trades councils, except that in Niagara Falls are affiliates of the Building Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor, and as such have full autonomy over all matters affecting the organized workmen in their respective localities engaged in the building industry, when in conformity with the laws and decisions of the Building Trades Department. No local council is permitted to enter into any agreement with an association of employers unless such agreement has been submitted to and approved by the majority of the membership in a referendum vote.

Local allied printing trades councils are provided for in the agreement made between the five printing trades organizations (International Brotherhood of Bookbinders, International Printing Pressmen's Union, International Stereotypers and Electrotypers' Union, International Photo-Engravers' Union and the International Typographical Union) under date of March 7, 1911, and under which there was established the International Allied Printing Trades Association. In some of the Federations, the Amalgamated Lithographers of America is also included. Local councils may adopt rules for their governance provided they are in accord with the general laws of the Printing Trades Association, and are designed in part to be the agents through which the allied printing trades union label may be issued to printing firms conforming to the necessary conditions.

The most important delegate body in the railway employees' group is Division No. 4, which is working under charter from the Railway Employees' Department of the American Federation of Labor. It is the largest of the federations, having jurisdiction over the organized shop workers on all Canadian railway lines, including machinists, boilermakers, blacksmiths, carmen, electrical workers, sheet metal workers, etc. These workers are in the first place members of their respective local unions, and are brought together in a system federation covering the particular railway line on which they are employed. Delegates from the system federations and crafts make up the representation at the convention of the division, which meets biennially, although special sessions may be called. Included in the system federations affiliated with the department are those composed of the organized mechanics employed on the following railway lines: Canadian Pacific; Canadian National (including the Atlantic, Central and Western regions); Dominion Atlantic; Northern Alberta; Temiskaming & Northern Ontario and the Toronto, Hamilton & Buffalo. The employees of the Esquimalt & Nanaimo and the Kettle Valley Railways are under the jurisdiction of the Canadian Pacific System Federation. The functions of Division No. 4 include the making of wage schedules and the consideration of other matters pertaining to the working conditions of the various classes of employees represented. The executive board is composed of the general chairman, vice-chairman and the secretary-treasurer, with two representatives from each affiliated craft organization. It is the business of the system federations, of which there are six in Canada, to see that the wage schedules on their respective lines are properly administered and to handle all grievances, reporting to and receiving instructions from Division No. 4. Besides the system federation the department has received information concerning six local federated bodies of railway shop mechanics in the Dominion to which representatives are elected by the local branch unions affiliated, and their functions are somewhat similar to other delegate bodies of railway shop crafts.

The composition of the federations of municipal employees is in some instances more diversified than that of the other federations, their memberships including not only ordinary civic employees, but street railway and telephone employees, where such services are municipally owned. The British Columbia Federation of Civic and Municipal Employees, which is registered under the Societies' Act of that province, is authorized to issue charters to local branch associations.

The Labour Educational Association of Western Ontario was formed in Woodstock in 1903 as a voluntary unaffiliated body. In 1907 the word "Western" was dropped from the name, the annual meeting of the organization having been attended by a number of delegates from eastern cities. The representatives at the annual conventions of the association include those from such recognized labour bodies in Ontario as contribute a prescribed annual fee, $1 being the minimum and $5 the maximum, according to membership. The functions of the Labour Educational Association having developed somewhat along lines similar to a provincial federation, the name of the organization is given a place in this section. The object of the Association is to assist in advancing the principles of the labour movement, as well as to aid in the work of organization through the dissemination of information, the holding of public meetings and lectures, the distribution of educational literature, etc.

The allied printing trades council of Saskatoon is the only federation to cease functioning during the year. There were no new federations formed.

At the close of 1934 there were 49 non-sectarian trade union federations, one less than the number recorded in 1933. (The names of the federations of the National Catholic Unions are given in a list appearing in Chapter VII.)

In the accompanying list the federations are divided into the following groups: Provincial federations, 2; building trades councils, 12; printing trades councils, 14; railway employees federations, including the three regions of the C.N.R., 16; federations of employees of public authorities, 4; miscellaneous, 1. The list of federations, with the names and addresses of the presidents and secretaries, is as follows:—

X. DISTRICT COUNCILS

Proceeding with the scheme of trade union organization, it is shown that not only do local branches of closely allied pursuits sometimes band together for mutual interest, but, similarly, local branches of particular trades have in many cases established what are termed "district councils" or "conference boards." The jurisdiction of these district bodies varies, being in some instances confined to a city where two or more local branches of a particular organization exist; including in other instances, all local branches of a given trade within a stated area, and occasionally extending to an entire province or even the Dominion. The membership of these councils is composed of delegates from local branches of the craft concerned, and the councils meet at stated intervals to consider matters pertaining to the welfare of the membership, and which it is thought could not be so advantageously dealt with by individual locals. To meet the expenses of these district bodies a per capita tax is levied on the branches affiliated, each unit being entitled to a certain number of delegates. Where the councils are purely local, meetings are held at frequent intervals, but in the case of provincial and Dominion-wide bodies the meetings are held annually. Some of the more important functions of the district councils which have been established in the Dominion are here briefly indicated.

There is only one Provincial Conference Board of the Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers' International Union in Canada chartered by the central organization. This organization has power to make its own constitution and by-laws and to collect a per capita tax from the local branches which constitute it, to meet the necessary operating expenses. The objects of the board, among others, are to endeavour to establish and maintain a uniform work-day and rate of wages within its jurisdiction, this being the Province of Ontario; the procuring of favourable legislation for the craft, and the securing of information for its members regarding conditions of employment throughout the country.

Provision is made under the scheme of organization of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners for the establishment of district and provincial councils, the former being local in character, meeting at short intervals, and the provincial bodies annually. These delegate organizations have power to frame working and trade rules in their respective jurisdictions; they must also provide for and hold trial of all infractions of trade rules, and can enforce penalties subject, of course, to an appeal to the general president of the brotherhood.

The councils of the Amalgamated Building Workers of Canada have similar functions to those of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners.

The aim of the Ontario Council of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers is to improve the standard and efficiency of its members with the view to the consumer and public deriving the maximum benefit from the use of electrical energy. The Council is designed to bring together semi-annually the men engaged in the electrical trade in the various localities for the purpose of discussing ways and means of improving conditions in the province.

There is only one council in Canada of the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers chartered by the central organization. This is Council No. 5, and is comprised of the local branches of the brotherhood operating in the City of Montreal. Among the objects of the council are the creation of harmony and unity between the local unions of the craft; the establishing of a minimum wage in the district; and the enforcement of a code of working rules governing hours, wages, etc. Council No. 5 has legislative and executive power on all matters relating to the common interest of the locals under its jurisdiction, including the ordering of strikes, subject to the sanction of the general executive board of the brotherhood. A per capita tax is levied on the local unions to defray the necessary expenses of the council.

The Ontario Provincial Association of Journeymen Plumbers and Steamfitters was formerly known as the Ontario Pipe Trades Council, but in December, 1926, the present name was chosen and a charter for the organization was issued by the head office of the United Association of Plumbers, Gas Fitters, Steam Fitters and Steam Fitters' Helpers. This provincial association, whose membership is made up of plumbers employed in the building trade, seeks to improve organization among the craft and to secure better working conditions in the trade. In matters involving members or local branches in the province the association has power to make decisions. Special efforts are made to keep the members of the Ontario branches employed by prompt advice to each other of changes in local conditions and also by the transference of members from one city to the other for special large jobs.

Only one provincial conference of the Journeymen Stone Cutters' Association has been chartered in Canada by the central organization. It is designed to establish the minimum rate of pay and the maximum number of hours for all locals under its jurisdiction. The conference has full power to make laws to govern itself and to levy such assessments upon its members for financial support as it may deem necessary, so long as such laws do not conflict with the constitution and by-laws of the main association.

The jurisdiction of District Council No. 30 chartered by the International Brotherhood of Boilermakers, Iron Shipbuilders, Welders and Helpers covers all Canadian lodges of the craft having members working on railroads which have their greatest mileage in Canada. This council is represented on the executive board of the Brotherhood by an international vice-president. It has power to form its own by-laws and to call strikes, provided the approval of the international executive board has been secured but may arbitrate and close strikes on its own volition.

The District Council of Montreal and Vicinity, of the International Association of Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Iron Workers, was organized in June, 1929. The council acts as administrative board for all locals under its jurisdiction. There is no local constitution, but the council is governed by the general constitution of the International Association of Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Iron Workers.

With a view of standardizing conditions throughout the province the International Association of Machinists chartered the Ontario Provincial Council. A per capita assessment is levied on the affiliated locals to cover the expenses of the council. Meetings are held annually at which wage schedules are prepared and other matters pertaining to the welfare of the members are considered.

District Lodge No. 2 of the same organization has jurisdiction over all locals embracing members of the craft employed on Canadian railways, subject to the general laws of Grand Lodge. The members comprising the district determine the proportion and method of representation also the amount and method of collection of revenue. Assessments may be levied within its jurisdiction with the approval of the affiliated members. The district is divided into seven sections in accord with the territory of the respective general managers of the main trunk roads as follows: No. 1, comprising the western lines of the C.P.R.; No. 2, the eastern lines of the C.P.R.; No. 3, the western region of the C.N.R.; No. 4, the central region of the C.N.R.; No. 5, the Atlantic region of the C.N.R.; No. 6, the T., H. & B. Railroad; No. 7, the T. & N.O. Railroad. The district is officered by a president and a secretary-treasurer, who, with the seven section chairmen, comprise the district executive board. District Lodges Nos. 46 and 82 are local bodies, composed of the lodges in the cities of Toronto and Montreal, respectively, and the surrounding districts. These district lodges deal with matters affecting the interests of the members of the association in the localities mentioned.

The International Moulders' Union has chartered the Conference Board of Ontario with jurisdiction over all locals in the province. It makes its own laws, subject to the approval of the general president, and elects a business agent for the territory under its control. The necessary expenses of the conference board are covered by a per capita levy on each local union in affiliation, the money so raised being received through the international headquarters.

There are two district councils of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, one in Montreal and the other in Toronto. These councils have power to transact business pertaining to the welfare of the members of the various local branches, such as preventing strikes, organizing label agitations, and the adjusting, where possible, of all local differences before they are referred to headquarters. Authority is given to these councils to investigate the financial standing of affiliated local branches, such report being forwarded to the general executive board. At each general convention the councils are entitled to one delegate each to represent them.

The Toronto Joint Board of the International Fur Workers' Union is the only one operating in Canada, and has power to adopt its own by-laws, provided, of course, there is no objection by its affiliates. The board may assess the members of such affiliated locals to meet the necessary expenses.

The main object of the joint boards of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, of which there are two, located respectively at Montreal and Toronto, is to call, conduct, and settle strikes and lockouts affecting the local branches under their jurisdiction. The decision of such boards in all disputes is binding upon the local unions.

The Headgear Workers' Central Bureau of Canada, which is made up of the Canadian branches of the United Hatters, Cap and Millinery Workers' International Union, supervises all activities of such branches, appoints organizers, and is in general responsible to the chief organization for all matters concerning the branches in the Dominion.

Among the objects of the Ontario Provincial Council of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union is that of promoting improvements in working conditions of its members. It also endeavours to extend the recognition and use of all union labels, particularly the boot and shoe workers' union stamp and in a general way co-operates with the executive in carrying out the contracts and policies of the organization.

The Ontario and Quebec Conference of the International Typographical Union has its own by-laws. Such matters as has to do with the sanitary conditions of printing offices, the securing of legislation in the interest of the printing industry and the obtaining of harmonious relations among the various branches on matters affecting the trade, engage the attention of the delegates at the annual meetings. A per capita tax is levied to defray the running expenses of the conference, which is paid direct to the board.

The district councils of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees, which meet monthly are designed to promote the welfare of the brotherhood and to bring about a larger measure of co-operation between the local lodges in the respective districts, each lodge being entitled to representation.

Of the three district councils of the International Longshoremen's Association appearing in the accompanying table, only one council is composed entirely of Canadian locals, viz., that at Saint John, N.B. This council may make rulings and decisions affecting members of the local branches within its jurisdiction, but such rulings and decisions are subject to the approval of the district branch, the final decision resting with the executive council of the international association. The Atlantic Coast District Council has jurisdiction over the entire north Atlantic coast, including Canadian ports in the territory named and one of the clauses in its constitution stipulates that one of the vice-presidents must be located in Canada. There is also a similar district body on the Pacific Coast whose law requires that one of the vice-presidents must reside in British Columbia. A function of these district councils is to investigate the conduct of local branches and members under their jurisdiction, and they also have the power to inflict penalties and fines for violation of the rules of the association.

There are two district unions of the United Mine Workers in Canada, viz., District 26 with jurisdiction over the coal fields of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, and District 18 covering the coal mining areas in Alberta and Southeastern British Columbia, the affairs of the latter, however, being administered by provisional officers, the charter having been temporarily withdrawn. (Particulars of the suspension of the charter of District 18 were published in this report for 1925.) District unions of the United Mine Workers have power to adopt rules for their own governance, provided they do not conflict with the laws of the international union or joint agreements. The districts also have control over the locals affiliated, and have power to collect a per capita tax and to levy assessments on their own members, such assessments not to exceed $1 per month. The district unions are not permitted to engage in a strike involving all or a major portion of the members without the sanction of an international convention or the international executive board, but the unions may order local strikes within their own territory on their own responsibility; provided, however, that where such strikes are to be financed by the international union they must be sanctioned by the international executive board.

The Journeymen Barbers' Federation of Canada, composed of local branches of the Journeymen Barbers' International Union, is designed to protect the interests of members in legislative matters only, the local branches taking care of economic questions under the supervision and direction of the international organization. The Journeymen Barbers' Federation of Ontario is an organization composed of local branches of the Journeymen Barbers' International Union in the province. The objects of the association are: (1) the education of the barbers by means of an exchange of ideas at annual conventions; (2) the advocacy of higher wages and shorter hours; (3) the universal closing of all barber shops on the Lord's Day; (4) provincial licence and examination as to qualifications of all barbers; also more adequate sanitary regulations for barber shops, and rigid enforcement of the law pertaining thereto.

There are two districts of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees and Moving Picture Machine Operators; No. 11 with jurisdiction over the maritime provinces, Quebec and Ontario, and No. 12 for the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta. These districts have power to enact laws for their own governance, so long as they do not conflict with the international constitution, after they have been approved by the affiliated units. Among the purposes of these district bodies is a standardization of working conditions and rates of pay and the securing of legislation for the better protection of those engaged in the theatrical trades.

There is an interprovincial and a provincial association in Canada of the International Association of Fire Fighters. The interprovincial association has jurisdiction over the provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan. The objects of this body are: (1) To organize all permanent fire fighters in the provinces mentioned; (2) to foster the encouragement of a higher degree of skill and efficiency on the part of fire fighters; (3) the cultivation of friendship among the members; (4) proper remuneration for duty performed; (5) a pension law that will provide ample funds for those dependent upon pension; (6) to have legislation enacted where necessary to make the fire fighters' position more efficient and humane, and (7) the establishment of sick and death benefit funds. The British Columbia Association of the same class, which was organized on September 15, 1924, has similar objects to the Alberta-Saskatchewan body.

The Ontario Executive Board of the International Union of Operating Engineers, which was organized in Hamilton, Ont., in 1924, is a legislative and advisory body whose actions are subject to the constitution of the central organization. Annual meetings of the board are held on the second Monday in January, but special sessions may be convened at any time.

There are two district councils of the International Brotherhood of Firemen and Oilers; No. 7 having jurisdiction over all lines of the Canadian Pacific Railway east of Port Arthur while No. 8 covers the same lines west from Fort William. The objects of these district councils are to centralize the work in the respective localities. The chairman of the district bodies handles any grievances which cannot be settled at the local point by meeting with the higher officials at the main centre and endeavouring to effect an adjustment.

During the year three delegate bodies passed out of existence, viz., District Council of Hamilton, United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners; Northwestern Typographical Conference, and the Edmonton District Council of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees.

The accompanying list contains the names of 46 district councils, three less than the number recorded in 1933, divided by trades as follows: Clothing workers, including ladies' garment workers, hatters and fur workers, 6; carpenters and railway employees, 5 each; machinists, 4; longshoremen, 3; building workers, mine workers, barbers, stage employees, fire fighters and firemen and oilers, 2 each; bricklayers, electrical workers, painters, plumbers, stonecutters, boot and shoe workers, boilermakers, bridge and iron workers, moulders, printers and operating engineers, 1 each. The list of district councils which follows is arranged in trade groups, and gives the names and addresses of the presidents and secretaries where supplied:—

XI. RAILROAD BROTHERHOOD COMMITTEES

Bodies Composed of Delegates From Local Lodges of Railway Employees' Organizations—List of Railways on Which They Have Been Formed—Chief officers of the Various Committees and Legislative Boards.

In the plan of organization among the various railroad brotherhoods provision is made for committees known as "grievance," "adjustment," "protective," "legislative," etc., the objects of which have been discussed in some detail in earlier issues of this report. It may be stated, however, that the functions of the first three bodies are to deal with matters affecting conditions of employment on the several railways on which they have members employed. Through the efforts of these bodies many adjustments of local complaints have been affected, and on occasions they have made satisfactory settlement of disputes involving the whole membership on a given railway system.

The legislative boards are designed to protect the interest of railwaymen in legislative matters and also in respect to decisions made by the Board of Railway Commissioners. Four of the railroad brotherhoods have established such bodies.

In addition to the separate provincial legislative boards of the brotherhoods, there are joint legislative committees which have similar functions as regards their respective provinces, and which may co-operate with other organizations outside the running trades in securing uniformity of labour laws. Legislative representatives are maintained at Ottawa by the four organizations whose members are engaged in engine and train service, the other railroad employees' organizations sending representatives to Ottawa to look after the welfare of their members when such action is considered necessary.

The list of delegate bodies for each railway employees' organization is given separately, the names of the railroad over which the respective committees have jurisdiction being arranged in alphabetical order. In each case the name and address of the chairman and secretary (where obtainable) are given:—

XII. TRADES AND LABOUR COUNCILS

Delegate Organizations Designed to be the Medium of Expression of Organized Workers on Public Affairs—How Constituted—Affiliates Required to Pay a Per Capita Tax—Number Operating in Canada—Trades and Labour Councils Under Dual Charters—Division by Provinces—Names and Addresses of Presidents and Secretaries.

In the general scheme of organization among the Canadian branches of labour unions are included bodies known under the familiar term trades and labour councils, a function of which is to act as the mouthpiece of organized labour on public questions in the localities in which they are operating. These councils are constituted of delegates representing local branch unions in a given city or district but no local is obliged to affiliate as their joining is purely voluntary and it is therefore very seldom that all the unions in the locality become identified with the council.

Many of the international organizations have stressed the importance of their subordinate branches affiliating with the trades councils in their respective district, while other international bodies are insisting on this being done, this no doubt as a result of the insistence of the demand of certain councils in this connection. Very little interest in trade councils is manifested by local lodges of railroad brotherhoods and in only few instances do they affiliate. No power to issue charters is vested in the trades councils but each affiliated branch is required to pay a per capita tax for the purpose of meeting the general expenses.

In the past certain trade councils representative of the international trade union movement have endorsed the demands of certain affiliated bodies for improved working conditions, and not only have they given their moral support, but have been the agency through which appeals for funds to support strikes have been made, the amounts so collected being used mainly to augment the strike benefits allowed by the central organization with which the local unions involved are connected. Some trades and labour councils, however, undertook to go further, usurping the functions of international organizations in issuing strike orders. To check this proceeding the American Federation of Labor, which has 804 councils under charter, some of which are located in Canada, in 1919 amended its constitution inhibiting trades councils which hold charters from the federation to order any local branch union affiliated to go on strike or to take a vote on the question of a strike until the proper authorities have agreed to such action. The Trades and Labour Congress of Canada at its 1920 convention took action to deal summarily with councils which violated the constitution of the Congress or encouraged secession movements in the ranks of organized labour.

Somewhat similar organizations chartered by the All-Canadian Congress of Labour are termed "national labour councils", those identified with the National Catholic Unions are called "central councils", while those connected with the One Big Union are known as "central labour councils".

The six central councils operating under the auspices of the National Catholic Unions are included in Chapter VII.

There are thirteen councils listed in this chapter, operating respectively in Halifax, Moncton, Montreal, Quebec, Toronto, Windsor, Winnipeg, Regina, Saskatoon, Calgary, Edmonton, Prince Rupert and Vancouver, connected with the All-Canadian Congress of Labour. Two labour councils, located in Fort William, Ont., and Winnipeg, Man., are chartered by the One Big Union. The remaining 37 councils are chartered by the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, seventeen of these also holding charters from the American Federation of Labor.

The locations of the councils under dual charters are as follows: Belleville, Edmonton, Hamilton, Kingston, Kitchener, London, Montreal, Ottawa, Quebec, St. Catharines, Saint John, St. Thomas, Sudbury, Toronto, Vancouver, Windsor and Winnipeg.

During the year the Fort Frances Trades and Labour Council was chartered by the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, while the Hamilton National Labour Council ceased to function.

Of the 52 councils in operation in Canada, same number as recorded in 1933, 25 are located in Ontario cities, the remaining 27 being divided between the other provinces as follows: Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia, 5 each; Quebec, 4; New Brunswick and Manitoba, 3 each and Nova Scotia, 2.

The 13 labour councils chartered by the All-Canadian Congress of Labour are designated by the letters A.C.C.L., while those chartered by the One Big Union are designated by the letters O.B.U. The list following gives the location of the trades and labour councils in the Dominion, arranged in provincial groups (those operating under dual charters being marked with an asterisk), with the names and addresses of the presidents and secretaries.

XIII. TRADE UNION LOCAL UNITS

The Basis of the Trade Union Movement—Source from Which Revenue is Derived—Number of Local Branch Unions in Each Group Operating in Canada—Numerical Standing of the Nine Provinces—Cities Having Not Less Than Twenty Local Branch Unions—List of Union Branches, With Names and Addresses of Presidents and Secretaries.

The local units form the basis of the entire trade union movement, comprising all central organizations and delegate bodies, and are the source from which is derived the funds for the maintenance of all trade union activities. While a number of the local branches have been formed through the voluntary effort of trade unionists, the great majority have been established through the medium of regular representatives of central labour organizations operating on the North American continent, and which include Canada in their respective jurisdictions. In order to maintain their identity with the central organizations, and to ensure their eligibility for such benefits as are provided by the parent organization, the local branches are required to contribute a prescribed sum known as per capita tax, the amount of which is determined from time to time by the membership, either by referendum vote or by the action of a regular convention to which all branches in good standing are entitled to send delegates. Local branch unions consist as their names usually imply, of followers of a particular trade or calling, and their operations are mainly confined to a limited area, although in some instances a much wider territory is allotted. Where two or more local branch unions of a particular craft hold charters from the same central body in the same locality, district councils are sometimes formed for the purpose of dealing with matters of general concern to the members of the organization. Federations are developed by local branches of certain closely allied trades, and trades and labour councils are established in localities where the local branches are sufficiently numerous to maintain them. The finances necessary to support the work of the main organizations, as well as that of the several adjuncts in the scheme of organization, are, as above intimated, contributed by the local units, some of which are identified with each of the three classes of delegate bodies mentioned above.

The branches of the Commercial Telegraphers' Union of America are known as "system" divisions, which include the members employed on a certain class of work over a whole telegraph system. The Order of Railroad Telegraphers, besides having local lodges, have also "system" divisions, which cover the operators on a whole railroad system. In the present publication the names of the "system" divisions are printed under the heading of the locality in which the respective secretaries reside.

In an endeavour to obtain fullest particulars of all local branch unions in Canada application was made to the secretaries of all central organizing bodies for lists of their affiliations in Canada, as well as to the known officers of all local units of which the Department had a record. Of the 81 international organizations operating in the Dominion only a few failed to furnish a list of their branches in Canada, though in a number of cases it was necessary to make more than one request. Twenty-one Canadian organizations supplied information as to local branches, but to some of these, also, a second request was forwarded. In all cases where local officers failed to supply particulars on the first application a second request was made with the result that out of a total of 2,740 branches of international, Canadian and independent unions in the Dominion direct replies were received from 2,164.

Where particulars were not received from the local secretary, the names and addresses furnished by the general secretaries have been used.

According to information received in the Department there were in Canada at the close of the year 1,750 local branch unions identified with international craft organizations, a loss of 3 as compared with the year 1933. Besides these craft unions there are two international industrial unions operating in the Dominion, viz., the Industrial Workers of the World and the One Big Union. With the branches of the latter two organizations added, the total international affiliations in the Dominion number 1,809, an increase of 2 as compared with the previous year. The loss in branches in this group in 1933 was 60. The Canadian central organizations have 662 local branches, an increase of 14 over the number shown in this class for 1933. The independent units number 42, the same as last year. In addition there are 122 National Catholic syndicates, a gain of 12, and 105 branches of the Workers' Unity League, a gain of 6.

The number of trade union branches in Canada, as previously stated, is 2,740 as compared with 2,707 in 1933, an increase of 33, and their combined total reported membership is 281,774, a decrease of 4,446.

The province of Ontario, as usual, occupied first place as to number of local branches of international organization, having 734 of the total of 1,809; Quebec stands second with 274; British Columbia and Alberta, 175 each. The remaining five provinces rank as follows: Saskatchewan, 137; Manitoba, 136; Nova Scotia, 90; New Brunswick, 84, and Prince Edward Island, 4.

Ontario also stands first in the number of local branches of Canadian organizations, there being 252 in the province out of a total of 662; Quebec and British Columbia had 79 each; Alberta followed with 77. The standing of the other five provinces is as follows: Saskatchewan, 57; Nova Scotia, 47; Manitoba, 34; New Brunswick, 30, and Prince Edward Island, 7.

The four independent units of civic employees in Winnipeg are united in the Civic Employees' Federation, each unit having its own constitution and by-laws, the federation to which each unit sends three delegates and pays a per capita tax, being the executive of the consenting units.

Independent units to be formed or seceded from other organizations during the year were: (1) National Union of Asbestos Miners, Asbestos, Que.; (2) Association of Clothing Workers, Joliette, Que.; (3) Workers' Association of Joliette, Joliette, Que.; (4) Bricklayers' Union, Inc.; Montreal, Que.; (5) Labour Association of St. Michel Ward, Montreal, Que.; (6) Dairymen's Union of Riviere du Loup, Riviere du Loup, Que.; (7) Brown's Bread Salesmen's Union, Toronto, Ont.; (8) Toronto Vocational School Employees, Toronto, Ont.; (9) Vancouver Plasterers, Vancouver, B.C. The independent units now in existence number 42, same as 1933, and are divided by provinces as follows: Quebec, 17; British Columbia, 10; Alberta, 5; Manitoba, 5; Ontario, 3; New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island, 1 each. The following eight independent units were either dissolved or became identified with some other organization: Amalgamated Steel Workers, Sydney, N.S.; Dress Cutters' Union, Montreal, Que.; Workmen's Protective Association, Sturgeon Falls, Ont.; Electrical Workers' Union, Saskatoon, Sask.; Mine Workers' Association, Bienfait, Sask.; Civic Employees' Union, Edmonton, Alta.; B.C. Miners' Association, Michel, B.C.; Vancouver and District Waterfront Workers, New Westminster, B.C.

The numerical standing of the nine provinces of the Dominion as to local branches of all classes of labour organizations was as follows: Ontario, 1,054, a gain of 40; Quebec, 497, a gain of 16; British Columbia, 278, a gain of 4; Alberta, 270, a loss of 2; Saskatchewan, 194, a loss of 4; Manitoba, 183, a loss of 3; Nova Scotia, 137, a loss of 14; New Brunswick, 115, a loss of 4; Prince Edward Island, 12, no change.

There were 28 cities in Canada having not less than 20 local branch unions of all classes, the same number as recorded in 1933. Montreal as usual occupies first place with 196 (30 of which are National Catholic syndicates); Toronto ranks second with 179; Winnipeg stands third with 116; Vancouver being fourth with 108. The remaining 24 cities stand as follows: Edmonton, 81; Quebec 67 (26 National Catholic syndicates); Calgary, 66; Ottawa, 61 (2 National Catholic syndicates); London, 59; Hamilton, 59; Regina, 42; Saint John, 40; Saskatoon, 40; Victoria, 38; Halifax, 37; Windsor, 36; Fort William, 33; Three Rivers, 30 (16 National Catholic syndicates); Moose Jaw, 30; Port Arthur, 28; Sherbrooke, 28 (10 National Catholic syndicates); Lethbridge, 27; Moncton and St. Thomas, 26 each; North Bay, 25; Brantford, 24; Stratford and Brandon, 23 each.

During the interval between the dates at which reports were received from the central organizations and the preparation of this review a number of local branches have been established, their names are published under localities in which they were formed, and are marked with an asterisk (*).

The list here printed is arranged by provinces, proceeding from east to west, with cities and towns arranged in alphabetical order. Local unions under charters from the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada are designated by the letters T. and L.C. following the names; unions in Canada under charters direct from the American Federation of Labor have the letters A.F. of L as an affix; branches of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour are denoted by the letters A.C.C.L. and the independent units are so described. When the information could be obtained, the names and addresses of the presidents and secretaries are given, the post office address of the respective officers being the same as the heading under which their names appear, unless otherwise specified.

XIV. BUSINESS AGENTS

An essential feature of trade union organization is the office of business agent, a position which developed with the growth of the trade union movement. Previous to the establishment of this office, duties now intrusted to the Business Agent were frequently referred to committees, the members of which often found it difficult to give sufficient time to the work. The regular duties of a business agent, in the early days frequently referred to as the "walking delegate", required him, where permissible, to visit the various jobs on which members of his craft are employed to ascertain if all are in good standing with the organization and to endeavour to secure applications for membership if there are non-members working.

The agent is required to see that the fair wage clauses on government and municipal contracts (where there are such provisions) are observed, and where supposed violations are detected, he is empowered to take the necessary steps to bring them to the attention of the proper authorities. It is the duty of the business agent, also, to adjust difficulties, and to handle complaints concerning conditions of employment, when in the opinion of the union they are of sufficient importance to warrant such action being taken. Another important feature of the business agent's duty is that of receiving applications for labour from employers, and the supplying of men required so far as may be possible. Local branch unions employing business agents usually elect them at the annual meetings, their salaries being paid from local funds, either from the regular dues or by weekly or monthly assessment, but in some instances different methods prevail.

Where a single local is not strong enough to support a business agent sometimes two or more local unions of kindred trades combine to maintain such an office.

Published herewith are the names of 153 business agents, 4 less than the number reported in 1933. Where the position of business agent is combined with the secretaryship, as it is in many instances, the name of the business agent is omitted from the following list, but is published in the directory of secretaries of local unions.

The arrangement of the list recorded below shows the localities, proceeding from east to west, in which business agents are at present maintained, together with the name of the trades, the business agents, and their addresses.

XV. REVOLUTIONARY LABOUR ORGANIZATIONS

The Third (Communist) International—Red International of Labour Unions—Preamble to Constitution—Aims and Purpose of Red International—Canadian Organization Votes to Affiliate—Communist Party of Canada—Young Communist League—Platform of League—The Young Pioneers—Workers' Unity League of Canada—Chief Officers.

The Third (Communist) International which was established in Moscow, Russia, on March 6, 1919, was the agency through which the Red International of Labour Unions was brought into existence in July, 1921. According to the constitution of the latter, which was published in the report for 1922, the organization is committed to the overthrow of capitalism and the establishment of the Communist commonwealth.

The organization in this country to be set up as the counterpart of the Russian political body was the Workers' Party of Canada, which declared for a workers' republic and pledged itself to unite the workers under the banner of the Third International. As an adjunct to these revolutionary organizations there was the Trade Union Educational League, which, by a system of "boring from within" hoped to change the form of existing labour bodies on this continent and ultimately effect affiliation with the Red International of Labour Unions.

To assist in the propagation of the communist doctrine among Canadian youth the Communist Party of Canada (originally the Workers' Party of Canada) set up the Young Communist League, which later became an affiliate of the Young Communist International of Moscow, and for the younger children the Party formed the Young Pioneers.

RED INTERNATIONAL OF LABOUR UNIONS

On July 15, 1920, as an outcome of conferences held between Russian trade union officers and the executive of the Third International, a provisional committee known as the International Council of Trade and Industrial Unions was formed for the purpose of calling a world congress of trade unions in 1921. One of the first acts of the newly formed council was to launch an attack on the International Federation of Trade Unions (the full text of the manifesto of the International Council of Trade Unions was published in this report for the year 1920). In accordance with instructions the provisional committee convened the meeting of trade unions in Moscow in July, 1921. The congress decided to establish a permanent organization and adopted a constitution, the preamble to which is as follows:—

The class struggle has now reached such a degree of development and acuteness that the working class, in order to successfully conduct and complete its struggle for emancipation, must fight as a solid, revolutionary class power, not only on a national but also on an international scale, against the bourgeoisie, who despite the severe competition on the world market, is closely united in its hatred of the proletarian revolution and solidly welded against the slightest attempt of the proletariat to free itself from exploitation. Since the exploitation is international the fight against it must have an international character. All internationals of labour unions, which existed up to the present moment, at best were but international statistical bureaus for mutual information. The International Secretariat of Labour Unions before the war was merely an information agency; it did not pursue any militant class aims. The Amsterdam International of Labour Unions is even less fit to deal with the issues at hand than its predecessor. The first was but an information office, the latter occupies itself with politics of the worst kind, with anti-proletarian, bourgeois politics. It sets forth the idea of class co-operation, social peace and peaceful transition from capitalism to socialism. In its essence it is an international of counteraction to the struggle for emancipation of the working class. Against this international of impotence, confusion, subservience to the bourgeoisie, such as the Amsterdam International is, we must oppose—an international of revolutionary vigour, of class activity—an international which together with the Communist International will organize the working class for the overthrow of capitalism, the destruction of the bourgeois state and the establishment of the dictatorship of the proletariat; an international which will seize all the means of production and establish the communist commonwealth.

Such a militant labour union international can be built up only by revolutionary class unions, conscious of the purpose and methods of the defensive and offensive struggle against the class enemy. The problem history has put before the revolutionary unions requires the utmost concentration of power, unexampled intensity and the greatest self-sacrifice of the conscious vanguard elements of the working class.

The following are the aims and purpose of the Red International of Labour Unions:—

(1) To organize the large working mass in the whole world for the overthrow of capitalism, the emancipation of the toilers from oppression and exploitation and the establishment of the socialist commonwealth.

(2) To carry on a wide agitation and propaganda of the principles of revolutionary class struggle, social revolution, the dictatorship of the proletariat and revolutionary mass action for the purpose of overthrowing the capitalist system and the bourgeois state.
(3) To fight against the corruptive ulcer, gnawing at the vitals of the world labour union movement, of compromising with the bourgeoisie against the ideals of class co-operation and social peace and the absurd hopes for a peaceful transition from capitalism to socialism.
(4) To unite the revolutionary class elements of the world labour union movement and carry on decisive battle against the International Bureau of Labour attached to the League of Nations and against the Amsterdam International Federation of Trade Unions, which by their program and tactics are but the bulwark of the world bourgeoisie.
(5) To co-ordinate and regulate the struggle of the working class in all countries and organize international demonstrations each time, when the situation demands them.
(6) To take the initiative of international campaigns about prominent events of class struggle, to open subscription lists for the benefit of strikers in great social conflicts, etc.

(2) Application of these principles in its daily struggle with capitalism and the bourgeois state.
(3) Recognition of the necessity of the overthrow of capitalism through the social revolution and the establishment of the dictatorship of the proletariat for the transition period.
(4) Recognition and submission to the international proletarian discipline.
(5) Recognition and application of the decisions of the constituent congress of the Red International of Labour Unions.
(6) The rupture with the Amsterdam yellow international.
(7) United action with all the revolutionary organizations and the Communist Party of the country in all defensive and offensive activities against the bourgeoisie.

Shortly after the formation of the Red International of Labour Unions (the name selected for the new organization) it issued a further manifesto to the organized workers of the world in which the Amsterdam International (I.F.T.U.) was condemned and the leadership of certain well-known labour men severely criticized.

CANADIAN ORGANIZATION VOTES TO AFFILIATE

Early in 1922 the general convention of the Lumber Workers' Industrial Union of Canada, with headquarters in Vancouver, adopted a proposal that the organization should immediately affiliate with the Red International of Labour Unions. Accordingly application for membership was forwarded to Moscow, affiliation being subsequently completed. Besides voting to affiliate with the Red International the convention of the Lumber Workers suspended the Edmonton District of that organization on their refusal to affiliate with the Moscow body. The parent body of the Lumber Workers, however, became an affiliate of the Russian organization in 1922, but during 1926 the union passed out of existence.

COMMUNIST PARTY OF CANADA

The Communist Party of Canada (originally called the Workers' Party of Canada) was established on December 11, 1921, at a conference held in Toronto. A provisional organization committee was set up with W. Moriarity, of Toronto, as secretary.

In connection with the formation of the Workers' Party of Canada it may be interesting to recall that late in 1921, the organization of the Workers' Party of America was completed at a convention held in New York.

1. To consolidate the existing labour organizations and develop them into organizations of militant struggle against capitalism, to permeate the labour unions and strive to replace the present reactionary leadership by revolutionary leadership.
2. To participate in the elections and the general political life of the country. Its representatives in the various legislative and administrative institutions will expose the sham democracy of capitalism and help to mobilize the workers for the final struggle against the capitalist state. They will give conscious and public expression to the every day grievances of the working class in concrete demands upon the capitalist governments and their institutions.
3. To lead in the fight for the immediate needs of the workers, broaden and deepen their demands, organize and develop out of their every day struggles a force for the abolition of capitalism.
4. To work for the overthrow of capitalism and capitalist dictatorship by the conquest of political power, the establishment of the working class dictatorship and of the workers' republic.

In 1931 the Communist Party of Canada was declared by an Ontario court to be an unlawful association. At that time eight members of the Communist Party were sent to penitentiary, but they have since been released, after serving the prescribed term.

YOUNG COMMUNIST LEAGUE

The Young Workers' League, afterwards called the Young Communist League, previously referred to, was organized July 22, 1922, under the auspices of the Communist Party. The platform of the League was set forth as follows:—

1. To penetrate the mass of the working class youth with communist agitation and education and to draw them away from the youth organizations established by the capitalists such as the Boy Scouts, Girl Guides, Church Clubs, Y.M.C.A., etc.
2. To conduct a militant campaign against capitalist militarism among the youth who form the bulk of the capitalist armies.
3. To link up with the militant section of the working class in the unions and work for the conversion of the weak craft unions into strong industrial unions capable of defending the workers against the offensive of the capitalists on their standard of living and for the overthrow of capitalism. To pay attention to the economic needs of the working class youth by demanding: (a) prohibition of all children from engaging in any kind of labour until they have reached the age of sixteen; (b) young workers to receive the same wages as adult workers for the same work.

THE YOUNG PIONEERS

The Young Pioneers, an organization established for the purpose of furthering the Communistic doctrine among the younger children of the Dominion, has no national officers but works under the direction and jurisdiction of the Young Communist League.

WORKERS' UNITY LEAGUE OF CANADA

The Workers' Unity League was established in 1930 as the Canadian section of the Red International of Labour Unions, for the purpose of organizing the Canadian workers into revolutionary industrial unions, but the affiliation with the R.I.L.U. was stated by officials to have terminated in 1932. The constitution of the League adopted at the second convention held in Toronto in 1932, while not disclosing the aims and objects, sets out in detail the plan of organization and mentions the labour bodies with which the League shall strive to strengthen and improve existing fraternal relations. These are the Red International of Labour Unions, the Minority Movement of Great Britain and the Trade Union Unity League of the U.S.A.

The Workers' Unity League of Canada has in affiliation three organizations which were in existence prior to the establishment of the League, viz., Lumber Workers' Industrial Union of Canada, Mine Workers' Union of Canada, and the Industrial Union of Needle Trades Workers of Canada. Since coming into existence, the Workers' Unity League of Canada has been instrumental in forming a number of other central labour organizations, the first four of which were formed during the year 1933, as follows: Fishermen and Cannery Workers' Industrial Union of Canada; Food Workers' Industrial Union of Canada; Furniture and Wood Workers' Industrial Union of Canada; Shoe and Leather Workers' Industrial Union; Auto Workers' Industrial Union, and the Textile Workers' Union of Canada.

In addition to the central organizations enumerated above, the League, according to the report of the general secretary, had 12 district councils, and 30 directly chartered local branches.

The combined reported membership of the Workers' Unity League of Canada was 24,086 as compared with 21,252 in 1933.

The list following shows the chief officers of the Workers' Unity League and the location of its directly chartered unions, together with ten affiliated organizations, with the names and addresses of the presidents and secretaries, number of locals and the location by cities and towns of their branches.

XVI. ORGANIZATIONS OF WORKERS THROUGHOUT THE WORLD

Trade Union Membership in Seventy Countries—International Federation of Trade Unions—General Council Meeting Held at Weymouth, England—International Trade Federations—Membership of the I.F.T.U.—Annual Convention British Trades Union Congress—Affiliated Organizations With Their Memberships, etc.—Chief Officers—American Federation of Labor—Attendance at Fifty-fourth Convention at San Francisco, Calif.—Membership—Officers of the Federation and Trades Departments.

Besides giving the trade union membership in Canada, the Department has endeavoured to secure authentic information concerning the number of organized workers throughout the world. The figures here appended were for the most part obtained from publications of the International Federation of Trade Unions, and represent (with the exception of figures for Canada and the United States, which were compiled from departmental records, and which give union membership as at close of the year 1934) the number of organized workers at the latest date for which figures are available. The total number of organized workers of all classes in the seventy countries whose names appear in the accompanying table is 41,206,689.

As has been explained in previous issues of this report, in Great Britain and Canada, and other British countries, as well as the United States, there is a more clearly defined limitation to the scope of trade union organization than prevails in some of the European countries where there are organized bodies which operate along political rather than industrial lines, and the membership of which is not confined strictly to wage-earners. With this explanation, the figures for the various countries are given as follows:—

INTERNATIONAL FEDERATION OF TRADE UNIONS

The International Federation of Trade Unions, which in 1933 decided to transfer its headquarters from Berlin, Germany, to Paris, France, was originally formed in 1901, under the name of the International Secretariat, its present title being chosen in 1913 at the suggestion of representatives of the American Federation of Labor. With the outbreak of the World War the federation ceased to function, the headquarters at the time being in Berlin, Germany. In July, 1919, a meeting was held in Amsterdam, Holland, when the affairs of the old federation were closed out and a new federation established. The American Federation of Labor was represented at these meetings but did not continue its connection, claiming that the rate of per capita tax was too high, and also objecting to the issuance by the executive officers of declarations of policy with which the American Federation of Labor was at variance. The labour movement of Canada as represented by the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, is in affiliation with the International Federation, having been accepted into membership in June, 1920. Since that time Mr. Tom Moore and Mr. P. M. Draper, president and secretary-treasurer respectively of the Congress, have been on the general council of the Federation, the former as representative and the last named as substitute.

During the year, more especially prior to the meeting of the International Labour Conference in Geneva, an active campaign in the interest of the 40-hour week was carried on by the I.F.T.U.

At the executive meeting of the Federation held January 31 and February 1, 1934, the application for affiliation from the Indian Trade Union Movement with a membership of 136,714, was accepted. The membership of a number of affiliates of the I.F.T.U. were considerably reduced by the withdrawal of the German and Austrian members, but in some cases these losses were counteracted by other organizations identifying themselves with the National centres.

The general council meeting of the I.F.T.U. was held at Weymouth, England, August 27-29, 1934, at which the following national centres were represented, as well as 23 of the International Trade Secretariats: Austria, Belgium, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, France, Great Britain, Holland, India, Italy, Luxemburg, Palestine, Saar Territory, Spain, Sweden and Switzerland. The trade unions of Ireland and Norway were represented although the national labour centres of these countries are not identified with the I.F.T.U.

The general secretary W. Schevenels, supplemented verbally the written report on activities for 1933-34 and reported particularly on the extent of the relief work for Germany and Austria. He stated that "up to date over six million French francs had been expended on the latter, which is thus the largest single trade union relief action carried out on the international scale." The secretary also reported on the proposals for re-organization of the I.F.T.U., and the plan for amalgamating the International Trade Secretariats. In the discussion which followed the representatives of the International Trade Secretariats expressed the wish to retain the complete independence and autonomy of the internationals but to work in closer co-operation. In order to find a solution to the problem a joint committee of representatives of the I.F.T.U. executive and of the I.T.S. was appointed.

A private session was held to consider in detail the problem of the "United Front." In this connection, the executive issued the following report:—

The meeting of the General Council of the International Federation of Trade Unions held at Weymouth from 27th-29th August, 1934, considered after an introductory report by Jouhaux, French representative, the question of the united front and declared that the overtures of the Communists and of the Red International of Labour Unions at Moscow for the united front and for unity of action are manoeuvres devoid of any sincere intention. The International Federation of Trade Unions once again points out that the Red International of Labour Unions of Moscow must bear the blame for the division and weakening of the Trade Union Movement, in view of its appeals to the workers extending over many years to fight against the "free" Trade Union Movement.

The International Federation of Trade Unions, which ever since 1919 has striven unswervingly for the unity of the Trade Union Movement and which considers unity to be to-day more vital and necessary than ever, regards the International Federation of Trade Unions as the sole basis on which all the workers of the world can unite. It calls upon all workers to join the Trade Unions affiliated to the I.F.T.U. and expects that—in accordance with the appeals for unity issued by Moscow—the Communist Labour Unions and consequently also the Red International of Labour Unions will dissolve and that their members will return to the Trade Unions organized in the I.F.T.U.

The next general council meeting of the I.F.T.U. will be held in Copenhagen, Denmark.

INTERNATIONAL TRADE FEDERATIONS

For the purpose of co-ordinating the operations of unions comprising the members of a particular craft in the various countries, and of maintaining friendly relations, international trade federations have been established. Of the 29 trade federations, 28 are in affiliation with the International Federation of Trade Unions, the exception being the International Federation of Radiotelegraphists. All of these Federations have their headquarters in Europe, and include in their affiliations the trade unions of many countries, the combined membership in some instances reaching over the million mark. According to information received in the Department, nine of these international trade federations have in affiliation labour organizations which have local branches in Canada, their names and those of the affiliates with Canadian branches being: (1) International Federation of Radiotelegraphists, affiliate, Electrical Communication Workers of Canada; (2) International Clothing Workers' Federation, affiliates International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, Journeymen Tailors' Union, International Fur Workers' Union and the United Hatters, Cap and Millinery Workers' International Union; (3) International Miners' Federation, affiliate United Mine Workers of America; (4) International Transport Workers' Federation, affiliate the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees; (5) International Union of Federations of Workers in the Food and Drink Trades, affiliate Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union; (6) International Union of Woodworkers, affiliate the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America; (7) International Secretariat of Painters and Kindred Trades, affiliate Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America; (8) International Metal Workers' Federation, affiliate International Association of Machinists; (9) Postal International, affiliates Federated Association of Letter Carriers of Canada and the National Federation of Post Office Clerks of the United States. There is one international federation which has in affiliation an organization operating in the United States, but which has no branches in Canada, viz. the Universal Alliance of Diamond Workers, affiliate Diamond Workers' Protective Union of America. All of the above-mentioned affiliates of the respective international trade federations, except the Electrical Communication Workers of Canada, the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees, and the Federated Association of Letter Carriers, are identified with the American Federation of Labor. The names of the remaining nineteen international trade secretariats are as follows: International Federation of Building Workers, International Federation of Bookbinders and Kindred Trades, International Typographical Secretariat, International Federation of General Factory Workers, International Union of Hairdressers, International Federation of Glassworkers, International Union of Hotel, Restaurant and Bar Workers, International Landworkers' Federation, International Federation of Lithographers and Kindred Trades, International Federation of Workers in Public Services, International Federation of Commercial, Clerical and Technical Employees, International Secretariat of Stone Workers, International Secretariat of Tobacco Workers, International Federation of Textile Workers' Association, International Federation of Pottery Workers, International Federation of Teachers, International Federation of Boot and Shoe Operatives and Leather Workers, and the International Federation of Hatters.

MEMBERSHIP OF THE INTERNATIONAL FEDERATION OF TRADE UNIONS

The earliest figures available as to the membership of the International Federation, are for the year 1904, and show a total of 2,378,975 comprised in fourteen affiliated organizations. In 1912, the membership had risen to 7,394,461 and the affiliations had increased to nineteen. Subsequent figures as to the numerical standing of the federation were not available until after the Amsterdam congress in July, 1919, when the affiliates numbered fourteen and the membership reported at 17,633,000. In 1921 there were twenty-four countries affiliated with a combined membership of 23,907,059. From 1922 onward the membership showed a decline, although the affiliations generally showed an increase. In 1933, there were 28 national centres in affiliation with a reported membership of 9,092,260.

The appended table shows 28 national centres in affiliation with the International Federation of Trade Unions, with an approximate membership of 8,671,917. Where later figures are not available, those shown for 1933 are repeated.

CHIEF OFFICERS OF THE FEDERATION

OTHER INTERNATIONAL ORGANIZATIONS

In various countries throughout the world there are certain other organizations of socialist and labour parties having for their objects the improvement of social and labour conditions through political action. The original organization of this kind and from which present bodies have developed was the International Workingmen's Association, known as the First International, founded in 1864 and dissolved in 1876. There are six main international organizations as follows: International Federation of Trade Unions, Paris, France (referred to previously); Christian (Roman Catholic) concentrated in the Christian International of Utrecht (referred to in Chapter VII, National Catholic Unions); Communist, concentrated in the Red International of Labour Unions of Moscow; Anarchist, concentrated in the International Working Men's Association, Madrid (formerly Berlin); Independent, concentrated in the International Federation of Neutral Trade Unions, Utrecht, and the trade union of the two America's concentrated in the Pan-American Federation of Labor, at Washington, D.C.

MEMBERSHIP OF THE BRITISH TRADES UNION CONGRESS

The paid-up membership of the British Trades Union Congress as reported to the 66th annual meeting held at Weymouth, England, September 3-7, 1934, was 3,294,581, a decrease of 73,330 as compared with the membership in 1933. At this meeting Mr. J. McLeod, Toronto, Ont., third vice-president of the International Union of Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers' International Union of America, represented the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada. The general council of the British Trades Union Congress is made up of representatives of the 17 trade groups comprising it, each group being represented according to their numerical standing, as follows:

| Trade group | No. of unions | No. of delegates | Membership |
| 1. Mining and Quarrying | 7 | 100 | 527,331 |

CHIEF OFFICERS OF THE CONGRESS

The chief officers of the Congress are: Chairman, William Kean; vice-chairman, A. Conley; general secretary, Walter M. Citrine, Smith Square, London, S.W.1, England.

For many years there were in Canada branches of organizations with headquarters in the United Kingdom affiliated with the British Trades Union Congress. The connection of the last of these was severed in 1925 when the Canadian locals of the Amalgamated Society of Carpenters and Joiners were granted complete self-government, becoming the Amalgamated Carpenters of Canada, which organization is now merged with the Amalgamated Building Workers of Canada.

AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR

The fifty-fourth annual convention of the American Federation of Labor, which was held in San Francisco, Cal., October 1-12, 1934, was attended by 433 delegates, the representation being divided as follows: 89 delegates represented international and national organizations while 2 departments, 23 state federations, 76 city central bodies (trades and labour councils), and 97 local trade and federal labour unions were represented by one delegate each. The Trades and Labour Congress of Canada was represented by one fraternal delegate, while the British Trades Union Congress was represented by two fraternal delegates.

MEMBERSHIP OF THE FEDERATION

The American Federation of Labor at the end of the first year of its existence (1881) reported a membership of less than 5,000. This number had increased to 1,996,004 in 1913. The secretary of the Federation in reporting to the 1934 convention gave the paid-up membership at the close of the fiscal year, August 31, 1934, as 2,608,011, an increase of 481,215 over the number reported the previous year.

The average paid-up membership for the past 20 years was as follows:—

|---|---|---|---|
| 1915 | 1,946,347 | 1925 | 2,877,297 |
| 1916 | 2,072,702 | 1926 | 2,803,966 |
| 1917 | 2,371,434 | 1927 | 2,812,407 |
| 1918 | 2,726,478 | 1928 | 2,896,063 |
| 1919 | 3,260,068 | 1929 | 2,933,545 |
| 1920 | 4,078,740 | 1930 | 2,961,096 |
| 1921 | 3,906,528 | 1931 | 2,889,550 |
| 1922 | 3,195,635 | 1932 | 2,532,261 |

Supplementing his report on the membership of the Federation the secretary pointed out that national and international organizations are required to pay per capita tax only upon their fully paid-up members, and that therefore the membership reported did not include all the members who were unemployed during the fiscal year.

The total affiliations as at August 31, 1934, included 109 national and international organizations representing 32,684 local branches and 1,788 local trade and federal labour unions, making in all 34,472 branches. Four trade departments, 49 state federations and 686 city central bodies are also under charters from the Federation. The local branches which constitute the national and international organizations are the source from which nearly all funds are secured to carry on every activity in the labour movement; the local branches also constitute the state federations, city central bodies and local department councils. There were 738 of the last-named, the charters for which were derived from the federation departments.

OFFICERS OF THE FEDERATION

As a result of the decision of the 54th convention of the American Federation of Labor, the number of officers of that body were increased by seven additional vice-presidents, the full list being as follows:—

XVII. REGISTRATION OF TRADE UNIONS AND UNION LABELS

Trade Unions Act Passed in 1872 to Protect Organized Workers in Their Various Activities—Bona Fide Trade Unions Secure Legal Status in Certain Respects by Registering—List of Unions Registered—Professional Syndicates Act Passed by Quebec Legislature in 1924—Number of Unions Registered Under This Act—Registration of Union Labels.

In order that trade unions, while carrying out their various activities, might not be charged with being in restraint of trade, the Dominion Government passed the Trade Unions Act in 1872. The Act declared the purpose of a trade union not to be unlawful so as to render any person liable to prosecution merely on the ground that they were in restraint of trade. The registration of bona fide trade unions in the office of the Secretary of State was also permitted under the Act, such unions thereby securing legal status in certain respects. The Criminal Law Amendment Act enacted during the same session contained provisions as to picketing, intimidation, etc. During the 1934 session of parliament an amendment to the law in regard to picketing was passed. The present law on the subjects previously referred to is to be found in the Criminal Code, Sections 496-502, Chapter 36. The provision in the Trade Unions Act as to criminal conspiracy is also now included in the Criminal Code. As has been previously mentioned in the introduction, the provinces of Quebec, Manitoba and British Columbia also have legislation regarding trade unions.

Amendments to the Trade Mark and Design Act adopted by the Parliament of Canada permits of the registration of trade union labels.

REGISTERED TRADE UNIONS

The Act not being compulsory, not many unions have sought registration, the total number, up to the end of 1934, being 46. The following list gives the names of the existing registered unions, which include nine central organizations, two National Catholic unions, one local branch of an international organization, and one independent body, and indicates the date of registration:—

*L'Union Nationale des Ouvriers de la Rive Sud, March 29, 1918.
Brotherhood of Express Employees, April 27, 1918 (formerly Brotherhood of Dominion Express Employees).

Amalgamated Building Workers of Canada, Toronto, Ont., November 27, 1934.

PROFESSIONAL SYNDICATES ACT

The Professional Syndicates Act was passed by the Quebec Legislature in 1924. Under this statute, after performance of certain formalities, a union is constituted a corporation enjoying civil rights, and which inter alia, authorizes the registered unions to "enter into contracts or agreements with all other syndicates, societies, undertakings or persons respecting the attainments of their objects, and particularly such as relate to the collective conditions of labour." At the close of 1933 seven delegate bodies and fifty-four syndicates had been registered under the Act. During 1934 two delegate bodies and sixteen syndicates were registered under the Act, making a total of 79 registrations. The full list of existing labour bodies which have registered under the Professional Syndicates Act in order of registration, is as follows, the last eighteen being the registrations for 1934.

Source of Statistical Information—Local Branches and Membership of International Organizations—Numerical Standing of the Larger Labour Bodies—Branches and Membership of Canadian Organizations—Grand Total of Trade Unionists in Canada—Female Membership—Standing of Canadian Central Bodies—Trade Union Branches by Provinces—Delegate Bodies—Trade Union Membership by Localities.

The information from which the statistics as to numerical strength of the various central labour organizations and their affiliations have been prepared was in the main furnished early in 1935 by officials of the unions, the figures supplied giving the standing as at the close of 1934. Application for particulars was made by the Department to every known central international and Canadian organization, and in most instances the information solicited was promptly supplied, very few failing to furnish the desired statistical data. The figures recorded for the organizations which did not report, or only sent in partial returns have been secured from departmental records and other reliable sources, but where it has been necessay to use the same information as appeared in the previous report, such figures are printed in italics.

In table 1, giving the number of local unions and membership of international organizations in Canada, the figures have been arranged to show, respectively, (1) the number of branches, and (2) the membership of each organization in Canada and elsewhere. Defining the term "elsewhere" it may be mentioned that several internationals have local branches in countries other than the United States and Canada. Among these are the following: (1) The American Federation of Labor and the Brotherhood of Painters and Decorators, with branches in the Philippine Islands and Panama; (2) the International Brotherhood of Blacksmiths, Drop Forgers and Helpers, the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen and Helpers, and the United Association of Plumbers and Gas Fitters all have branches in the Panama Canal Zone; (3) the Cigarmakers' International Union and the Leather Workers' International Union, with branches in the Philippine Islands; (4) the Order of Railway Conductors, with a division in Mexico; (5) the International Seamen's Union, the Operative Plasterers' International Association, and the American Federation of Musicians, with branches in the Hawaiian Islands; (6) the International Typographical Union with branches in Newfoundland, the Hawaiian and Philippine Islands; (7) the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, with branches in Newfoundland, the Hawaiian and Philippine Islands and Panama; (8) the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers with branches in Panama and Newfoundland; (9) the International Association of Machinists, with branches in Panama, the Hawaiian and Philippine Islands; (10) the Journeymen Tailors' Union, the International Brotherhood of Paper Makers, the International Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers, the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union, the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union, the International Union of Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen and the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, with branches in Newfoundland.

The Coopers' International Union reported members in Canada for 1934, and the American Federation of Government Employees having established a branch in the Dominion during the past year, the names of the two organizations are added to the list of international bodies appearing in Table 1, of this chapter. The Leather Workers' International Union is dropped from the list having lost the one local branch which its affiliate the International Pocket Book Workers' Union had in Canada. With these changes there are 79 of what are termed international craft organizations with local branches or members in Canada, which with the two industrial unions known as the One Big Union and the Industrial Workers of the World, make a total of 81 international organizations operating in the Dominion at the close of 1934.

The figures in the accompanying table show that there were in Canada at the close of the year, 1750 local branches of what are classified as international craft organizations, a loss of 3 as compared with the year 1933. The One Big Union reported 48 local units, a gain of two, and the Industrial Workers of the World reported 11 branches, a gain of 3. The total number of branches in Canada of all classes of international bodies is 1,809, a gain of 2. The reported membership and that secured from other reliable sources gives the international craft organizations a total of 133,669, a loss of 7,132. The One Big Union reported a Canadian membership of 23,580, a gain of 280. The Industrial Workers of the World reported 4,155 members, a gain of 537. These figures indicate that the aggregate of members in the Dominion at the close of 1934 identified with the organizations whose names appear in the accompanying table was 161,404, a loss of 6,315. In 1933 the number of branches of international organizations was 1,807, with a combined membership of 167,719. The largest membership in Canada of international organizations was recorded in 1920, when it stood at 267,247, comprised in 2,455 local branches.

The 79 international craft organizations whose names appear in the accompanying table represent a total of 30,371 branches under their respective jurisdictions, with a combined membership of 3,498,097; the One Big Union and the Industrial Workers of the World combined have 94 local branches with a reported membership of 33,845, making a grand total of 30,465 branches represented by the 81 organizations, and an aggregate membership of 3,531,942. Only 8 of the 81 international organizations having branches or members in Canada are not in affiliation with the American Federation of Labor, and between them they have 3,672 subordinate branches, with a combined membership of 337,289, of which 421 branches with 48,278 members are located in the Dominion. Of the remaining 3,194,653 members, comprised in 26,793 branches identified with the 73 international craft organizations affiliated with the American Federation of Labor, including the federal and trade unions of the Federation itself 113,126 belong to 1,388 Canadian branches. The total average paid-up membership as at August 31, 1934 (end of fiscal year) of the American Federation of Labor with its 109 affiliated national and international organizations and directly chartered local unions was reported to be 2,608,011. It was stated in the executive report of the Federation that "national and international organizations are required to pay the per capita tax upon their full paid-up membership and, therefore, the membership does not include all the members who were employed during the fiscal year.

"A survey of the membership of the national and international organizations and the unions directly affiliated with the A. F. of L. shows that the reason for the comparatively small increase in membership is due almost entirely to the unemployment of members."

An analysis of the returns received from the 81 international organizations shows that 48 made gains, 29 had losses, and 4 had no change in their standing.

The United Mine Workers of America replaces the Brotherhood of Maintenance-of-Way Employees as heading the list as to Canadian membership of international craft organizations, having 12,083 comprised in 40 local branches, a gain of 1,133 members but a loss of 2 local branches. The Brotherhood of Maintenance-of-Way Employees occupies second place, with a loss of 2,307 members and 1 local branch, now having 11,560 members comprised in 196 local branches. Third place is taken by the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen with 9,828 members and 90 local branches, the same number of branches but a loss in membership of 3,070. Ranking fourth is the Brotherhood of Railway Carmen, which lost one local branch and 324 members, now having 9,367 members comprised in 113 local branches. The Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway, Bus and Coach Employees of America, with 24 locals, no change, and a membership of 7,559, an increase of 1,559, stands in fifth place, followed by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, which had 6,507 members, a gain of 7, and 15 locals, the same number as in the previous year. Other international organizations which reported a membership of 5,000 or over were: International Association of Machinists, 5,600, a loss of 320, and the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, Freight Handlers, Express and Station Employees, 5,409, an increase of 2,247.

In Table 1A is recorded the number of local branches and membership of the Canadian organizations. At the close of 1934, the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, the greater part of whose affiliated membership is drawn from the international organizations which have local branches in the Dominion, had 65 directly chartered local branches, a gain of 16, with a combined membership of 6,151, an increase of 823. The All-Canadian Congress of Labour, whose membership is comprised in Canadian organizations, had 48 local unions under direct charters, an increase of 9, with a gain in membership of 1,371, now having 4,491. The remaining organizations had between them 549 branches, with a combined membership of 44,844. The total membership of the Canadian group at the close of 1934, according to information furnished by the various organizations, or obtained from other reliable sources, was 55,486. These figures indicate that there were 14 more branch unions and 778 members in this group than were recorded in 1933 for the same organizations.

In addition to the local branches affiliated with either the international or Canadian organizations there were 42 independent trade unions in the Dominion, same as in 1933, the membership reported by 32 being 10,452. For 1933, 41 independent units out of 42 such bodies reported a membership of 15,545.

The membership of the National Catholic unions as reported by the general secretary of the Federation of Catholic Workers of Canada, was 30,346, an increase of 3,452, comprised in 122 bodies, 8 of which are designated as study circles, a gain of 12.

According to the information furnished the Department by the officers of labour organizations and that secured from other reliable sources, there were in Canada at the close of the year 2,740 local branch unions of all classes, an increase of 33, divided as follows: International, 1,809; Canadian, 662; Independent, 42; National Catholic, 122; Workers' Unity League, 105. The combined membership in the 2,740 local unions was 281,774, apportioned among the various groups as follows: International, 161,404; Canadian, 55,486; Independent, 10,452; National Catholic, 30,346; Workers' Unity League, 24,086.

Subdividing the international group it will be found that the craft unions in Canada number 1,750, with a membership of 133,669; that the One Big Union had 48 units with 23,580 members, and the Industrial Workers of the World, 11 branches with 4,155 members.

The Department has endeavoured to ascertain for this report, as for previous reports, what proportion of trade union membership is made up of female workers. As many of the organizations do not keep separate records of male and female members these particulars are difficult to obtain. Of the 81 international organizations whose names appear in the accompanying table only 12 furnished the desired information, the total number of female members reported in their respective jurisdictions (outside of Canada), in which they have a combined membership of 3,531,942, being only 64,792. This female membership is undoubtedly far short of the actual number of women workers identified with organized labour, there being many other organizations besides those reporting which admit female members, but as above stated, keep no separate records of male and female workers, and consequently made no report. Some of the organizations in making returns to the Department state definitely that separate records are not kept.

The Canadian female membership of trade unions as at the close of 1934, as reported by 227 of the local branch unions of all classes in the Dominion was 7,015, divided by provinces as follows: Nova Scotia, 28; New Brunswick, 84; Quebec, 3,138; Ontario, 2,122; Manitoba, 419; Saskatchewan, 78; Alberta, 386; British Columbia, 764.

The National Women's Trade Union League, which has the endorsation of the American Federation of Labor and the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada is a body designed to assist in the organization of women workers. The league, which has head offices in Washington, D.C., does not issue charters to trade unions of women, its efforts being directed towards encouraging the female workers to enter the existing labour organizations. The platform of the league embraces (1) organization of workers into trade unions, (2) equal pay for equal work, (3) eight-hour day and 44-hour week, (4) an American standard of living, (5) full citizenship for women, (6) the outlawry of war, and (7) closer affiliation of women workers of all countries. Miss Rose Schneiderman is the president and Miss Elizabeth Christman is secretary, their office being located at 306 Machinists' Building, Ninth St. and Mt. Vernon Place, N.W., Washington, D.C.

(b) Includes only the unions directly chartered, i.e., those unions not affiliated through any international organization. The American Federation of Labor at the close of the fiscal year August 31, 1934, had 109 national and international unions affiliated, representing 32,684 locals, as well as four departments, 49 state federations, 686 city central bodies and 1,788 local trade and federal labour unions, making a total of 2,636 charters, representing an average membership of 2,608,011. Because of unemployment there were thousands of members for whom no per capita tax was paid by the affiliated unions, and who, therefore, are not included in the number of members reported.

(e) Indicates that although suspended from membership in the A. F. of L., the Canadian membership is still affiliated with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada.

*Indicates that union is affiliated with American Federation of Labor.

Indicate that union has also affiliated its Canadian membership with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada.

CANADIAN CENTRAL BODIES

In the appended table will be found the reported memberships of the Canadian central labour bodies, included in which is the name of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, the great majority of whose membership, as previously stated, is drawn from international organizations, the numerical strength of such bodies already having been taken into account. The Congress, besides the affiliated membership of 60 international and 3 Canadian organizations, had 65 directly chartered local unions, an increase of 16. The membership of the unions in direct affiliation which is recorded in the accompanying table, and not taken into account elsewhere, is 6,151, a gain of 823.

The total membership of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, at the close of its fiscal year (August 31) on which per capita tax was paid, was reported at 103,424, a decrease of 2,122, comprised in 1,523 local branch unions, a gain of 11.

The All-Canadian Congress of Labour had in affiliation the 10 central bodies marked thus (†) in the appended table, as well as the One Big Union, whose name appears in table No. 1 of this chapter. In addition to these affiliated organizations, the Congress had 48 directly chartered local unions, a gain of 9, with a combined membership of 4,491, an increase of 1,371. The total membership of the Congress at the close of the year was reported at 55,645, a gain of 527, comprised in 396 local unions, an increase of 8.

The Amalgamated Building Workers of Canada reported a loss of 2 branches and 1,283 members, now having a membership of 7,100 comprised in 29 local branches.

The Canadian Bushmen's Union had 878 members, a gain of 378 for the year, comprised in one central body.

The Canadian Brussels Carpet Weavers' Beneficial Association reported the same number of locals, viz., 5, with a loss of 1 member, now having 139.

The Amalgamated Civil Servants of Canada, which is the strongest numerically of the four organizations embracing employees of the Dominion Government whose names are recorded in the trade union group, had 41 local branches, a loss of 1, with a combined membership of 4,255, an increase of 83. The Federated Association of Letter Carriers ranks second in this group of organizations of Dominion Government employees, having 54 local branches, an increase of 1, with a membership of 1,451, a gain of 150. The Canadian Postal Employees (formerly the United Postal Employees of Canada) stands third with 1,156 members comprised in 30 local branches, a decline in membership of 316, and a loss of 3 branches. The Dominion Railway Mail Clerks' Federation reported a gain of 2 local branches and 2 members, now having 18 branches and 904 members.

The Civil Service Association of Alberta had 10 branches, no change, with 900 members, an increase of 50.

The Electrical Communication Workers of Canada reported the same number of branches, viz., 7, but a loss in membership of 8, now having 192.

The Canadian Electrical Trades Union failed to report, but it has been ascertained from other reliable sources that there were 5 local unions, a loss of 1, the membership for 1933 of 550 being repeated.

The Canadian Association of Stationary Engineers had a gain of 5 local branches, now having 20, with a combined membership of 521, a loss of 73.

The Brotherhood of Express Employees reported the same number of local branches, namely, 27, but a loss in membership of 61, now having 1,263.

The Provincial Federation of Ontario Fire Fighters retained its 26 branches which are not under dual charters, the same number as recorded in 1933 with 739 members, a gain of 13. The remaining 7 locals of fire fighters are taken into account in table No. 1.

The Native Brotherhood of British Columbia failed to report, and therefore the figures for 1933 are repeated.

The National Association of Marine Engineers of Canada retained their 15 local branches but lost 112 members, now having 688.

The Amalgamated Mine Workers of Nova Scotia did not report, but departmental records show that there were 11 local branches of this organization in existence at the close of the year, a loss of 8, with 5,262 members, a decrease of 101.

The Canadian Printers' Union reported a gain of 128 members, now having 250, comprised in one general body.

The Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees, which has the strongest following of the organizations included in the Canadian group, had 167 local divisions, a loss of 4, with a combined membership of 13,478, a gain of 86.

The Canadian Association of Railwaymen (formerly the Canadian Association of Railway Enginemen, Conductors, Trainmen, Yardmen, Telegraphers and Dispatchers) lost 4 local branches, now having 67, with a membership of 2,905, a gain of 48.

The Canadian Amalgamated Association of Seamen, reported 4 local branches, an increase of 3, but a loss in membership of 400, now having 800.

The Saskatchewan Brotherhood of Steam and Operating Engineers reported 1 local branch in existence at the close of the year, but owing to the membership not being shown the figures for 1933 are repeated.

The Vancouver and District Waterfront Workers' Association reported the same membership as in 1933, namely 900, comprised in 1 local branch.

The number of local branches of Canadian central organizations shown in the accompanying table for the year 1934, was 662, a gain of 14, with a combined membership of 55,486, an increase of 778. In 1933 the increases were 47 branches and 9,069 members.

(a) Includes only the local branch unions under direct charters at the close of 1934. Besides these there were in affiliation the three central Canadian bodies marked () with 79 branches and 3,039 members, and also two provincial federations of labour and 37 trades and labour councils. Per capita tax was also paid during the year by a number of local branches of international unions which had affiliated individually, as well as by sixty international organizations which had affiliated the whole of their Canadian membership, numbering 111,539, comprising 1366 local branches. The whole directly chartered and affiliated paid-up membership of the Congress was reported at 103,424.

(b) Includes only the local unions under direct charters. In addition to these the All-Canadian Congress of Labour had in affiliation the 10 central bodies indicated thus (†), with 300 branches, and a combined membership of 27,574, as well as the One Big Union with 48 branches and 23,865 members (one branch and 285 members being in the United States), and 13 trades and labour councils. The total membership of the All-Canadian Congress of Labour was reported at 55,645.

(c) The Federation of Ontario Fire Fighters also had in affiliation the seven local branches of the International Association of Fire Fighters located respectively at Fort William, Hamilton, London, North Bay, Ottawa, and Toronto (2), making a total of 33 affiliates and a membership of 1,882.

TRADE UNION BRANCHES BY PROVINCES

The appended table shows the number of subordinate branches of the international and Canadian organizations located in the various provinces of the Dominion. The names of the different bodies are arranged, for the purpose of comparison, in the same order as they appear in Table No. 1 and No. 1A.

There were 1,809 branches of international organizations, including those of the two international industrial unions, in existence in the Dominion at the close of 1934, a gain of 2 as compared with the number recorded in 1933. According to numerical standing by provinces the local branches are divided as follows: Ontario, 734, a gain of 13; Quebec, 274, a gain of 1; Alberta, 175, a loss of 3; British Columbia, 175, a loss of 4; Saskatchewan, 137, a loss of 1; Manitoba, 136, a gain of 3; Nova Scotia, 90, a loss of 5; New Brunswick, 84, a loss of 2; Prince Edward Island, 4, no change.

In table No. 2A, giving the standing of the Canadian organizations, the names of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada and the All-Canadian Congress of Labour are included, the figures printed being only for their directly chartered branches, and which are not taken into account elsewhere. The local branches recorded for the Provincial Federation of Ontario Fire Fighters include only those which are chartered direct and which are not connected with any other body. Owing to the fact that the local branches of affiliates of the Workers' Unity League and its directly chartered unions are recorded in Chapter XV, a comparison with the 1933 figures is not possible.

At the close of 1934 the number of branches of Canadian organizations, as shown in this table was 662, divided by provinces as follows:—Ontario, 252; Quebec, 79; British Columbia, 79; Alberta, 77; Saskatchewan, 57, Nova Scotia, 47; Manitoba, 34; New Brunswick, 30; Prince Edward Island, 7.

FEDERATIONS OF TRADE UNIONS

The accompanying table contains the names of every known federation of trade union branches in the Dominion, together with the number of affiliations and combined membership. The figures shown in this table do not in any way affect the number of branches or the total trade union membership in Canada, all of the local branch unions having been included in the statements which appear in the preceding sections.

The Alberta Federation of Labour reported 123 affiliations, a gain of 2, with a combined membership of 7,900, an increase of 764. The New Brunswick Federation of Labour had a loss of 2 affiliates, now having 39, with a combined membership of 2,964, a decrease of 536.

Of the eleven building trades councils reporting membership, that in Montreal stands first with 19 affiliated unions, a gain of 2, with a combined membership of 8,755, a loss of 745. As in the previous year Toronto ranks second having gained 2 affiliates and 1,500 members, the respective figures being 25 and 6,000. Winnipeg council is third with 13 affiliated local unions, an increase of 1, and a gain in membership of 2,000, now having 5,000. In fourth place stands Hamilton council reporting 12 affiliates, a gain of 2, and a membership of 1,100, no change from 1934. Vancouver follows with 17 affiliated local unions, an increase of 3, but a loss in membership of 214, now having 1,000.

In the group of allied printing trades councils, the Toronto Joint Board stands first with 8 affiliates, same as in 1934, with a combined membership of 4,000, an increase of 1,000. Second place is taken by another Toronto council, with the same number of affiliates, namely 8, but a loss in membership of 300, now having 2,700. Montreal council ranks third with no change in affiliates or membership, the respective figures being 7 and 1,300. A second Montreal council comes next in numerical order, having 7 affiliates, a gain of 1, and a membership of 1,059, a loss of 17.

In the Railway Employees' group Division No. 4, which is under charter from the Railway Employees' Department of the A. F. of L., is the most important of the railway federations. It is composed of the internationally organized shop mechanics and car department employees of all Canadian railway lines. Division No. 4 has in affiliation local branch unions of 8 international organizations and several railway system federations, and comprises a total membership of 25,000, a decrease of 9,857 as compared with the number reported in 1933. Of the system federations whose members are in the employ of a single railway company, C.P.R. System Federation No. 125 is the strongest being composed of the shop mechanics in affiliation with 9 international organizations, the total reported membership of No. 125 showed a loss of 560, now having 10,500. Occupying third position is C.N.R. System Federation No. 11, which is subdivided into Atlantic, Central and Western regions, and has the local branch unions of 8 international bodies in affiliation, the combined membership, as reported by the officers of the system federation being 5,684, a decrease of 5,316. Of the local federations the strongest numerically is the Montreal federation, comprising the mechanics in the C.P.R. shops, and having 12 local unions in affiliation, a gain of 2, with a membership of 2,700, a loss of 1,800; next is the federation in Winnipeg with 6 local unions affiliated, a decrease of 1, with 1,243 members, a gain of 531. Third in this class is the Calgary Federation, comprising mechanics employed in the C.P.R. shops, which has 8 unions in affiliation, an increase of 1, with a combined membership of 750, a gain of 300.

The federation of employees of public authorities reporting the largest membership is located at Vancouver, which body has 3 affiliates, a loss of 1, with 1,200 members, a decrease of 400. Edmonton Federation ranks second with 5 affiliated bodies, and 600 members, the same number in each case as in the previous year. Calgary Federation is third with 11 affiliated local unions, no change, and 457 members, a gain of 4.

The Labour Educational Association of Ontario whose name is given in the miscellaneous section, permits representation to those bodies which contribute a prescribed fee, the membership being reported at 3,552, which is less than that reported for 1934 by 592, being comprised in 111 bodies.

Under this heading is recorded the names of 12 federations of National Catholic Unions, the same number as shown for 1933, only one of which failed to report. The strongest of the National Catholic Federations is that for the Building Trades, having 38 affiliated unions, a gain of 12, with a membership of 8,000, a decrease of 2,908. Ranking second is the Montreal Building Trades Council with 12 affiliates and 4,200 members. In third place stands the Boot and Shoe Workers' Federation, having 4,000 members comprised in 4 local branches.

The appended statement shows that there were in Canada at the close of the year 49 federations composed of non-sectarian unions, 1 less than the number recorded in 1933, divided by groups as follows: Provincial federations, 2; building trades councils, 12; printing trades councils, 14; railway employees federations, 16; federations of employees of public authorities, 4; miscellaneous, 1.

The federations of National Catholic Unions are divided by groups as follows: Building, 7; printing, 2; boot and shoe workers, 2; pulp and paper, 1.

The table following gives, for comparative purposes, the affiliates and memberships, as far as reported, of the respective federations for 1933 and 1934:—

DISTRICT COUNCILS

The accompanying table has been prepared with the view to indicating the extent to which branch unions of particular trades federate for conference and co-operation in trade and other matters. Although some of the councils have only a few affiliates, they comprise all the branches and members in their respective jurisdictions.

The Ontario Conference Board of the Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers' International Union had in affiliation the 29 branches of the organization located in the province, one less than the number reported in 1933, with a combined reported membership of 414, a decrease of 2,586.

The Toronto District Managing Committee of the Amalgamated Building Workers of Canada reported 2,000 members, a loss of 500, but failed to show the number of affiliated locals. The Vancouver District Managing Committee of the same organization had 3 affiliates with a combined reported membership of 350, a decrease of 209.

There are one inter-provincial, two provincial and four district councils of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, one less than the number recorded in 1933. The Quebec Provincial Council reported 14 branches of the Brotherhood in the province in affiliation, a loss of 1, with a combined reported membership of 1,800, a gain of 500.

The Ontario Provincial Council claims 37 branches in the province in affiliation, 1 more than in 1933, with a combined membership of 1,284, a loss of 1,181.

The jurisdiction of the three district councils is generally confined to a particular city, but in some instances extends to adjacent localities. The Montreal Council reported the largest following of the district bodies, having 7 affiliates, the same as in 1933, with a membership of 1,112, a decrease of 73. In second place stands the Vancouver council with four affiliates, 1 more than recorded in 1933, with 619 members, a gain of 106.

The Ontario Provincial Council of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers has remained inactive during the past year.

District council No. 5 of the Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers, which comprises the 3 branches of the organization in the City of Montreal, a loss of 2, reported a membership of 275, a decrease of 45. The Ontario Provincial Association of the United Association of Plumbers, Gas and Steam Fitters had 9 affiliates, same as in 1933, with a membership of 1,100, a loss of 100. The Alberta Provincial Conference of the Journeymen Stonecutters' Association had 3 affiliates, same as in 1933 but the membership was not reported.

District Council No. 30 of the Brotherhood of Boilermakers, which has jurisdiction over lodges of the craft whose members are employed on railroads which have their greatest mileage in Canada, had 32 affiliated lodges, no change, and shows a decrease in members of 57, now having 1,680. The District Council of Montreal of the International Association of Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Iron Workers reported 2 affiliates and 78 members, a decrease of 45.

There are one provincial council and three district lodges of the International Association of Machinists in Canada. The provincial body, which has jurisdiction over Ontario failed to report the number of affiliates or membership. Of the district lodges, No. 2, which includes in its membership all local lodges of the association whose members are employed in Canadian railroad shops, reported 60 affiliated lodges, 1 more than in 1933, with a combined membership of 6,100, a gain of 780. The district lodge which stands second as to membership is No. 82 of Montreal, which reported 4 affiliates, the same as in 1933, with 1,600 members, an increase of 264. The Conference Board of Ontario of the International Moulders' Union reported 18 affiliated branches, a loss of 1, with a membership of 450, a decrease of 50.

The Montreal Joint Board of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, reported 6 affiliates, with a combined membership of 4,615. The Toronto Board of this organization reported the same number of affiliates, viz., 7, but shows an increase of 80 in membership, now having 1,800. There are two joint boards of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union. located respectively in Montreal and Toronto, that in the first named city having 4 affiliates, the same as in 1933, with a membership of 1,600, a gain of 600. The Toronto board lost 400 members, now having 1,400, but the number of local unions in affiliation was not reported. The International Fur Workers' Union had one joint board, located in Toronto, with 4 affiliates and 750 members, the same figures as supplied for 1933. The Headgear Workers' Central Bureau of Canada, a delegate body of the United Hatters, Cap and Millinery Workers' International Union, had 2 Canadian branches in affiliation, the same as in 1933, with a combined membership of 510, an increase of 310.

There is one council of the Boot and Shoe Workers' Union, that for the province of Ontario. This body which had been in a dormant condition for some time, has now been revived, and reported 3 local unions in affiliation, with a membership of 450.

In the printing trades group, the Ontario and Quebec Conference of the International Typographical Union, the only delegate body of printers composed entirely of Canadian branches, reported 18 affiliates, no change, and the membership was reported at 2,642, a gain of 592.

There are five district councils of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees, the one with the largest following being that in Winnipeg with 8 affiliated local divisions, same as in 1933, with a membership of 1,150, an increase of 400. Toronto council reported 6 affiliates, the same as in 1933, the membership being given at 1,000, a gain of 50. Halifax council is third with 7 affiliated divisions, no change, and a reported membership of 530, a gain of 88.

The only entirely Canadian district council of the International Longshoremen's Association is that embracing the 5 local branches in Saint John and vicinity, no change, and which failed to report the number of their membership. The largest district council of the longshoremen is that with jurisdiction over the entire North Atlantic coast, including Canadian ports, and numbers among its affiliates local branches in both Canada and the United States; the affiliations reported were 325, with a membership of 40,000. The Pacific Coast District, which includes British Columbia, reported 42 affiliated branches with a membership of 12,000.

District 26 of the United Mine Workers, with jurisdiction over the coal fields of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick, shows 23 affiliates, a decrease of 2, with a membership of 8,133, a gain of 1,133. The report from the provisional officers handling U.M.W. affairs in what is known as District 18 during the suspension of the district union, shows that 17 local unions are identified with the U.M.W. in that territory, the same as in 1933, the combined membership of which was reported at 3,950, no change.

There are two delegate bodies of the Journeymen Barbers' International Union—the Dominion Federation and the Ontario Federation—the first-mentioned has 38 affiliates, a gain of 7, and the Ontario Federation 12 affiliates, a loss of 2. The membership reported by the Dominion body was 700, a loss of 850, while the Ontario Federation reported 800 members, a gain of 100. District No. 11 of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employees, with jurisdiction over the provinces of Quebec and Ontario, reported 24 affiliates, no change, the membership being 1,200, an increase of 400. No. 12, with jurisdiction over the provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, reported a membership of 10, but failed to state the number of affiliates.

Of the two delegate bodies made up of affiliates of the International Association of Fire Fighters, that operating in the province of British Columbia had 5 affiliations, a gain of 1, and 470 members, no change, while that for Alberta-Saskatchewan had 5 affiliates, the same as in the previous year, with 272 members, a loss of 328.

The Ontario Executive Board of the International Union of Operating Engineers, which reported 16 affiliates, failed to show the number of members. There are two district councils of the International Brotherhood of Firemen and Oilers, both formed in 1930; No. 7 had 15 affiliates, a loss of 1, and 648 members, a decrease of 79, while No. 6 had 13 members but the number of unions in affiliation was not given.

There are 46 district councils in this group, 3 less than recorded in 1933, divided by trades as follows: Carpenters, 7; clothing workers, including ladies' garment workers, cap makers, and fur workers, 6; railway employees, 5; machinists, 4; longshoremen, 3; mine workers, barbers, fire fighters, firemen and oilers, and theatrical stage employees, 2 each; bricklayers, electricians, painters, printers, plumbers, stone cutters, boilermakers, bridge and structural iron workers, moulders, boot and shoe workers, and operating engineers, 1 each.

The table following gives, for comparative purposes, the affiliates and membership of the respective councils for both 1933 and 1934.

TRADES AND LABOUR COUNCILS

In a preceding chapter of this report the composition and functions of trades and labour councils have been discussed. The object in presenting this statement is to indicate the extent to which these bodies represent organized workers in the localities where they have been established. The jurisdiction of trades and labour councils, in the main, is confined to a particular city or town but in some instances it covers a number of adjacent localities. Thirteen of the councils are operating under charters from the All-Canadian Congress of Labour, and are designated by the word "national" and the affix "A.C.C.L." Two councils are chartered by the One Big Union, and are indicated by the letters "O.B.U.", while six are identified with the National Catholic Unions. The remaining 37 councils are made up of delegates from local branches of international organizations and such Canadian bodies as are in harmony with the international trade union movement, and are operating under charters derived from the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada. Seventeen of the latter councils are also chartered by the American Federation of Labor, a proceeding to which the Canadian body does not object. The number of unions given for each locality include the branches of all classes of organizations named in the report.

There are two trades and labour councils in the Province of Nova Scotia, both being located in Halifax, one of which represents the international trade union movement, being chartered by the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, and had in affiliation 17 local unions out of 37 in the district, representing a membership of 2,650; the other council is under charter from the All-Canadian Congress, and had 9 of the unions in affiliation, with a membership of 615.

Of the three councils in New Brunswick, two in Moncton and one in Saint John, the one representing the international labour movement in the first-named city is the most representative, having 9 of the 26 local unions in the locality as affiliates, with a membership of 2,100; the Saint John council of the same class being second with 21 affiliates out of 40 unions in the city, but the membership was not reported. The council of the All-Canadian Congress in Moncton had 5 affiliates with 445 members.

The Montreal council of the Trades and Labour Congress ranks first in the province of Quebec, having 89 of the 196 unions in the city in affiliation, with a membership of 45,250. The council operating under the auspices of the All-Canadian Congress had 18 affiliates, with a membership of 4,750. The Quebec and Levis council of the international movement had in affiliation 24 of the 75 local unions in the locality with a membership of 3,850. The national council reports 12 affiliates, and a membership of 600.

Of the 25 councils in Ontario, that in Toronto representing the international organizations stands first, having 72 of the 184 unions in affiliation with a membership of 25,000; the national council of the All-Canadian Congress in the same city had 15 affiliates with 3,500 members. Hamilton council representing the international trade unions is second with 45 of the 61 eligible unions but the membership was not reported. The national council in Hamilton has passed out of existence. Ottawa council ranks third with 32 of the 70 local unions in the district in affiliation with a membership of 3,500. London Trades and Labour Council stands fourth with 27 unions affiliated out of 59, with a membership of 3,000. St. Thomas Council follows with 12 affiliated unions out of 26 in the city, and represents 1,800 organized workers. Fort Frances Trades and Labour Council was organized during 1934, and reported 10 affiliates with a combined membership of 611.

There are 3 trades councils in Manitoba, the Winnipeg council representing the international labour movement having 29 of the 116 unions in the locality in affiliation, but the membership was not reported. The council operating under the auspices of the All-Canadian Congress reported 4 affiliates with 3,500 members. The O.B.U. has a council at Winnipeg, but it failed to make any return.

Of the five councils in Saskatchewan, three represent the internationally organized workers, the one with the largest following being the Saskatoon council, which had 14 affiliated unions out of 40 in the locality, with a membership of 1,965. Moose Jaw council representing the internationals is second with 21 affiliates out of 30 in the city and represents 770 members, while Regina council of the same class reported 17 affiliates out of 42 unions in the locality, with a membership of 800. Of the two national councils of the All-Canadian Congress, Saskatoon stands first with 9 affiliates and 450 members, while Regina council had 3 affiliates with 140 members.

There are five councils in Alberta, three of which represent the international trade union movement, the most representative being that in Edmonton, which reported 46 unions in affiliation out of 81 in the locality, with 3,500 members. Calgary council representing the international movement had 1,412 members in 23 affiliated unions out of 66 in the locality. The larger of the two national councils of the All-Canadian Congress is in Edmonton, which had 19 affiliates, with 1,500 members.

There are also five councils in British Columbia, the largest of which is the Vancouver-New Westminster and District body, which represents the international movement, and had in affiliation 64 out of the 126 unions in the locality, with a membership of 9,800, the national council for the same district being second with 18 affiliates, with a reported membership of 5,000. Victoria council representing the international unions is third with 16 affiliated unions out of 38 in the locality, with a membership of 668.

Of the six central councils of the national Catholic unions, that in Montreal reporting 38 affiliated local branches out of 196 in the locality, with a membership of 11,000, is the largest. The second reporting council is that in Quebec, which had 35 unions reported in affiliation, with a membership of 10,500.

The names of the councils operating under dual charters are preceded by an asterisk, the reports published being for both 1933 and 1934, and show (1) the number of branch unions in affiliation, (2) members represented, and (3) total branch unions operating in the locality.

TRADE UNION MEMBERSHIP BY LOCALITIES

In this section is given the name of every locality in the Dominion in which exist one or more branches of the various classes of trade unions operating in Canada. Three tables are presented herewith, showing (1) the localities which have local branches of international (including the One Big Union and the Industrial Workers' of the World), Canadian and independent units; (2) the localities which have National Catholic unions; (3) the localities which have local branches of the Workers' Unity League of Canada and its affiliated organizations. The names of the cities, towns, etc., are arranged alphabetically, and in order of provinces, proceeding from east to west. The number of branches reporting membership and the membership reported are also shown in this statement.

There were 2,740 trade union branches of all classes in Canada, 1,750 of which are affiliates of international craft organizations, 48 are units of the One Big Union, 11 are identified with the Industrial Workers of the World, 662 are branches of Canadian bodies, 42 are independent units, 122 are National Catholic unions and 105 are affiliated or directly chartered locals of the Workers' Unity League. Information as to membership was received from 2,164 unions, which was 84 more than reported in 1933.

The membership reported from the head offices of all organizations with branches or members in Canada, or which has been secured from other reliable sources, totals 281,774, comprised, as stated above, in 2,740 branches. The membership reported by the 2,164 local branches is 195,149, or an average of approximately 90 for each reporting branch. The remaining membership of 86,625 divided among the 576 non-reporting branches gives an approximate average of 150 members. The membership of the system divisions of telegraphers cannot be recorded in any particular locality, and is therefore included under localities not specified. The 2,070 reporting branches of those classed as international, Canadian and independent units, show a membership of 176,773, an average of 85; the total membership of 444 non-reporting branches is 50,569, an average of approximately 114. The 67 reporting National Catholic unions, out of a total of 122, give a membership of 12,591, an average of close to 188; the remaining membership of 17,755 divided among the 54 non-reporting unions indicates the high average of 328. The membership of the 27 reporting unions connected with the Workers' Unity League out of a total of 105, was 5,785, an average of approximately 214; the remaining reported membership of 18,301 comprised in 78 non-reporting branches shows an average of 234.

Where a local union has a large membership, or where a skilled craft is highly organized reports of numerical strength are invariable supplied. There are instances, however, where officers are not permitted to supply any information concerning the organization without first obtaining the sanction of the members, and this permission, it is known, has at times been refused, it being considered that the publication of such information might be injurious to their interests. The apathy of the local officers is very often responsible for the failure to furnish particulars, but for the present report the response to requests for membership was fairly generous, the reporting unions representing about 79 per cent of the total.

There were 10 branch unions in the Dominion which reported a membership of 1,000 or over, 4 less than the number recorded in 1933, seven of which are connected with international craft organizations, one is a National Catholic union, one a branch of the Mine Workers' Union of Canada, and one is an independent unit.

The Syndicated Longshoremen of Montreal, an independent unit, reported the largest membership, 2,604.

Of the other local branch unions whose jurisdiction is confined to a particular city, the Montreal division No. 790 of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway, Bus and Coach Employees of America had the largest following with 1,629 members; next comes the Timmins local of the Mine Workers Union of Canada which reported 1,500 members; Toronto Musicians local No. 149 is third with 1,448 members; Local No. 49 of the Hat, Cap and Millinery Workers, Montreal, ranks fourth with 1,400 members; Vancouver division No. 101 of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway, Bus and Coach Employees being next with 1,175 members; Thetford Mines Social Study Circle of the National Catholic Unions is sixth with 1,087 members, and Toronto Typographical Union, No. 91, follows with 1,065 members.

Two of the system divisions of the Order of Railroad Telegraphers, whose members are stationed over a wide territory, reported large memberships, the strongest being System Division No. 1, covering the Canadian National Railways (former G. T. R. system), with 2,265 members; System Division No. 43 with jurisdiction over the Canadian National Railways, Western Lines, had 1,310 members.

TRADE UNION MEMBERSHIP IN CANADIAN CITIES

The appended table shows the names of 28 cities having not less than 20 trade union branches of all classes, and gives (1) number in each locality, (2) number of unions reporting membership, and (3) number of members reported.

| Localities | Number of Unions in locality | Number of Unions reporting membership | Number of Members reported | Localities | Number of Unions in locality | Number of Unions reporting membership | Number of Members reported |

The 28 cities enumerated in the above table with 1,548 branches represent 56 per cent of the local branches of all classes operating in Canada. Their 1,213 reporting branches represent 56 per cent of all reporting branches, and they also contain 47 per cent of the entire trade union membership in the Dominion. In 1933 there were the same number of cities with not less than 20 branches each and between them they represented approximately 55 per cent of the branches of all classes, and contained about 42 per cent of all union members in Canada.

TRADE UNION BRANCHES BY PROVINCES

The following table shows the number of local branches of international and Canadian organizations, independent units and National Catholic unions in each province, together with the number that reported their membership and the number of members reported:—

XIX. TRADE UNION BENEFITS

Eleven Canadian Central Organizations Pay Benefits—Fifty-six International Bodies Report Disbursements of Benefits to Members—Largest Expenditures Are for Death Benefits—Outlay by Three Railroad Brotherhoods Very Heavy—Benefits Paid by International Organizations in Detail—Amount Disbursed by Canadian Local Branch Unions to Their Own Members.

In addition to the trade protection which labour organizations endeavour to give to their members, the majority of the trade unions have established beneficiary features, under the provision of which large sums are disbursed annually. Of the 24 Canadian central organizations, 11 reported expenditures for benefits, 8 paid death benefits, some of which is paid by insurance companies with which the organizations have group insurance policies; strike benefits were paid by 1, other benefits by 5. The total amount expended was reported at $84,094, an increase of $9,060 as compared with the figures furnished by 8 organizations in 1933. The table following gives the names of the central bodies reporting payments for benefits, together with the amounts disbursed for the classes of benefits mentioned.

Of the 79 international craft and two industrial organizations operating in Canada, 56 of the first named reported from headquarters as to disbursements for benefits to members, but no statement as to benefits were furnished by the industrial unions. These expenditures are for a one-year period, and while in some instances are for the fiscal year of the respective organizations, are in the main for the calendar year 1934. Of the 56 organizations whose names appear in the accompanying table, death benefits were paid by 54; unemployed and travelling by 6; strike by 25; sick and accident by 15, and old age pensions by 6. The organizations reporting old age pension benefits were: International Association of Bridge, Structural and Ornamental Iron Workers; United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners; International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers; Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen; Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway, Bus and Coach Employees of America, and the International Typographical Union. The remaining amounts in this column were for various other purposes. Some of the remaining 23 organizations having Canadian affiliations have benefit features, the administration of which in some instances is under the control of the local branches. This is mainly accounted for by the fact that many local unions existed independently prior to their affiliation with the international "central," and some of these "locals" provided for death, sick and other benefits, for which a fund had been created. In this manner the benefit features have often become identified with the local branches, and their jurisdiction has been recognized. In other instances there has been a division of control, sick benefits being administered by local branches, while death, strike and pension funds are governed by the international body. It is in rare cases that separate reports are received as to disbursements made by international organizations to their Canadian members, the general office stating that to prepare such a statement would entail considerable work, a task which they do not appear to be willing to undertake.

As in previous reports, the department has endeavoured to ascertain what benefits in addition to those disbursed by the central organizations were paid during 1934 to their own members from the funds under the immediate control of the various Canadian branches of international bodies. Application for this information was forwarded to every known local union, and of these 590 reported having made payments on account of benefits, the aggregate of such disbursements being given in a separate table. Ninety-four local branches of Canadian organizations, 15 independent and 45 National Catholic unions reported disbursements for benefits to their own members.

The following statement shows the total reported expenditures made in Canada and the United States on account of benefits by the various international organizations as printed in a subsequent table:—

|---|---|
| Death benefits | $ 9,239,498 |
| Unemployed and travelling benefits | 538,752 |
| Strike benefits | 421,392 |
| Sick and accident benefits | 4,426,208 |
| Old age pensions and other benefits | 3,283,835 |

These figures show that for 1934 the reported disbursements for benefits by international organizations were $5,966,459 less than the amount expended for the same class of benefits in 1933. Over $3,500,000 of this difference is accounted for by the fact that no return as to benefits was received from the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. The expenditure for death benefits, as in previous years, accounts for more than one-half of the total disbursements but indicates a loss of $2,829,591. For unemployed and travelling benefits there was a decrease of $256,601, the sum disbursed being $538,752. The benefits paid to those on strike amounted to $421,392, a loss of $621,752. The disbursements for sick and accident benefits which were $4,426,208, were $1,680,603 less than paid out in 1933. The payments made on account of old age pensions totalled $2,398,675, a decrease of $129,806, the remaining sum of $885,160 recorded in the column with old age pensions being spent for other benefits and donations to other organizations.

The largest expenditure for death benefits alone was made by the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, which organization reported disbursements of $1,850,266; the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen spent $1,113,192, and the Order of Railway Conductors disbursed the sum of $968,327 for death benefits. Only six organizations reported payments on account of unemployed and travelling benefits, the largest being by the Upholsterers, Carpet and Linoleum Mechanics' International Union, which body spent $240,000 for unemployed benefits alone, the Amalgamated Lithographers of America being second with an expenditure of $190,000. For strike benefits the International Typographical Union reported the heaviest expenditure, having spent $178,840; the American Flint Glass Workers' Union was second with an outlay of $39,323, and the International Photo Engravers' Union of North America third with payments totalling $38,448, closely followed by the International Moulders' Union of North America with an expenditure of $34,393 in strike benefits. The heaviest outlay for sick and accident benefits was by the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, which organization disbursed $2,592,892. Included in this amount were payments for disability, tuberculosis and funerals; the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen was second with payments amounting to $1,155,881, which sum included disability and benevolent benefits; next came the Order of Railway Conductors which reported payments amounting to $197,989 for sick and accident benefits. The International Typographical Union stands first in expenditures for old age pensions with payments aggregating $1,872,632, the next largest was by the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers with disbursements of $175,337, and the third largest expenditure for old age pensions was by the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway, Bus and Coach Employees of America with an outlay of $162,000.

The Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen again reported the largest aggregate expenditure for benefits, having disbursed the sum of $4,487,728; the International Typographical Union comes second with an outlay of $2,591,732; the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen being third with payments of $2,568,298, and the Order of Railway Conductors fourth with disbursements of $1,277,133. The combined expenditures for benefits by the three brotherhoods whose members are engaged in engine and train service are responsible for $8,333,159 of the total of $17,909,685 expended as benefits to members in both Canada and the United States by international bodies operating in the Dominion.

BENEFITS PAID BY LOCAL BRANCHES

Reports furnished by 744 local branches in Canada show that these bodies expended a total of $481,075 to their own members on account of the various benefits provided by their respective laws. This sum was $30,389 larger than that reported in 1933 by 736 local branches. As reported in the previous year the highest expenditure was for unemployed benefits, $189,643 being distributed, a decrease of $8,847 as compared with 1933; the next largest expenditure was for strike benefits, $114,526 being disbursed, an increase of $84,272. For sick and accident benefits $102,122 was paid out, a decrease of $30,155. Death benefits amounted to $34,241, a smaller amount by $19,471 than expended in 1933. The expenditure for "other benefits," which represents disbursements for various purposes, including donations to other organizations, amounted to $40,543, an increase of $4,590. Of the total outlay for benefits by Canadian branch unions to their own members the 590 having international affiliations disbursed $418,329, an increase of $34,347, the expenditures for each class of benefits being: Death, $17,003; unemployed, $187,226; strike, $99,240; sick, $79,129; other benefits, $35,731. The 139 branches of Canadian organizations, including 45 National Catholic unions, distributed $39,436, an increase over 1933 of $10,548, divided as follows: Death, $8,948; unemployed, $2,367; strike, $15,286; sick, $9,388; other benefits, $3,447.

Fifteen independent units reported expenditures for benefits of $23,310, a decrease of $14,506, apportioned as follows: Death, $8,290; unemployed, $50; strike, nil; sick and accident, $13,605; other benefits, $1,365.

|---|---|
| Death benefits | $ 34 241 |
| Unemployed benefits | 189,643 |
| Strike benefits | 114,526 |
| Sick and accident benefits | 102,122 |
| Other benefits | 40,543 |

The expenditure of above amounts by the local branch unions among their own members, as previously explained, is in addition to the disbursements made for benefits by the central organizations.

The arrangement of the accompanying table is similar to the preceding one giving the disbursements by central international organizations, with the exception that the "other benefits" column does not include old age pension payments, but does embrace all gratuities, which are not classed in other columns.

XX. NEW AND DISSOLVED LABOUR BODIES

New Unions Number 223, Dissolved 190, Leaving an Increase of 33 Local Branches During 1934—New and Dissolved Unions by Trade Groups—Names and Locations of Labour Bodies Formed—Labour Bodies Dissolved.

In this chapter is recorded the number of labour bodies formed as well as those that have been dissolved during the year 1934. There were 223 local unions formed which is 83 more than those established during the previous year. The dissolved local branches numbered 190. These figures indicate that there was an increase in local branch unions of 33 for the year. By trade groups the new and dissolved unions are as follows:—

|---|---|---|
| Mining and Quarrying | 5 | 18 |
| Lumbering | 7 | 21 |
| Building | 20 | 25 |
| Metal | 15 | 12 |
| Printing | 6 | 9 |
| Clothing | 22 | 10 |
| Steam Engineers and Firemen | 16 | 7 |
| Food and Tobacco | 22 | 5 |
| Railway Service | 12 | 36 |
| Navigation and General Transport | 15 | 7 |
| Communication | | 1 |
| Personal Service | 14 | 8 |
| Employees of Public Authorities | 24 | 18 |
| Miscellaneous | 45 | 13 |
| | 223 | 190 |

There was organized during 1934 one trades and labour council. For the same period five delegate bodies passed out of existence—1 federation, 3 district councils and one trades and labour council. As explained in an earlier chapter, the formation or dissolution of these delegate bodies does not affect the trade union membership of the Dominion, their establishment being made possible only by the existence of local branch unions, which are the foundation of the whole plan of labour organization.

LIST OF LABOUR BODIES FORMED IN 1934

The following statement contains the name of every federation, district council, trades and labour council and local branch union known to have been formed in Canada during the year 1933, as well as the names of branches whose names have been re-inserted. Where the locality is given for bodies covering a wide territory it designates the address of the secretary. This list of local branches is arranged in trade groups, the name of the organization from which charter was secured, the location of the branch and the total charters issued by the respective organizations being given.

XXI. THE LABOUR PRESS

All of the More Important Labour Organizations Have Official Journals—Method of Circulating—Names of Canadian Labour Publications—List of International Trade Union Journals—National Catholic Union Journals—Communist Publications and Other Official Organs Holding Somewhat Similar Views.

The growth in organization and the consequent demand for a medium through which trade matters and official business might be communicated to trade union members has led to the development of a labour press of considerable importance, all of the more important labour organizations having official publications. Besides imparting information in regard to the work of the union, the various journals deal with the activities of the organized labour movement generally, and in some instances publish sections devoted to craft problems. The editorship of these publications, which are usually issued monthly, but sometimes semi-monthly or quarterly, is in some cases an elective position, but generally the secretary has charge of the editing and management. The head offices of the international unions having official journals being located in the United States, it is only natural that the publication office should be similarly located. All official journals have a regular subscription rate, but most of the labour bodies arrange to include the fee in the per capita tax so as to ensure the publication reaching each member, whether resident in Canada, the United States or elsewhere.

There are eleven labour periodicals published in Canada, eight of which are official journals of central organizing bodies (two are issued by one organization) and three are published by groups of branch organizations identified with international unions. In the list following are also included four journals of civil service employees organizations which are, or which claim to be, identical with trade unions. Appearing for the first time in this list is the Building Worker, official organ of the Amalgamated Building Workers of Canada. This is a monthly journal published at Toronto. Three journals of Canadian organizations have ceased publication, viz., The Communication Worker, official organ of the Electrical Communication Workers of Canada; One Big Union Bulletin, official organ of the One Big Union; Canadian Association Review, Running Trades Journal, official organ of the Canadian Association of Railwaymen.

The names of Canadian publications which are issued as labour papers under the auspices of some labour organization, as well as those which claim to be published in the interest of the trade union movement, are also given a place in this chapter. The British Columbia Labour Truth and the L'Idee Ouvriere appear for the first time. The name of the Weekly News has been changed to that of the Manitoba Commonwealth.

The following five Canadian labour publications devote some of their space to matter printed in the French language: Canadian Congress Journal; Canadian Unionist; Canadian Railway Employees' Monthly; The Federated Railwayman, and the Labour World. The official journal of the United Mine Workers contains sections published in several different languages.

There are upwards of 150 weekly papers published in the United States under the auspices or in the interests of the organized workers, and recognized as part of the labour press by the trade union movement.

With the object of stimulating the labour press of the continent, the International Labour Press was established some years ago, through the agency of which the editors of the various recognized labour publications are brought into conference annually at the same time and place that the American Federation of Labor is holding its convention, when matters relating to their work may be discussed and suggestions invited as to how the labour news service of North America may be improved. The president of the International Press is Matthew Woll, 105 A. F. of L. Bldg., Washington, D.C., and the secretary, R. E. Woodmansee, Box 15, Springfield, Ill.

La Vie Syndicale.—Published by the Secretariat of National Catholic Unions.
Le Tramway.—Published by the Street Railway Employees' Union of Montreal.
The Messenger.—Published by the Catholic Syndicates of Sherbrooke.

COMMUNIST PUBLICATIONS

In addition to the recognized trade union periodicals the Communist Party published The Worker as its official organ until the party was declared illegal in December, 1931, following which the paper appeared under the auspices of the Worker Publishing Association. The Young Communist League publishes The Young Worker as its official monthly journal and the official paper of the Workers' Unity League is Workers' Unity, both of which are printed in Toronto. The Canadian Labour Defence League, which is known as a Communist organization, issues the Labour Defender.

The Workers' Party of America publishes in New York, N.Y., an official paper under the title of the Daily Worker, which is understood to be one of the two dailies published in the English language in the interests of communism; the other daily is published in London, England, under a similar name. The Labour Herald, which was the official journal of the Trade Union Educational League, was in 1924 consolidated with the Liberator and Soviet Russia Pictorial under the name of the Workers' Monthly, the name of which in 1927 was changed to The Communist, being published monthly by the Workers' (Communist) Party of America as a theoretical magazine for the discussion of revolutionary problems.

The Communist League of America, the opposition group to the workers (Communist) Party of America, publishes a weekly organ in New York under the title of The New Militant, and the National Youth Committee of the same group, in December, 1931, commenced the publication of a monthly paper under the name of the Young Spartican.

OTHER PUBLICATIONS

The following publications, all issued in Vancouver, advocate similar action for the workers as do the communist publications listed above:—

The B.C. Workers' News.

XXIII. NON-TRADE UNION ASSOCIATIONS

Group of Important Organizations of Wage-Earners in the Dominion Not Connected With Organized Labour—Chief Organizations of School Teachers—Associations of Government Employees and Commercial Travellers—Objects of Organizations in This Group —Chief Officers—Affiliations and Membership.

Apart from the trade unions operating in the Dominion, there are a number of associations of wage-earners, information concerning which is frequently sought, and which, though not identified with organized labour, are deemed to be of sufficient importance to warrant their inclusion in the present report. Among these non-trade union bodies are the associations of school teachers, which comprise a strong group, embracing a Dominion-wide organization known as the Canadian Teachers' Federation and a number of provincial bodies. In addition to these main associations, the teachers are organized locally, each county or riding having its own association, but only the more important organizations are given a place in this report.

Among the aims of the teachers' organizations is the securing of adequate salaries by the adherence to salary schedules as set by their respective associations, below which their members are not supposed to offer their services. This principle is so far maintained that in some instances members are not permitted to seek a position rendered vacant by reason of the school board's refusal to pay the scheduled salary.

Organized Government employees also form a large percentage of wage earners classified among those belonging to non-trade union organizations. In a previous chapter were recorded the associations of Government employees which are more or less directly identified with the trade union movement. The associations discussed herein, embracing both Federal and provincial civil servants, are operating independently of organized labour, the object of all of which is mainly to speak collectively for their respective memberships on matters which they desire to bring to the attention of the proper authorities. There is also an association for war veterans employed in the Government service, the activities of which are chiefly confined to Montreal, where it was established in 1922.

Associations of commercial travellers constitute another important group not identified with organized labour. Some of these associations have been in existence for a great many years, the oldest being the Commercial Travellers' Association of Canada, which is now well past its sixty-third year. All of the associations, which have secured many privileges for their members, provide for the payment of certain benefits through which large sums have been disbursed. Included in this group is an alliance of French-Canadian Roman Catholic societies of commercial travellers operating under the name of the Catholic Commercial Travellers' Association of Canada, which body accepts as its principle "submission to the authority of the Church and adherence to directions from the 'Holy See' and is designed to direct its members towards the religious and social apostolate."

Though there are in the Dominion a number of ex-soldier associations, besides the one referred to under government employees, formed with a view of fostering the comradeship of the trenches, the only other veterans' associations which it is considered fitting to include in this report are (1) Canadian Railways Veterans' Guild, organized in 1925, composed of men who are employed in the Departments of the Canadian National Railways, (2) Canadian Workers' Federation of Returned Soldiers and Sailors, which was formed in Montreal in 1919 to protect their members against alleged discrimination by labour unions.

There are also a number of miscellaneous organizations given a place in this chapter.

ASSOCIATIONS OF SCHOOL TEACHERS

In each of the provinces of the Dominion there are associations of school teachers, the local bodies in most cases being connected with their provincial organizations, eleven of which, including the associations of the four western provinces, three Ontario bodies, one Quebec body and one each from the three maritime provinces, being identified with a Dominion wide association known as the Canadian Teachers' Federation. The objects of this body, which was organized at Calgary in July, 1920, are as follows:—

(a) To obtain co-operation and co-ordination of all provincial teachers' organizations upon policies and activities of common interest.

(b) To provide machinery by which the various provincial organizations could be kept in touch with one another and through which mutual assistance could be quickly and readily given.
(c) The Dominion organization shall in no way interfere with the full liberties of the provincial organizations in dealing with matters concerning their own provinces.

The chief officers of the Canadian Teachers' Federation are: Pres., J. R. MacKay, 404 Canada Bldg., Saskatoon, Sask. Sec., C. N. Crutchfield, B.A., Shawinigan Falls, Que.

ASSOCIATIONS OF GOVERNMENT EMPLOYEES

In a previous chapter, reference has been made to those organizations of Government employees which are identified with the labour movement through their affiliation with the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada. These include the Federated Association of Letter Carriers and the Civil Service Association of Alberta. The remaining Government employees' association are not connected with organized labour, but function as separate central organizations and as such are recorded in this group. The associations of Dominion Government employees in some instances cover definite branches of the civil service, while it is understood the provincial bodies embrace all classes in one general organization. The objects of the civil service associations are in the main to speak collectively for their respective members on matters affecting conditions of employment. For the employees of the Dominion Government there is a Civil Service Federation, with which several group associations are affiliated, and which is designed to represent all branches of the service, and although itself not connected with organized labour, does not exclude membership to those bodies which are so affiliated. Among the names of associations of Dominion Government employees is included that of the Halcyon Club. This was originally intended as a social organization, but since the passing out of existence of the Women's Branch of the Civil Service Association of Ottawa, the Halcyon Club has also become the medium of expression of the women in the Government service at Ottawa in regard to conditions of employment or other matters. The list of associations of Government employees, together with the names and addresses of the chief officers, so far as furnished, are as follows:—

Pres., W. J. Campbell, 2640 Angus Blvd., Regina, Sask. Sec., J. T. Berrington, 317 P. Burns Bldg., Calgary, Alta.

CATHOLIC COMMERCIAL TRAVELLERS' ASSOCIATION OF CANADA

Besides the above organizations of commercial travellers, there is the Catholic Commercial Travellers' Association of Canada, which was formed in Montreal in 1917 as a result of the amalgamation of the Montreal Catholic Commercial Travellers' Club (organized September 20, 1914) with several clubs of a similar nature in the province of Quebec. The association membership in which is limited to Roman Catholics who speak the French language, has as its principle "submission to the authority of the church and adherence to directions from the Holy See." Its aim is to organize the scattered forces of the commercial travellers and to direct them towards the religious and social apostolate. Pres., N. R. Beaudet, 4006 Marlowe Ave., Montreal, Que. Sec., Elie Ducharme, 2982 Maplewood Ave., Outremont, Montreal, Que.

CANADIAN RAILWAYS VETERANS' GUILD

The Canadian Railways Veterans' Guild was originally organized during 1925, under the name of the Canadian National Veterans' Guild, membership being open to men who served in the late war and who are employed in any of the branches or departments of the Canadian Railways. Members are required to pay an entrance fee of two dollars, and a monthly contribution of not less than fifty cents, provision being also made for the levying of special assessments when such is necessary. Among the objects of the guild (the headquarters of which are in Montreal) are: (1) Securing recognition of the just claims of veterans; (2) establishing harmonious relations between the Railways and their employees by negotiation in the matter of wage schedules and working conditions; (3) furnishing to members such pecuniary or other aid as the circumstances require. Pres., F. H. Morgan, M.C., 472 Third Ave., Verdun, Que. Sec., P. J. Derrig, 4205 Messier St., Montreal, Que.

MARINE CHECKERS AND WEIGHERS' ASSOCIATION

Sec., Warren Buskard, House of Commons, Ottawa, Ont.

ONTARIO CHAUFFEURS' ASSOCIATION

The Ontario Chauffeurs' Association was organized in 1910 as the Toronto Chauffeurs' Protective Association, securing a provincial charter in 1913, and operating until the outbreak of the Great War in 1914, when owing to so many of its members enlisting, the association was compelled to cease operations. With the close of the war the organization was revived. The association, in addition to affording mutual protection to its members, seeks to eliminate the danger of injuries from motor vehicles by developing as far as possible a higher standard of efficiency of licensed drivers and to co-operate with those in authority in the suppression of reckless driving of automobiles by owners and careless and inexperienced chauffeurs. The benefits to members include the maintenance of an employment bureau and free medical service. Pres., Geo. Bolton, 100 Devonshire Place, Toronto, Ont. Sec., H. E. D. Mitchell, 72 Dewhurst Blvd., Toronto, Ont.

CANADIAN ASSOCIATION OF POWER ENGINEERS

The Canadian Association of Power Engineers was originally formed in June, 1927, as the Canadian Brotherhood of Stationary Engineers, and as such its name appeared in the list of Canadian central labour bodies as published in previous issues of this report. On August 25, 1927, the organization was registered under the provision of the Trade Unions Act. Certain changes were made in the constitution in 1929 and the name altered to the first mentioned. It is, however, considered appropriate to include the name of the association in this chapter. The objects set forth (1) It is the purpose of this association to promote engineering knowledge and improve the status of the power engineer in the Dominion of Canada; to secure for its members the latest developments and their application in the field of power engineering, and so enable the indivdual engineer to increase the efficiency of the power plant in which he may be employed; also, to foster a spirit of co-operation between employer and employee to the mutual benefit of all concerned; (2) To give its support to any beneficial legislative measure relating to safety in the installation and operation of power plants in the Dominion of Canada; (3) To investigate any grievance that may arise, whether of our members or their employers, and advise them of the best policy to be adopted in settlement of same, having in mind at all times the welfare of the association at large, so that it will in no way jeopardize the integrity and standing of the association in the business world of Canada; and (4) To adopt a policy in view of the fact, that, whereas the welfare and health of the public at large is dependent on the continuous and safe operation of the power plants entrusted to the care of its membership; therefore, this association will in no way consider affiliation with any labour organization, or take part in any labour disputes or strikes, which may in any way endanger or interfere with the public service rendered by its membership. Pres., M. W. Johnson, 93 Newton Ave., Winnipeg, Man. Sec., A. E. Wilson, 624 St. Mary's Rd., St. Vital, Winnipeg, Man.

CANADIAN WORKERS' FEDERATION OF RETURNED SOLDIERS AND SAILORS

The Canadian Workers' Federation of Returned Soldiers and Sailors was formed in Montreal in 1919, during a strike in a local shipyard. The returned men, believing they were being discriminated against by the labour unions, organized the federation to protect their interests. The objects of the federation are as follows:—

(a) To assist all who are members to obtain employment.

(b) To obtain for those who are members such wages and working conditions as are essential to human well-being in accordance with present day standards.

(c) To secure promotion and advancement for members, who, by their ability, diligence and strict attention to duty, are entitled to favourable consideration.

(d) To aid members who are returned soldiers or sailors to acquire a knowledge of trades and occupations for which members and returned soldiers are adapted, and provide and create opportunities for members who engage in industry.

(e) To prevent and repudiate any discrimination open or covert against members of the Federation or any returned soldiers or sailors who may apply for a position as an apprentice, helper or assistant in any trade, occupation or calling.

(f) To suggest, recommend, promote and demand, such legislation as is likely to be an advantage to members of the Federation and returned soldiers or sailors, in so far as it may tend to promote the welfare of members and returned soldiers and sailors generally.

(g) To give members any pecuniary assistance as the circumstances of the member in person requiring same may demand.

(h) To do any and all things that will in any way contribute to the betterment and improvement of the social and economic position of the members and of persons and institutions that are deserving of such aid and support as the Federation can give.

Proviso. Each and every one of the hereinbefore mentioned objects shall be broadly interpreted.

The Canadian Workers' Federation of Returned Soldiers and Sailors may affiliate with any organization having similar or kindred objects, but only in so far as such affiliation will better permit the Federation to carry out its objects. ### CHINESE NATIONALIST LEAGUE

An organization composed of Chinese, which has its headquarters in Vancouver, is known as the Chinese Nationalist League. The league, which has been in existence for some years, has the following aims and objects:—

(a) To provide means for and assist in benevolent and charitable objects for education and social reform, and to develop, secure, maintain, encourage and extend a central control and organization to assist, utilize and co-ordinate the various public or private agencies, institutions and associations now carrying on similar work or operations, or which may hereafter be established, which shall be deemed advantageous in carrying on operations throughout Canada for the welfare of the society;

(b) To promote the higher education, profitable employment and social well-being of the Chinese resident in Canada, and other races, in every possible way;

(c) To purchase, take, have, hold, possess, retain and enjoy any property, real or personal, corporeal or incorporeal whatsoever, and for any or every estate or interest therein whatsoever, given, granted, devised or bequeathed to it or appropriated, purchased or acquired by it in any manner or way whatsoever to, for or in favour of the uses and purposes of this corporation;

(d) From time to time acquire, accept and receive by purchase, lease, contract, donation, legacy, transfer in trust or otherwise, any kind of real or personal property, and to use, apply and devote in whole or part the same or the income thereof for such public or private, religious, charitable, educational, patriotic or other objects as may be deemed best, or as may be required by the terms, conditions, trusts and objects of any such purchase, lease, contract, donation, legacy, transfer or otherwise, and to carry out, perform and comply with such terms, conditions, trusts and objects;

(e) To take or otherwise acquire and hold membership in any association or company having objects altogether or in part similar to those of this corporation or carrying on any business which may seem capable of being conducted so as directly or indirectly to benefit this corporation;

(f) To draw, make, accept, indorse, execute and issue promissory notes, bills of exchange, bills of lading, warrants and other negotiable or transferable instruments;

(g) To sell, exchange, lease, dispose of, turn to account or otherwise deal with or contract with reference to all or any part of the property and rights of this corporation;

(h) To do all other acts and things as are incidental or conducive to the attainment of the above objects, and generally in any way to do all such things as shall be calculated directly or indirectly to promote the best interests of the Chinese and other races throughout the Dominion of Canada;

(i) To advocate and secure possible remedies and assist in the enactment of ordinances and laws required to carry out the foregoing by means of bulletins, education or any other method of propaganda that may from time to time be considered advisable.

On two occasions application for incorporation of the league has been made, but both were refused. The latest application was made in August, 1921.

Pres., Jin Yet Noo, 529 Gore Ave., Vancouver, B.C. Sec., Wong Kee Sang, 529 Gore Ave., Vancouver, B.C.

AFFILIATIONS AND MEMBERSHIPS

Included in the group embracing "Non-Trade Union Associations" are 120 organizations, two more than the number recorded in 1933. Divided by classes they are: school teachers, 15; government employees, 56; municipal employees, 6; commercial travellers, 9; all others, 34. In the list of school teachers appears the name of the Canadian Federation of Teachers, a Dominion-wide body with which the eleven associations marked with double asterisks in the accompanying table are affiliated and whose combined membership of 24,000 makes up the membership of the Federation, and indicates a gain of 3,230 as compared with the previous year. The three remaining unaffiliated associations have a combined membership of 1,663 a loss of 245 as compared with 1933, making an aggregate of organized school teachers of 25,663.

Of the 57 associations of government employees 53 comprise civil servants in the employ of the Dominion Government, one is made up of persons who may be employees of Dominion, provincial or municipal authorities, and the remaining three are composed of provincial civil servants. The 41 associations designated with the asterisk are in affiliation with the Civil Service Federation of Canada, whose numerical strength of 12,230 is the combined membership of the affiliated bodies whose names appear in this chapter and the membership of the Federated Association of Letter Carriers and the Canadian Postal Employees (referred to in an earlier chapter) together with 250 associate members or members at large.

The five unaffiliated associations reported a combined membership of 7,498 making a total of reported organized Dominion Government employees of 23,976. Included in this total is the membership of the Amalgamated Civil Servants of Canada (referred to in an earlier chapter).

Two of the three organizations of provincial civil servants reported a combined membership of 4,701.

The membership reported by the six associations of municipal employees was 2,001, and that of the nine commercial travellers associations 31,170, the latter as usual constituting the most numerous group in the non-trade union list. The combined membership of the 34 other associations is 19,723. The aggregate membership of all classes of organizations as given in the appended table is 100,390, after deducting 6,844, the membership of the Amalgamated Civil Servants of Canada, the Federated Association of Letter Carriers, and the Canadian Postal Employees, which is included in Table 1A, Chapter XVIII. This shows an increase in membership of 9,571 as compared with that of 1933. The statement following gives the reported membership of each association, together with the number of affiliations, where the organization has subordinate branches in affiliation.
